- Establish working advisory groups to provide feedback regarding General Election operations
- Evaluate election data gathered during the General Election to strengthen training and develop future voter education activities
- Implement new quality control systems with additional checks and balances to ensure external communications and publications are timely and accurate

III. Election Preparations

For Election Day planning, staffing and resource allocations, EAO staff estimated voter turnout to be approximately 65% of registered voters. These projections were based on data and actual voter turnout statistics from prior General Elections (dating back to 2014), comparing like contests, recent voting trends, changing demographics, and precinct realignments. EAO staff used the projected turnout numbers as a baseline for deploying Vote Center locations, voting equipment, supplies, ballot paper, ePollbooks, and election workers for Early Voting Centers (EVCs) and Election Day Vote Centers (VCs). EAO staff projected voter turnout to be approximately 1.2 million voters with 75% of that turnout during Early Voting and the remaining turnout on Election Day.

The EAO deployed the following equipment to both the EVCs and VCs:

- Hart InterCivic Controller Device used to create a ballot access code that allows the voter to start the voting session of the Duo Ballot Marking Device (defined below)
- Duo—Ballot Marking Device that displays the election contest and questions on a touch screen that allows each voter to select a candidate in each contest or vote for or against a ballot measure in the election. This marking device prints a record of the votes cast to be deposited into the Scan (defined below) for counting
- Duo-Go— A mobile apparatus that allows election workers the ability to take a Duo to a curbside voter, thus allowing a voter to cast a ballot from their automobile
- Scan A ballot tabulation device that images each ballot and collects the votes cast on each ballot for tabulation purposes
- Content Active ePollbook Electronic Pollbook that allows election workers to check-in a voter at the EVC or VC, which assist the election worker in providing the voter with the correct ballot style based on the address where they are registered to vote

A. Early Voting and Election Day Supplies & Signage

EAO staff revised many VC signs and forms for Early Voting and Election Day to improve visibility and legibility as well as to streamline the election reporting for election workers to complete election night reporting³.

The EAO staff introduced a barcode labeling system to pack supply boxes for each VC. This barcoding system was used to track supply boxes and materials delivered to each VC. The barcoding system assisted the EAO staff to confirm and validate that each EVC and VC received the correct equipment and the correct supplies.

As supply boxes were packed at the warehouse, a verification system confirmed that all requested/scheduled supplies were included in each supply bin. The barcoding system and verification system were effective in helping ensure that supply inventories were accurate and EVCs and VCs received all scheduled items.

B. Facilities

The EAO strives to ensure every EVC and VC used in the county meets the following criteria:

- accessible
- adequate space for voting equipment and election workers on Election Day
- adequate parking
- proper electrical capabilities
- availability for election workers to set up on the Monday before Election Day
- available on Election Day from 6:00am until at least 10:00pm
- availability for the equipment to remain securely onsite until pickup

Location Selection

In most cases, the EAO selected locations utilized in previous elections. For this election, several locations were relocated because of unavailability or because of ADA accessibility issues. When a facility is unavailable, EAO staff relocates the VC to another facility only after an ADA assessment is conducted to ensure the new location is compliant and can support the election activities. EAO staff collaborated with Commissioner Court staff, political party representatives, and Precinct Chairs to identify and secure adequate locations that would support and accommodate the projected voter turnout.

The overall location selection process involves the following:

- 1. Identify the quantity of locations needed for the election
- 2. Review the most current list of locations used from last like elections⁴

³ All signage and forms used at VCs are approved by the Texas Secretary of State.

⁴ Locations were used from 2021 and 2020 as a result of the implementation of county wide voting.

- 3. Place locations onto a map to view general coverage
- 4. Layer onto map the voting location areas identified by the nonpartisan Center for Inclusive Democracy to identify areas of greatest need.⁵ This tool evaluates data such as citizen age, registered voters, in-person voters, by mail voters, voter turnout, voter demographic, population with vehicle access and population density, including total registered voters to determine areas that have greatest needs for voting locations.
- 5. Identify the following items necessary to have a location useable in an election
 - a. Availability
 - b. ADA status (Compliant, Non-Compliant Remediable, Non-Compliant Non-Remediable)
 - c. Cost
 - d. Other accessibility (i.e. electricity, parking, restroom access)
- 6. Define locations on the map by their availability and ADA status
 - a. Where locations were unavailable, identify a nearby location that could serve the area.
 - b. Where locations and nearby locations were both unavailable to serve the area, those locations were shared with stakeholders⁶ to assist with asking locations to become available.
- 7. Identify locations within .5 miles of each other to determine if both locations were needed for the area. This is done when there is a surplus of possible locations that could be used to get to the target number of locations identified by EAO as would be needed for the election.
- 8. When location list reached the target number, shared list with stakeholders to review and incorporate feedback to favor historical facilities⁷, ADA-compliant facilities (based on status) and facilities requested by multiple stakeholders.
- 9. After review by stakeholders and considering all stakeholder feedback, locations list was submitted to Department of Justice (DOJ) for review and submitted to Commissioners Court for approval.
- 10. Periodic changes occurred based on new information such as stakeholder requests that could be accommodated, location availability, updated ADA inspections or DOJ comments.

Facility Check List ADA Compliance

As a result of a DOJ settlement agreement regarding accessibility of locations the EAO staff works with DOJ coordinators, subject matter experts and ADA survey coordinators to assess and diagram accessibility remediation for all locations. The diagrams depict entrances and exits, room dimensions, electrical outlets, the proposed positioning of voting equipment, and suggested election worker stations that facilitate traffic flow and privacy. The ADA survey coordinators conducted a site survey⁸ for each of the 782 VCs and deployed remediation where necessary.

C. Election Worker Recruitment, Training and Staffing

Staffing Goals. EAO staff estimated that approximately 6,500 workers would be required for the General Election. The table below provides a breakdown of election worker positions per VC, the total number of workers assigned, and a brief job description for each position.

Staffing Process. The Texas Election Code (TEC) prescribes the process for appointing Election Day judges. Election Day PJs and AJs are nominated by Party Chairs and appointed by the Commissioners Court. Parties submit a list of names of persons in order of preference for each precinct who are eligible to serve as a PJ. The EAO places judges appointed by Commissioners Court into VCs. The EAO staff considers the following criteria when assigning PJs to VCs: (1) where they have previous work history, (2) whether the Precinct Chair of the precinct in which the VC is located is willing to work at the location, and (3) if historical or precinct chair judges are available or unavailable. The EAO consulted with the Parties to coordinate where the Parties' respective PJs would serve in relation to party designated precincts. The EAO encouraged the Parties to submit more names than they initially submitted because, nominated Judges were unable or not willing to work on Election Day. Once the EAO exhausted the names of the Party nominees, EAO staff began placing judges on a first available basis to ensure all locations were staffed with a PJ and AJ. Staffing numbers for clerks vary per VC based on projected voter turnout and averaged between 5-7 clerks for each VC.

Election Worker Training. All election workers, including PJs, AJs and clerks are required to attend a four (4) hour training session in order to work the election.

A new Training Manager revamped the training program and brought on adult educators who were trained as effective elections instructors. The EAO employed over 33 temporary instructors to assist two full-time team instructors to improve materials, recreate a training manual, and conduct training events. The EAO training team revamped the training curriculum to increase the hands-on training aspects to ensure workers could set up and operate the voting machines. The curriculum also provided for more hands-on training with the forms and processes.

New Training Manual

The new Training Manual included a revised color-coded format that identified the sections of the manual for each task to be completed. The manual was provided in a bound format and given to every election worker. A copy of the manual was also made available on the EAO website and can be accessed at the following link:

https://files.harrisvotes.com/harrisvotes/prd/docs/Training/Official Manual 2022 to 2023.pdf

New Class Structure

The EAO training staff deployed a new class format that allowed for greater training efficiencies for the election workers. The trainers addressed broad talking points with the whole group and then separated the election workers into small breakout groups for approximately three hours, where election workers were provided hands-on instruction on equipment, set-up and forms. This structure allowed for a more engaged learning environment.

Training classes began on September 26 and ended on November 7. EAO trainers conducted a total of 74 classes. The following facilities were utilized for training:

Locations & Training Sessions by Commissioner's Precinct

Training classes were held Sunday through Saturday and scheduled morning, afternoon, and evening to accommodate workers' schedules. EAO trainers also conducted reminder training at supply pick-up the Saturday and Sunday before Election Day, where judges could ask last-minute questions and get one-on-one time with EAO instructors. Supplemental hands-on training was provided through EAO instructor support hours at four locations around Harris County.

The training included troubleshooting scenarios and situations that election workers were likely to encounter on Election Day and focused primarily on set-up and processing voters. All PJs, AJs and clerks were also provided hands-on training on the election forms.

*Average Attendance Checked in and Walk-In; Adjusted for Number of Trainings, Minimum of 4

The EAO training team received multiple complimentary communications from election workers. From this correspondence emerged three main themes:

a. The new manual demonstrates informed changes based on feedback and research:

"Several of my friends are also PJs and the other day we talked about the manual over coffee. We are all very impressed. Your hard work is definitely paying off, it seems as though we are closer to a smoother election process. Thank you."

"This is the best training class I have ever attended. The new election manual is amazing! I cannot brag on the improvements enough."

b. The training team is effective and professional:

"They were professional, informative and responsive to all of our questions, input and concerns. I can clearly say this was the best election training class I have ever taken with Harris County."

c. The training program has become more engaging and interactive:

"Much better with delivery focused on key aspects of the process – including hands-on with the set-up, operation and tear-down of the voting equipment. Great to have witnessed the improvements to the equipment and process that address some of the feedback some of us provided over the past few elections. Good to know HC EA staff were listening and took corrective action"

"I have to admit, I hate change. I didn't know what to expect from the new Election Admin. So far, I am impressed."

Proposed Improvements to Training Curriculum

To continue improvements to the training process, the EAO will develop and deploy the following activities for future elections:

- Establish working advisory groups to provide feedback regarding training operations
- Evaluate Election Data gathered during the General Election to strengthen training and develop future voter education activities
- Implement an Election Worker Evaluation system. In order to increase election worker efficiencies, the training staff will implement a training and evaluation process to evaluate each prospective election worker's capability to perform the required activities for any given election

This performance evaluation will include: (1) attending a training class specific to the worker's assigned tasks, (2) pass a written test to demonstrate sufficient knowledge to meet the standards for executing a smooth election, and (3) successfully complete Election Day simulation exercises, demonstrating the ability to complete the tasks required for the position. If a prospective election worker is unable to meet the three requirements, he/she could be disqualified and not recommended for serving during Early Voting or Election Day.

The PJs will be required to demonstrate the ability to operate all voting equipment, including opening and closing on Election Day and the ability to complete critical election VC documents.

IV. Early Voting Operations

Early Voting operations includes Ballot by Mail and In-person voting at EVCs. The EAO located its Early Voting operations to NRG Arena on September 1, 2022. NRG served as and EVC and as Central Count for the General Election. The EAO deployed 99 EVCs from October 24 through November 4. The 99 EVCs were strategically placed throughout the four Commissioner Court precincts to accommodate county-wide voting. As projected, a higher percentage of voters, by almost double the amount, voted early during Early Voting than on Election Day.

A. Ballot by Mail Voting

All Mail Ballots returned by voters were delivered to the NRG Arena and were reviewed and processed by the Signature Verification Committee¹⁰ (SVC) that convened on October 19. The SVC reviewed each returned ballot envelope (carrier envelope) to ensure the signature and voter ID provided by the voter on the carrier envelope matched the voter's profile. Once signatures were approved and ID numbers validated, the SVC authorized the carrier envelopes to be prepared for opening and the ballots were prepared for counting.

The Early Voting Ballot Board¹¹ (EVBB) convened on October 26 to open ballots and prepare for counting. If any ballots were placed under review status by the SVC because they could not validate a signature or the voter did not provide a matching ID number, the EVBB either accepted or rejected the ballot. If the voter provided the correct information, the EVBB would approve the ballot for counting.

As part of the process, if a voter did not provide the correct voter ID on the carrier envelope, the carrier envelope was returned to the voter for correction as required by Senate Bill 1. (These Mail Ballots are referred to as E3s.) If the Mail Ballot was received too late to return to the voter, the voter was contacted and given an opportunity to cure the Mail Ballot by coming to the Central Count location to provide the information or curing by providing their information via the Texas Secretary of State website. (These types of Mail Ballots are referred to as E7s.) If the voter did not return the carrier envelope with the correct information or did not cure the Mail Ballot with the necessary information the E3s and E7s were ultimately rejected by the EVBB.

The Central Count Ballot Board¹² (Ballot Board) convened on Saturday, November 5, the day after Early Voting ended. Once the Ballot Board convened, the EAO began processing Early Voting results for reporting on Election Night.

The EAO processed over 80,000 Mail Ballot applications as reflected in the table below.

1. Mail Ballot Problems Encountered

The EAO contracted with Runbeck Services to mail ballots to over 80,000 voters. Based on ballot size and number of pages, Runbeck determined that it could not process the ballot insertion for the 4-page 11x17 ballot. As a result of this discovery, Runbeck and the EAO agreed to subcontract the mail ballot work out to a second vendor (K&H) to prepare and mail the ballots.

During the mail ballot period, the EAO received reports that voters were not receiving Mail Ballots and that voters were being charged extra postage because of the size of the carrier envelope. The EAO was able to utilize K&H's mail ballot tracking system to see ballots moving through the United States Postal Service (USPS) system. The EAO staff was able to provide USPS with zip code data to evaluate delivery patterns within Harris County and to identify where Mail Ballots may not have been moving through the USPS system. The EAO spoke with USPS staff on a weekly basis about Mail Ballot delivery, return scanning, and postage cost.

¹² Each Political Party appointed 25 Members to the Ballot Board.

2. Process Improvement Actions:

- The EAO will continue conversations with the USPS to identify postal system practices that might have caused delivery problems with Mail Ballots
- The EAO will be able to forecast the ballot size specifications for future elections
- The EAO will continue Agilis and Vote-Tec system reviews to streamline carrier imaging and processing to allow for more efficient processing by the SVC

B. In-Person Early Voting Operations

As part of Early Voting, the EAO delivers voting equipment and materials to each EVC during the week and weekend before Early Voting begins. Early Voting set-up proceeded according to plan. Ninety-Eight EVCs were set up and prepared to operate the Sunday before Early Voting began on Monday, October 24. The final location completed setting up early on Monday morning in time for the start of Early Voting.

- 1. Early Voting Center Equipment. Each EVC was supplied with an allocation of voting equipment based on population density and projected turnout in each Commissioner Precinct. Each location received an allotment of (1) ePollbooks (2) Controllers, (3) Duo Ballot Marking Devices (4) Scanners and (5) Duo Go.
- 2. Early Voting Center Staffing. EVCs were staffed with a PJ and an AJ (consisting of alternate party affiliation) and clerks were assigned in two shifts of temporary election workers. See Early Voting Staffing 1122 Attachment that identifies the number of workers assigned to each location. 1,591 EVC workers were trained and deployed to work during Early Voting. Approximately 30% of these individuals also worked on Election Day.

3. Early Voting Turnout.

Early Voting Total Votes Cast	767,162	693,122
Total Registered Voters	2,307,654	2,543,162

4. Wait Time Reporter. Election workers were instructed to submit wait times to the online wait time application. The wait times listed on the interactive map on HarrisVotes.com is intended to provide real-time wait times for each EVC.

5. Early Voting Equipment Operations.

During Early Voting, EVCs experienced common problems associated with staffing, technical support, equipment operations and wait time updates. ¹⁴ The technical problems were related to Controller Not Found issues, which had a direct impact on Duos. EAO technicians were dispatched throughout the Early Voting period to address technical issues encountered and to ensure voting continued throughout the Early Voting period. The EVCs also experienced paper ballot jams when the voter was feeding the blank paper into the Duo. On certain occasions, a voter's ballot would jam at the Duo and would have to be spoiled and reprinted. On certain occasions, the ballot would not scan into the scan. To resolve these types of problems, the PJs were instructed to spoil the ballot¹⁵ and reprint the ballot if the voter had not left the Duo. If the voter had left the Duo and the ballot would not read because it was illegible, the PJ was instructed to reissue a ballot to the voter to allow the voter to cast their ballot at the VC. A voter could also deposit the unreadable ballot into the emergency slot¹⁶, which meant the ballot would be transported to the Ballot Board to be duplicated by the Ballot Board and counted, if possible. If the ballot is re-voted by the Voter and read through the scan, then the voter is assured that the ballot was counted; if the ballot was inserted into the emergency slot in an unreadable status, the voter is not assured that the ballot will be counted.

V. Election Day Operations and Performance

Overall, Election Day was a success with 782 VCs assigned, set-up and operational. Over 1 million voters turning out to vote for the entire election. The EAO projected 1.2 million voters. The EAO identified and deployed voting machines, VCs and election staff/election workers to support that projection.

- 1. Election Day Vote Center Equipment. Each VC was supplied with an allocation of voting equipment based on population density and projected turnout in each Commissioner Precinct. Each location received an allotment of (1) ePollbooks (2) Controllers (3) Duo Ballot Marking Devices (4) Scan and (5) Duo Go.
- 2. Election Day Vote Center Staffing. The EAO's office successfully trained and assigned a PJ and AJ to all 782 Election Day VCs. The nomination and appointment process is similar to the process described in early voting staffing, except that Election Day assignments are governed by TEC Section 32.002. The PJs and AJs are nominated by the Political Party Chairs and submitted to the Commissioners' Court for approval/appointment. The PJs and AJs were assigned according to Party designations until an emergency appointment period, which then allowed the EAO to assign PJs on a first available basis to cover any gaps in appointment. Despite the emergency appointment period, the EAO staff continued to coordinate with the parties to indicate where the parties would like their PJs to serve within a VC. The EAO encouraged the Parties to submit more names than they initially submitted because, nominated Judges were unable or not willing to work on Election Day. Once the EAO exhausted the names of the Party nominees, EAO staff began placing judges on a first available basis to ensure all locations were staffed.

Overall, the EAO trained over 6,024 judges and clerks and deployed 5,498 – that is 91.3% who showed up to work.

¹⁵ A ballot is spoiled when it is damaged by the printer, re-voted by the voter or unreadable by the Scan because of illegibility.

3. Election Day Voter Turnout.

Total Registered Voters	2,307,654	2,543,162

4. Wait Time Reporter. During Election Day, students are dispatched to each VC as Electronic Support Specialists (ESS). Their primary function is to monitor the wait times and provide periodic updates of the quantity of people in line. This process provides real time wait times for each VC.

A. Facilities and Vote Center Opening

As part of the Election Day set up process for Election Day delivery, the EAO delivers voting equipment and materials to each VC the week and weekend before Election Day. The November 8, Monday setup for Election Day voting did not proceed according to plan for 170 VCs because of the celebratory World Series Parade. Several ISD's gave their staff the Monday off to participate in the parade. As a result, the PJs at those locations had to reschedule set up for Monday evening/night as opposed to Monday morning and for some locations set up occurred on Tuesday morning. This resulted in reports from several election judges that they were delayed in opening at 7:00am due to limited time to setup on Election Day.

B. Election Day Support

1. Election Help Desk. The EAO operates a 50 person Help Desk "Call Center" to receive calls from election workers regarding any manner of support. The Help Desk contacts tech rovers and area representatives when an issue could not be resolved over the phone. The Help Desk included members of the election worker training team, temporary election workers, technical experts and other EAO staff.

As in past elections, the EAO contracted with a vendor to provide technical support to all Election Day VCs.

2. Technical Support. The EAO deployed 160 election technicians (Tier 1) to support PJs on Election Day. This created an average of 1 technician to every 5 Vote Center locations. The 5 locations were mapped within a minimal (5-10 mile radius) geographical region to maximize travel time from one VC to the next. The technicians were directed to travel from one VC to the next on a scheduled basis to check-in with the PJ to ensure everything was working properly and to provide the VC with whatever support was needed, including paper supplies.

If a technician encountered a voting system issue that they could not resolve, the issue was escalated to a Tier 2 technician with a greater skill level to resolve the most complex problems. If a component could not be repaired, it would be replaced by the Tier 2 technician.

The EAO Help Desk received over 1,600 logged calls for VC support related to staffing, equipment support, procedural questions, supplies, and paper ballots.

Of the 1,600 calls, 368 calls, (23%) related to ePollbooks, the Duos, Duo-Gos, Controllers and Scans. 128 calls (8%) related to supplies and ballot paper, and 143 (9%) related to election worker procedural questions.

The EAO staff takes all support ticket calls very seriously regardless of the nature of the call and endeavors to remedy the situation either by telephone support or dispatching a technician to support on site. During the election and after the election we review all support logs from the VCs and look for trends. Once we identify an issue that is occurring at multiple locations or across the County, we discuss with the vendor and identify ways to resolve or correct an issue in real time, if possible or to identify if the matter requires a long-term solution.

3. Election Day Challenges. The Common problems reported and encountered on Election Day included VCs not opening on time, technical problems associated with the Controller Not Found, Duo paper ballot jams, ePollbook wait time updates, paper ballot supply at several locations and staffing.

EAO technicians were dispatched throughout Election Day to respond to the support tickets which included assisting PJs in opening VCs, replacing voting equipment, rebooting Controllers, resetting Duo voting equipment, resetting ePollbooks, delivering ballot paper and other supplies.

- a. VC delayed in Opening. There were several VCs that did not open on time due various reasons: (1) PJs Captains Box not delivered which contained the keys to the voting equipment (2 hr. delay), (2) PJ closed the election on the Controller before voting began (1 hr. delay), (3) Election workers quitting or not showing up to work, (4) PJs not able to access the facility at 6:00am (30 min delay).
- b. Ballot Paper Supply. The EAO received reports that several VCs needed ballot paper delivery during the day. An initial media report indicated that at least 20 VCs ran out of paper.
- c. ePollbook wait time updates. During the early part of Election Day, the ePollbook AWS server lost replication which prevented the wait time tool from updating the website, prevented the supply team from seeing real-time check in and disabled the sample ballot look up feature. This had a direct impact on the ability to see how many voters were being checked-in and what the wait times were at any VC. The vendor was able to reestablish replication, which brought the wait time tool and sample ballot back on line and allowed supply to reengage communications at the VCs.

During the post-election assessment, EAO staff reviewed call logs and support tickets to gain an understanding of what occurred on Election Day. The EAO's recruiting and training staff conducted a calling assessment to all PJs and AJs. Although EOA staff was able to speak to most of the PJs and AJs, many of them provided confusing answers and some declined to speak after reportedly being advised not to do so by the Harris County Republican Party.

The EAO's call logs reflect that the Help Desk received calls from 46 VCs (5.9%) requesting additional paper on Election Day. This does not indicate that these VCs ran out of paper and had turn voters away as a result - only that they required additional paper at some point on Election Day.

The EAO's analysis from the PJ and AJ calls is largely inconclusive due to the fact that several of the PJs and AJs from the same VCs gave conflicting reports on whether the VC actually ran out of paper, and that many responses did not explain whether the VCs had to turn voters away. According to PJ calls, several VCs (68) reported running out of their initial allotment of paper, although most of them (61) received additional deliveries, according to their respective PJs. In addition, 22 AJs for these 68 VCs gave conflicting reports, stating that they did not run out of paper at all. 64 AJs reported that they ran out of their initial allotment of paper, and 58 of those judges reported receiving paper deliveries. Again, 20 of the PJs for the same VCs reported that they did not run out of paper at all.

Our investigation has not yet revealed how many of these VCs had to turn voters away due to a paper shortage. Media reports claimed that a total of 24 VCs (3.1%) ran out of paper and had to turn voters away. However, the judges at the VCs indicated that they did receive supplemental paper deliveries, and two of these PJs from these VCs reported they did not run out of paper at all.

Other supplies such as SORs, signs, and provisional ballot envelopes were also delivered throughout the day.

Overall, while the initial media reports suggested a problem more extensive than what the EAO has been able to confirm, the EAO will continue reviewing the processes and will implement systems to ensure this type of challenge is never encountered in the future.

Poll Closing Analysis

Extended Polling Hours

At 6:00pm on Election Night, the Central Count Tabulation Supervisor was preparing to release Early Voting and Ballot by Mail tabulation results at 7:00pm when a Court Order was entered that required all polling locations to extend operating hours until 8:00pm. Shortly after the Order, EAO staff contacted all locations through the following methods:

- The messaging Console via the ePollbook console The EAO advised every VC about the Order to stay open one additional hour;
- The EAO emailed every PJ and AJ with the details of the Order and instructed all judges that they would need to vote every voter who arrived after 7:00pm with a Provisional Ballot;
- The EAO staff called as many judges as they could reach within the limited time, for a total of 445 calls made; and

• The EAO dispatched staff to deliver provisional balloting materials, SORs and additional ballot paper.

This extension heavily burdened the PJs, AJs, clerks, and EAO staff. As a result of the Order, all voters who entered the line after 7:00pm were required to vote a Provisional Ballot. These Provisional Ballots are referred to as "extended hours" provisional ballots or "#5s". The Order extending hours was later suspended by the Texas Supreme Court, although that Texas Supreme Court Order came after 8:00pm and thus only prevented voters who were in line at that time, but had not yet voted from casting a ballot.

The #5 Provisional Ballots were segregated from the regular Provisional Ballots and per order of the Texas Supreme Court were counted in a segregated manner and their totals were added in during the final Canvas. The Canvas includes a separate report of "extended hours" Provisional Ballots that were cast and counted as a result of the extended voting hours as ordered by the Texas Supreme Court.

Election Night Vote Center Election Returns

The EAO deployed its election returns County driver program for the General Election. As part of the program, the EA advised all PJs that it was their responsibility to deliver the VC election returns to Central Count. The EAO offered a County driver to any PJ that did not want to drive their election returns into Central Count. The PJs were not required to accept a driver, however, they had to notify the EAO staff prior to Election Day, so that staff could ensure the election returns would be timely received at Central Count. The Harris County Republican Party advised that all of their PJs would not participate in the County driver program and would deliver their respective election returns to Central Count, although several of their PJs requested and received a driver.

The EAO staff recruited law enforcement, county employees, PJs, AJs and clerks to deliver election returns to Central Count on Election night. As a result of planning and recruiting, 430 judges delivered their election returns to NRG, and the remainder were transported by the County driving program.

Central Count received the first Election Day returns from the VCs at 8:45pm on election night. The last election returns were received at 3:30am. Eighty-one VCs did not return all the items, i.e., the hard-shell ballot boxes (all ballot bags were returned) and a few different election forms. The EAO deployed Hotshot drivers out the next day to retrieve the items that were left in the equipment cart at the various VCs or in the room with the equipment cart.

VI. Election Night Tabulation and Post-Election Activities

The EAO's goals on election night was to count votes accurately and quickly, and to publish the unofficial preliminary election results in a clear, accurate, and timely manner throughout the tabulation process.

The EAO established the following processes for communicating with the public and the media: (1) it operated a media observation section to allow all reporters to observe the election night tabulation process (2) it provided hard copies of each summary report to the media and any Poll watcher waiting to see the results (3) it displayed the election results on the website using an election night reporting tool and (4) its Public Information Officer and the Administrator interacted with the media throughout the tabulation process.

Preliminary Reconciliation Form

At the completion of tabulating Election Day returns, the Ballot Board and the EAO published the 1st Preliminary Election Reconciliation – Unofficial Totals form (dated 11/10/22), which provides a snap-shot of election records at the end of election night. This is an early unofficial report of the number of voters and the number of ballots tallied for the November 8, election. However, this report is not an accurate reflection of voter turnout and ballots counted because it does not include information related to the number of ballots the Board is still processing related to emergency slot ballots, timely received Mail Ballots in the possession of the Ballot Board, Mail Ballots that are still in the USPS system that are postmarked on Election Day and that can arrive by 5:00pm the next day.¹⁷ Additionally, the Preliminary Election Reconciliation form does not take into account the number of Limited Ballot Voters, a complete reconciliation of the voters who checked in on the ePollbook system, the list of omitted voters, and a complete reconciliation of Mail Ballots received, accepted and rejected.

The day after election night, EAO staff and the Central Count Ballot Board continued processing election returns, including Provisional Ballots, Mail Ballots¹⁸ and emergency slot ballots that were received on Election Day. At the end of the 24-hour tabulation period, the EAO sought an extension of the 24-hour tabulation period in order to process the remaining Mail Ballots that were received on Election Day. The District Court issued an Order to extend the 24-hour period for a day. The Ballot Board completed processing the mail ballots the next day.

Election Reconciliation - Official Totals Form

The Ballot Board and Voter Registrar continued processing Provisional Ballots until November 18¹⁹, after which the Ballot Board and the EAO published the second reconciliation form dated November 18, 2022 - Election Reconciliation Form - Official Totals. Again, this is a snapshot in time of the reconciliation process; the complete Canvass is required to be submit to the Secretary of State no later than November 22, 2022²⁰. Section 6 of the November 18 Reconciliation Form included miscalculations between the number of Mail Ballots mailed out compared to the number of ballots counted in Section 3, Box K.

After the Ballot Board completed its activities on November 18, 2022, the EAO recognized the error, but did not try to reconvene the Ballot Board because the complete canvass would be submitted to the Secretary of State by November 22, 2022.

The EAO has communicated Election results to the Secretary of State in the Harris County Canvass Reconciliation Comparison Report. The EAO does not believe the Reconciliation Form as designed

provides an accurate accounting of voters, ballots and vote tallies because it is not designed to account for all the various counting processes that occur during the Canvass. As an example, the ballot totals do not include Orphan ballots. (An Orphan Ballot is a Mail Ballot that is returned in a voter's Mail Ballot envelope that is missing the 1st page.) In some instances, spouses or voters in the same household mix up their ballot pages, thus creating orphan pages that are counted separately. The Ballot Board counts the votes, but these ballot pages are not reflected in the ballot counted column. Additionally, voters who mail their Mail Ballot carrier envelope back without a ballot inside get credit for voting, but there is no ballot to count, thus the voter to ballot count does not match. In other instances, voters leave the EVC and VC with their ballot in their possession, thus there is a voter history for the voter on the ePollbook or on the Omissions list, but no ballot to count, and voters check in at the Vote Center with no intention of casting a ballot, but simply want credit for voting.

These type of voting patterns are not captured on the Reconciliation Form, so the form very seldom reconciles to an accurate voter to ballot ratio.

After completing the Canvass, the EAO staff immediately turned to the Partial Manual Count.

Partial Manual Count

After each election, the EAO is required to conduct a Partial Manual Count²¹ ("PMC"), which is a hand count of designated precincts and ballot contests from the Secretary of State. The EAO must begin the PMC no later than 72 hours after Election Day and must complete the count within 21 days of its beginning. Due to Harris County's size and volume of ballots, multiple departments are required to assist in completion of the PMC.

For county wide elections, a minimum of 70 staff members are required on site. These staff members worked on multiple ballot bags in order to complete the PMC in time before the 21-day deadline. The EAO staff was unable to begin the process until Nov 14 due to Veterans Day Holiday and SOS technical difficulties. Over 80 EAO staff participated in the PMC from Nov 14- Dec 1, for 12-hrs per day, totaling approximately 168 hours each (not including the Thanksgiving holiday). The PMC was conducted over the course of 20 days. These employees spent an estimated cumulative total of 8,400 man-hours conducting the PMC.

VII. Proposed EAO Actions

Early assessments suggest that operational systems are in immediate need of upgrades or replacements. Initial discussions are focusing on:

• Communications to and from Vote Centers – there is no real time visibility within any call and response situation from the VC to EAO and no real time visibility to determine whether any solution was provided. A real time ticket and resolution system is needed to close the gap on any requests from a EVC or VC;

- Voting system set-up and operation must be scrutinized with an eye toward simplifying the set-up and operational processes to ensure early morning set-up and opening can be accomplished;
- Additional full-time personnel to manage the many moving parts of this operation is critical. One time funding is not the answer to this situation; sustained and dedicated administrative funding is imperative;
- Resources to adequately cover 782 VCs throughout 1,700 square miles of the county by temporary technical support without the tools to properly manage them is critical;
- Deploy systems and tools to improve the allocation of resources across VCs;
- Deploy voting system software upgrade that eliminates the Controller not found issue experienced by all 782 VCs;
- Review operational solutions with vendor to address paper jams on the Duo and with the Scan;
- Review AWS system solutions with ePollbook vendor to assure redundant systems to prevent system degradation on Election Day;
- Deploy tracking and communications solution to allow for VC visibility on technical issues and supplies distribution with responses to the technical tickets including those created at VCs.

As additional information becomes available, the EAC will continue to make process improvements and recommendations.

MESSAGE FROM HARRIS COUNTY ELECTIONS

It is important for voters to return their mail ballot as soon as possible to ensure that their vote is counted. Voters have three options to return their ballot:

1. RETURN BY MAIL

We recommend mailing your ballot at least 7 days prior to Election Day.

Postage required to return your marked ballot: 1-page requires 1 forever stamp, and 2-4 pages require 2 forever stamps.

2. RETURN IN PERSON TO ELECTIONS OFFICE

Voters can return their ballot in person from 7 a.m. - 7 p.m. on Election Day. Ballots must be delivered to NRG Arena, Hall D, One NRG Parkway, Houston TX 77054. Please note that only the voter may hand deliver their own mail ballot and must have an acceptable form of photo identification.

3. BY COMMON CONTRACT OR CARRIER

A ballot that is mailed or delivered by a common or contract carrier, but does not have a postmark or delivery receipt must be received by the early voting clerk by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day. If the carrier provides a receipt mark indicating a time before 7:00 p.m. on Election Day, it must be received by 5:00 p.m. on the first business day after Election Day.

MESSAGE FROM HARRIS COUNTY ELECTIONS

It is important for voters to return their mail ballot as soon as possible to ensure that their vote is counted. Voters have three options to return their ballot:

1. RETURN BY MAIL

We recommend mailing your ballot at least 7 days prior to Election Day.

Postage required to return your marked ballot: 1-page requires 1 forever stamp, and 2-4 pages require 2 forever stamps.

2. RETURN IN PERSON TO ELECTIONS OFFICE

Voters can return their ballot in person from 7 a.m. - 7 p.m. on Election Day. Ballots must be delivered to NRG Arena, Hall D, One NRG Parkway, Houston TX 77054. Please note that only the voter may hand deliver their own mail ballot and must have an acceptable form of photo identification.

3. BY COMMON CONTRACT OR CARRIER

A ballot that is mailed or delivered by a common or contract carrier, but does not have a postmark or delivery receipt must be received by the early voting clerk by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day. If the carrier provides a receipt mark indicating a time before 7:00 p.m. on Election Day, it must be received by 5:00 p.m. on the first business day after Election Day.

LỜI NHẮN NHỦ TỪ TY BẦU CỬ QUÂN HAT HARRIS

Điều quan trọng đối với các cử tri là phải gửi lại lá phiếu bầu bằng thư càng sớm càng tốt để bảo đảm rằng lá phiếu của quý vị được tính. Các cử tri có ba cách để gửi lại phiếu bầu của họ:

1. GỬI LẠI BẰNG ĐƯỜNG BƯU ĐIỆN

Chúng tôi khuyến khích quý vị nên gửi phiếu bầu của quý vị ít nhất 7 ngày trước Ngày Bầu Cử. Bưu phí cần thiết để gửi lại lá phiếu đã đánh dấu của quý vị: 1-trang yêu cầu 1 forever stamp, và 2-4 trang yêu cầu 2 forever stamps.

2. ĐÍCH THÂN NÔP LAI TAI VĂN PHÒNG BẦU CỬ

Các cử tri có thể đích thân nộp lại lá phiếu của họ từ 7 giờ sáng - 7 giờ tối vào Ngày Bầu Cử. Các phiếu bầu phải được chuyển đến NRG Arena, Sảnh D, One NRG Parkway, Houston TX 77054. Xin lưu ý rằng chỉ có cử tri mới có thể giao lại phiếu bầu bằng thư của chính họ và phải có giấy căn cước có hình được chấp nhận.

3. HÃNG ĐƯA THƯ THÔNG THƯỜNG HOẶC HÃNG ĐƯA THƯ THEO HỢP ĐỒNG

Một phiếu bầu được gửi qua đường bưu điện hoặc được gửi bởi một hãng đưa thư thông thường hoặc theo hợp đồng, nhưng không có dấu bưu điện hoặc biên nhận giao thư phải được nhận bởi nhân viên bầu cử sớm trước 7 giờ tối vào Ngày Bầu Cử. Nếu hãng đưa thư cung cấp một biên lai cho biết thời gian trước 7 giờ tối vào Ngày Bầu Cử, lá phiếu phải được nhận trước 5 giờ chiều vào ngày làm việc đầu tiên sau Ngày Bầu Cử.

Dear Election Officials

Our office has released the following new or revised forms that are attached to this email as a PDF or Word document.

- Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail
- Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Missing or Incorrect Personal Identification Number
- Notice of Rejected Application for Ballot by Mail Required Personal Identification Number Missing from Voter Record
- Information about Returning Your Marked Ballot (Carrier Insert for Regular ABBM voters)
- Information about Returning Your Marked Ballot (Carrier Insert for FPCA voters)
- Signature Sheet for FPCA Voters
- "Dear Voter" Letter (Attached as a Word Document)
 - The SOS will no longer be issuing a "Dear Voter" letter signed by the SOS. We are providing a generic template that early voting clerks can use to issue the letter under their own signature.

These forms are in the process of being posted to our website in our Election Forms Manual. We will be sending out additional emails as more forms are completed and posted to our website.

Thank you for all your hard work getting ready for your upcoming elections.

There are Two Ways to Add the Required Numbers to Your Voter Registration Record

Submit an Updated Voter Registration Application - Enclosed is a Postage Paid Voter Registration Application. Complete the application according to its instructions. Adding both the Driver's License or Personal Identification Card number AND the last 4 digits of your Social Security number to your voter registration record is very helpful to the Early Voting Clerk and will make applying for a Ballot by Mail easier in future elections.

OR

Update Your Information Online - You may update your voter registration record online at www.Texas.gov

To access the voter registration portal via Texas.gov, you must have:

- Your Texas Driver's License or Texas Personal Identification Card
- The audit number located on your Texas Driver's License or Texas Personal Identification Card
- Your Social Security Number
- Your Voter Registration Number (VUID#).

If you do not have a personal identification number associated with your voter registration record, you must add it before you will be allowed to vote by mail. Adding the missing numbers to your voter registration record takes effect immediately, but if you change your address it will take 30 days for the update to take effect from the day the voter registrar receives your new application.

If you have any questions or concerns about making an update to your voter registration record for a missing personal identification number, please contact the Early Voting Clerk's Office at:

NOTIFICACIÓN DE SOLICITUD DE BOLETA POSTAL RECHAZADA

El Número de Identificación Personal Requerido No Está Asociado Con Su Registro de Votante

Su Solicitud de Boleta Postal ha sido recibida y revisada, pero es defectuosa por la razón que se indica a continuación. La nueva ley de Texas exige que el votante dé su Número de Licencia de Conducir de Texas, el Número de su Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas, el Número de su Certificado de Identificación Electoral de Texas o los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social en la Solicitud de Boleta Postal. El número proporcionado debe ser parte del registro del votante para que el votante pueda votar por correo.

Número de Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas, Certificado de Identificación Electoral de Texas o los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social asociado con él.

Hay Dos Maneras de Añadir los Números Requeridos a Su Registro de Registro de Votante

Presentar una Solicitud de Registro de Votantes Actualizada - Se adjunta una Solicitud de Registro de Votantes con franqueo pagado. Complete la solicitud de acuerdo con sus instrucciones. Añadir tanto el Número de la Licencia de Conducir o de la Tarjeta de Identificación Personal como los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social a su registro de votante es muy útil para el Secretario de Votación Adelantada y facilitará la solicitud de una Boleta Postal en elecciones futuras.

Actualice su Información en Línea – Puede actualizar su registro de votantes en línea en www.Texas.gov

Para acceder al portal de registro de votantes a través de Texas.gov, debe tener:

- Su Licencia de Conducir de Texas o su Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas
- El número de auditoría que se encuentra en su Licencia de Conducir de Texas o Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas
- Su Número de Seguro Social
- Su Número de Registro de Votante (VUID#).

Si no tiene un número de identificación personal asociado con su registro de votante, debe añadirlo antes de que se le permita votar por correo. La adición de los números que faltan a su registro de votante surte efecto inmediatamente, pero si cambia su dirección, la actualización tardará 30 días en surtir efecto a partir del día en que el registrador de votantes reciba su nueva solicitud.

INFORMATION ABOUT RETURNING YOUR CARRIER ENVELOPE

Sealing and Signing the Carrier Envelope - Your ballot must be returned in the official Carrier Envelope!

- 1. REQUIRED INFORMATION UNDER SECTION 86.002 OF THE ELECTION CODE: You MUST provide one of the following numbers that is associated with your voter registration record in the appropriate place on the Carrier Envelope: Texas Driver's License, Personal Identification Card or Election Identification Certificate Number issued by the Department of Public Safety. If you have not been issued one of these numbers, you may give the last four digits of your Social Security Number.
- 2. If you have not been issued a Texas Driver's License, Personal Identification Card or Election Identification Certificate Number issued by the Department of Public Safety or a Social Security Number, check the box indicating this fact. The ID that you use for the purpose of fulfilling these identity requirements may be expired if the license or identification is otherwise valid.
- 3. When the Carrier Envelope is sealed, your information will be hidden from view during the mailing process. Your personal identification numbers will reviewed by authorized election officials to determine if the number you provided matches the number on your voter registration record. If the number you provided is incomplete or does not match your voter registration record, you will be notified of this defect and given the opportunity to make any necessary corrections.
- 4. Place your marked ballot inside the Ballot Envelope. Place the sealed Ballot Envelope inside the Carrier Envelope. Seal any and all glue strips on your Carrier Envelope before signing across the sealed flap.
- 5. Sign your name next to the large "X" on the Carrier Envelope. If you cannot sign your name, you must have a person witness your mark. If you cannot make a mark, the witness must indicate this in the witness section of the Carrier Envelope and complete the applicable section on the back of the Carrier Envelope.
- 6. If a person assists you with reading or marking your ballot, deposits your Carrier Envelope in the mail or delivers your ballot to a common or contract carrier, that person MUST sign the written Oath of Assistance that is part of the certificate on your Carrier Envelope, and include a printed name, residence address, relationship to you and whether he or she received or accepted any form of compensation or other benefit from a candidate, campaign, or political committee in exchange for providing assistance. Failure of the assistant to provide this information is a crime unless the person is one of certain close relatives of the voter or physically living in the same dwelling, and may result in your ballot being rejected. The offense is a state jail felony. For additional information on assistance procedures, please see the "Dear Voter" letter included with your balloting materials.

How Do I Return My Marked Ballot to the Early Voting Clerk?

- 1. By Mail through the United States Postal Service;
- 2. By Common or Contract Carrier (e.g., a mail or courier service provided by a private business).

 For more information on this delivery method, see "Special Rules for Delivery by Common and Contract Carriers," below.); OR
- 3. Hand Delivered, in person, by the Voter on Election Day, to the Early Voting Clerk's office.

 You may only hand-deliver your own Carrier Envelope and not the Carrier Envelope for another individual. Hand delivery of a Ballot by Mail may only be made on Election Day, and the Carrier Envelope must be delivered to the Early Voting Clerk's office. You will be asked to present an acceptable form of photo ID listed in Section 63.0101(a) of the Texas Election Code. If you do not possess and cannot reasonably obtain an acceptable form of photo ID, you can execute a Reasonable Impediment Declaration and provide a supporting form of identification listed in Section 63.0101(b) of the Texas Election Code. Also, if you have a Voter Registration Certificate containing the Disability Exemption (E) notation, you may present it. You must sign a signature roster.

The Carrier Envelope may only contain one voter's ballot. However, more than one Carrier Envelope may be placed together in another envelope for mailing purposes if the additional Carrier Envelope(s) belong(s) to a person(s) registered to vote at the same address (§ 86.006(b), Texas Election Code). A Carrier Envelope may not be collected and stored at another location for subsequent delivery to the Early Voting Clerk. It is a criminal offense for someone to knowingly possesses an official ballot or official Carrier Envelope provided under this Code of another individual without completing the assistant portion of the Carrier Envelope, unless the person is one of certain close relatives of the voter, physically living in the same dwelling, an Early Voting Clerk or Deputy Early Voting Clerk, or a U.S. Postal service or other delivery service employee working in the normal course of his or her job. It is also a criminal offense to be compensated for depositing Carrier Envelopes in the mail or with a common or contract carrier. (§ 86.0052, Texas Election Code). IF YOUR BALLOT IS RETURNED BY AN UNAUTHORIZED METHOD, IT WILL NOT BE COUNTED.

What is the Deadline to Return my Ballot by Mail?

A ballot that is mailed or delivered by common or contract carrier but does not have a postmark or delivery receipt must be received by the Early Voting Clerk no later than 7:00 p.m. on Election Day.

A ballot that is mailed or delivered by mail or common or contract carrier from within the United States and is postmarked or accompanied by a delivery receipt showing the voter submitted the ballot for delivery by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day must be received no later than 5:00 p.m. on the next business day after Election Day.

A ballot that is hand delivered can only be delivered on Election Day and must be received by the Early Voting Clerk no later than 7:00 p.m. on Election Day.

A ballot that is mailed from overseas and is postmarked or accompanied by a delivery receipt showing the voter submitted the ballot for delivery by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day must arrive no later than the 5th day after Election Day (or the next business day after the 5th day after Election Day, if the 5th day falls on a weekend or holiday).

SPECIAL RULES FOR DELIVERY BY COMMON AND CONTRACT CARRIERS (§§ 81.005 and 86.006, Texas Election Code)

- 1. If you use a common or contract carrier to return your ballot, the carrier must be a bona fide, for profit business whose primary service is transporting or delivering items for compensation.
- 2. If you return your Carrier Envelope by common or contract carrier, your Carrier Envelope must be accompanied by a delivery receipt when delivered to the Early Voting Clerk. The receipt must indicate the name and address of the person who delivered the Carrier Envelope to the common or contract carrier, and the date, hour, and address where the Carrier Envelope was received by the common or contract carrier.
- 3. Your ballot will not be counted if it is picked up by a common or contract carrier at an office of a political party or candidate in the election, office for a specific-purpose or general purpose political committee involved in the election, an entity that requested the election be held (unless the delivery is a forwarding to the Early Voting Clerk), or a candidate's house unless the address of the candidate is your address.

If you have any questions about returning your Carrier Envelope, please contact the Early Voting Clerk's o	ffice at

If you feel that your voting rights have been violated or abused, you may report these incidents to the Secretary of State toll-free at 1-800-252-VOTE(8683) or elections@sos.texas.gov

INFORMACIÓN SOBRE LA DEVOLUCIÓN DE SU SOBRE DE ENVÍO

Cómo Sellar y Firmar el Sobre de Envío - ¡Su boleta debe ser devuelta en el Sobre de Envío oficial!

- 1.Información Requerida Según la Sección 86.002 del Código Electoral: Usted DEBE proporcionar uno de los siguientes números que está asociado con su registro de votante en el lugar apropiado en el Sobre de Envío: Licencia de Conducir de Texas, Tarjeta de Identificación Personal o Número de Certificado de Identificación Electoral emitido por el Departamento de Seguridad Pública. Si no se le ha emitido uno de estos números, puede dar los últimos cuatro dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social.
- 2.Si no se le ha emitido una Licencia de Conducir de Texas, una Tarjeta de Identificación Personal o un Número de Certificado de Identificación Electoral emitido por el Departamento de Seguridad Pública o un Número de Seguro Social, marque la casilla que indica este hecho. El documento de identidad que utilice para cumplir con estos requisitos de identidad puede estar caducado si la licencia o identificación es válida de otra manera.
- 3.Cuando el Sobre de Envío esté cerrado, su información quedará oculta durante el proceso de envío. Sus números de identificación personal serán revisados por funcionarios electorales autorizados para determinar si el número que ha proporcionado coincide con el de su registro de votante. Si el número que ha proporcionado está incompleto o no coincide con su registro de votante, se le notificará de este defecto y se le dará la oportunidad de hacer las correcciones necesarias.
- 4. Coloque su boleta marcada dentro del Sobre de Boleta. Coloque el Sobre de Boleta sellada dentro del Sobre de Envío. Selle todas las tiras de pegamento de su Sobre de Envío antes de firmar sobre la solapa sellada.
- 5. Firme su nombre junto a la "X" grande del Sobre de Envío. Si usted no puede firmar su nombre, debe tener a una persona que atestigüe su marca. Si no puede hacer una marca, el testigo debe indicarlo en la sección de testigos del Sobre de Envío y completar la sección correspondiente en el reverso del Sobre de Envío.
- 6. Si una persona le ayuda a leer o marcar su boleta o deposita su Sobre de Envío en el correo o se lo entrega a un transportista común o contratado, dicha persona DEBE firmar el Juramento de Asistencia por escrito que forma parte del certificado en su Sobre de Envío, e incluir un nombre en letra de molde, la dirección de residencia, la relación con usted y si recibió o aceptó algún tipo de compensación u otro beneficio de un candidato, campaña o comité político a cambio de prestar asistencia. El hecho de que el asistente no proporcione esta información es un delito, a menos que la persona sea uno de ciertos parientes cercanos del votante que viva físicamente en la misma vivienda, y puede resultar en que su boleta sea rechazada. El delito es un crimen de cárcel estatal. Para obtener información adicional sobre los procedimientos para asistentes, consulte la carta de "Estimado Votante" incluida con sus materiales de votación.

¿Cómo Devuelvo Mi Boleta Marcada al Secretario de Votación Adelantada?

- 1. Por correo a través del Servicio Postal de los Estados Unidos;
- 2. Por Medio de un Transportista Común o Contratado (por ejemplo, un servicio de correo o mensajería proporcionado por una empresa privada. Para obtener más información sobre este método de envío, consulte las "Normas Especiales Para La Entrega Por Parte De Los Transportistas Comunes y Contractuales" a continuación); O
- 3. Entregado en mano, en persona, por el votante el Día de las Elecciones, en la oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada.

 Sólo puede entregar en mano su propio Sobre de Envío y no el Sobre de Envío de otra persona. La entrega en mano de una Boleta por Correo sólo puede hacerse el Día de las Elecciones, y el Sobre de Envío debe entregarse en la oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada. Se le pedirá que presente una forma aprobada de identificación con fotografía enumerada en la Sección 63.0101(a) del Código Electoral de Texas. Si no posee y no puede razonablemente obtener una forma aprobada de identificación con fotografía, el votante puede ejecutar una Declaración de Impedimento Razonable y proporcionar una forma de identificación adicional enumerada en la Sección 63.0101(b) del Código Electoral de Texas. Además, si tiene un Certificado de Registro Electoral que contiene la anotación de Exención por Discapacidad (E), puede presentarlo. Debe firmar una lista de firmas.

El Sobre de Envío sólo puede contener la boleta de un votante. Sin embargo, se puede colocar más de un Sobre de Envío juntos en otro sobre con fines de envío si los Sobres de Envío adicionales pertenecen a una o varias personas registradas para votar en la misma dirección (§ 86.006(b), Código Electoral de Texas). Un Sobre de Envío no puede ser recolectado y almacenado en otro lugar para su posterior entrega al Secretario de Votación Adelantada. Es un delito penal que una persona posea a sabiendas una boleta oficial o un Sobre de Envío oficial provisto de conformidad con este código de otro individuo sin completar la porción del asistente del Sobre de Envío, a menos que la persona sea uno de ciertos parientes cercanos del votante, que viva físicamente en la misma vivienda, un Secretario de Votación Adelantada o el Secretario de Votación Adelantada Suplente, o un empleado del Servicio Postal de los Estados Unidos u otro empleado de servicio de entrega trabajando en el curso normal de su trabajo. También es un delito ser compensado por depositar Sobres de Envío que contengan boletas votadas por otras personas (§ 86.0052, Código Electoral de Texas). SI SU BOLETA ES DEVUELTA POR UN MÉTODO NO AUTORIZADO, NO SE CONTARÁ.

Una boleta que es enviada por correo o entregada por medio de un transportista común o contratado pero que no tenga un matasellos o un recibo de entrega debe ser recibida por el Secretario de Votación Adelantada a más tardar a las 7:00 p.m. el Día de las Elecciones.

Una boleta que es enviada por correo o entregada por medio de un transportista común o contratado dentro de los Estados Unidos que tenga un matasellos o que esté acompañada por un recibo de entrega que indique que el votante envió la boleta para su entrega a más tardar a las 7:00 p.m. el Día de las Elecciones debe ser recibida a más tardar a las 5:00 p.m. del día hábil siguiente al Día de las Elecciones. Una boleta entregada en mano debe ser recibida por el Secretario de Votación Adelantada a más tardar a las 7:00 p.m. el Día de las Elecciones.

Una boleta que es enviada por correo desde el extranjero que tenga un matasellos o que esté acompañada por un recibo de entrega que indique que el votante envió la boleta para su entrega a más tardar a las 7:00 p.m. el Día de las Elecciones debe llegar a más tardar del 5º día siguiente al Día de las Elecciones, si dicho 5º día es un día de fin de semana o un día festivo).

NORMAS ESPECIALES PARA LA ENTREGA POR PARTE DE LOS TRANSPORTISTAS COMUNES Y CONTRACTUALES (§§ 81.005 y 86.006, Código Electoral de Texas)

- 1. Si utiliza un transportista común o contratado para enviar su boleta, el transportista debe ser una empresa de buena fe y con ánimo de lucro cuyo servicio principal sea el transporte o la entrega de artículos a cambio de una remuneración.
- 2. Si devuelve el Sobre de Envío por medio de un transportista común o contratado, su Sobre de Envío debe ir acompañado de un recibo de entrega cuando se le entregue al Secretario de Votación Adelantada. El recibo debe indicar el nombre y la dirección de la persona que entregó el Sobre de Envío al transportista común o contratado, así como la fecha, la hora y la dirección en la que el transportista común o contratado recibió el Sobre de Envío.
- 3. Su boleta no se contará si es recogida por un transportista común o contratado en la oficina de un partido político o de un candidato, en la oficina de un comité político con propósitos específicos o generales que participe en la elección, una entidad que haya solicitado celebrar la elección (a menos que la entrega sea un reenvío al Secretario de Votación Adelantada), o el hogar de un candidato, a menos que la dirección del candidato sea también la dirección del votante.

Dear Voter:

Thank you for choosing to participate in this election by voting by mail. When you vote by mail, you may take the following steps to protect your ballot and your vote.

1. Know your rights as a voter and be careful about assistance: You have the right to vote for the candidates of your choice. No one should help you with your ballot, unless you cannot read the language written on the ballot or unless you have a disability that makes you unable to write or to see. If one of these conditions applies to you, we recommend that you ask a family member or trusted friend for assistance with your ballot.

Your vote is secret. It is a crime for that person to reveal how or for whom you voted. The person assisting you must mark your ballot according to your instruction and cannot suggest how you should vote. The assistant must place his or her name, address, and signature on the carrier envelope. Before your ballot is counted, the signature on your mail-in ballot application will be compared with the signature on your carrier envelope to verify that both signatures were executed by the same person, unless signed by a witness.

If anyone attempts to pressure or intimidate you, we urge you to report this to our office, your district attorney, or the Secretary of State's office at 1-800-252-VOTE (8683).

- 2. Mail your own ballot: If you can't mail your own ballot, give your ballot to a family member or trusted friend to mail for you. Do not accept offers from strangers to mail your ballot. For elections in which the ballot is mailed by your county, you may track the location and status of your mail ballot by visiting the Secretary of State's website at www.votetexas.gov and select 'Track My Ballot.' In order to view this information, you will need to provide the last four digits of your Social Security number and your driver's license number or personal identification card number issued by the Department of Public Safety.
- 3. Don't wait until the last minute: It takes time for the Post Office to deliver your ballot. Unless an exception applies, a ballot postmarked by Election Day (Tuesday, March 1, 2022) must be received by the early voting clerk no later than 5:00 pm on Thursday, March 3, 2022. If there is no postmark, the early voting clerk must receive these ballots by 7:00 pm on Election Day. Please see the insert included with your balloting materials for other deadlines regarding military or overseas voters who submitted a Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) or voters who are overseas and submitted an Application for Ballot by Mail (ABBM).

NOTE: If you received ballots and balloting materials from more than one political subdivision, please be very sure to check the name of the election on the top of the ballot before you seal it in the ballot secrecy envelope, and match it to the name of the election that appears on the bottom, right side of the back of the carrier envelope, to make sure that you are returning each ballot in the correct carrier envelope for that ballot. This will ensure that each ballot is delivered to the proper early voting clerk. DO NOT put more than one ballot in the carrier envelope.

Early voting in person begins February 14, 2022 and continues through February 25, 2022. Election Day is March 1, 2022. You may contact your county election office for the locations and hours of operation for your early voting sites. If you change your mind about voting by mail and prefer to vote in person during the early voting period or on Election Day, you must take your mail ballot with you and cancel it at the polling place.

Sincerely,

County Election Official

Estimado votante:

Gracias por haber elegido participar en esta elección votando por correo. Cuando vote por correo, puede tomar las siguientes medidas para proteger su boleta y su voto.

1. Conozca sus derechos como votante y tenga cuidado con la asistencia: Tienes derecho a votar por los candidatos de su elección. Nadie debe ayudarle con su boleta, a menos que no pueda leer el idioma escrito en la boleta o que tenga una discapacidad que le impida escribir o ver. Si una de estas condiciones se aplica a usted, le recomendamos que pida ayuda con su boleta a un familiar o a un amigo de confianza.

Su voto es secreto. Es un delito que esa persona revele cómo o por quién ha votado. La persona que le asiste debe marcar su boleta según sus instrucciones y no puede sugerirle cómo debe votar. El asistente debe colocar su nombre, dirección y firma en el sobre de envío. Antes de que se cuente su boleta, la firma en su solicitud de boleta postal se comparará con la firma en su sobre de envío para verificar que ambas firmas fueron ejecutadas por la misma persona, a menos que hayan sido firmadas por un testigo.

Si alguien intenta presionarle o intimidarle, le instamos a que lo comunique a la oficina electoral de su condado, a su fiscal de distrito o la oficina de la Secretaria Del Estado al 1-800-252-VOTE (8683).

- 2. Envié su propia boleta: Si no puede enviar su propia boleta por correo, entréguesela a un familiar o amigo de confianza para que la envíe por correo por ti. No acepte ofertas de extraños para enviar su boleta por correo. Para las elecciones en las que la boleta es enviada por correo por su condado, puede rastrear la ubicación y el estado de su boleta postal visitando el sitio web del Secretario de Estado en www.votetexas.gov y seleccionando 'Track My Ballot.' Para ver esta información, tendrá que proporcionar los últimos cuatro dígitos de su número de Seguro Social y el número de su licencia de conducir o de su tarjeta de identificación personal emitida por el Departamento de Seguridad Pública.
- 3. No esperes hasta el último minuto: La Oficina de Correos demora en entregar su boleta. A menos que se aplique una excepción, una boleta matasellada antes del Día de las Elecciones (martes, 1 de marzo de 2022) debe ser recibida por el secretario de votación adelantada a más tardar a las 5:00 pm del jueves, 3 de marzo de 2022. Si no hay matasellos, el secretario de votación adelantada debe recibir estas boletas a más tardar a las 7:00 pm el Día de las Elecciones. Por favor, vea el inserto incluido con sus materiales de votación para otras fechas límite con respecto a los votantes militares o en el extranjero que presentaron una Solicitud de Tarjeta Postal Federal (FPCA por sus siglas en inglés) o los votantes que están en el extranjero y presentaron una Solicitud de Boleta Postal (ABBM por sus siglas en inglés).

NOTA: Si recibió boletas y materiales de votación de más de una subdivisión política, asegúrese de verificar el nombre de la elección que figura en la parte superior de la boleta antes de sellarla en el sobre secreto, y de que coincida con el nombre de la elección que aparece en la parte inferior derecha del reverso del sobre de envío, para asegurarse de que está devolviendo cada boleta en el sobre de envío correcto para esa boleta. Esto asegurará que cada boleta se entregue al secretario de votación adelantada apropiado. NO ponga más de una boleta en el sobre de envío.

La votación adelantada en persona comienza el 14 de febrero de 2022 y continúa hasta el 25 de febrero de 2022. El Día de las Elecciones es el 1 de marzo de 2022. Puede comunicarse con la oficina electoral de su condado para conocer los lugares y el horario de operación de sus sitios de votación adelantada. Si usted cambia de parecer con respecto a la votación por correo y prefiere votar en persona durante el período de votación adelantada o el Día de las Elecciones, debe llevar su boleta postal y cancelarla en el centro de votación.

Atentamente.

INFORMATION ABOUT RETURNING YOUR FPCA CARRIER ENVELOPE

Signing and Sealing the FPCA Carrier Envelope/Returning the Official Election Signature Sheet for an FPCA Voter

NOTE: If you do not use the Official Carrier Envelope to return your marked ballot, you must include the FPCA Signature Sheet in the FPCA Postage-Paid Envelope or other envelope you use to return your ballot.

- 1. REQUIRED INFORMATION UNDER SECTION 86.002 OF THE ELECTION CODE: You MUST provide one of the following numbers that is associated with your voter registration record in the appropriate place on the Carrier Envelope or Signature Sheet: Texas Driver's License, Personal Identification Card or Election Identification Certificate Number issued by the Department of Public Safety. If you have not been issued one of these numbers, you may give the last four digits of your Social Security Number.
- 2. If you have not been issued a Texas Driver's License, Personal Identification Card or Election Identification Certificate Number issued by the Department of Public Safety or a Social Security Number, check the box indicating this fact. The ID that you use for the purpose of fulfilling these identity requirements may be expired if the license or identification is otherwise valid.
- 3. When the Carrier Envelope is sealed, your information will be hidden from view during the mailing process. Your personal identification numbers will reviewed by authorized election officials to determine if the number you provided matches the number on your voter registration record. If the number you provided is incomplete or does not match your voter registration record, you will be notified of this defect and given the opportunity to make any necessary corrections.
- 4. Place your marked ballot inside the Ballot Envelope. Place the sealed Ballot Envelope inside the Carrier Envelope. Seal any and all glue strips on your Carrier Envelope before signing across the sealed flap. If using the Signature Sheet, please wrap it around the envelope used for secrecy.
- 5. Sign your name next to the large "X" on the Carrier Envelope or Signature Sheet. If you cannot sign your name, you must have a person witness your mark. If you cannot make a mark, the witness must indicate this in the witness section of the Carrier Envelope/Signature Sheet and complete the applicable section on the back of the Carrier Envelope or on the Signature Sheet.
- 6. If a person assists you with reading or marking your ballot, deposits your Carrier Envelope/envelope with your marked ballot in the mail or delivers your ballot to a common or contract carrier, that person MUST sign the written Oath of Assistance that is part of the certificate on your Carrier Envelope or Signature Sheet, and include a printed name, residence address, relationship to you and whether he or she received or accepted any form of compensation or other benefit from a candidate, campaign, or political committee in exchange for providing assistance. Failure of the assistant to provide this information is a crime unless the person is one of certain close relatives of the voter or physically living in the same dwelling, and may result in your ballot being rejected. The offense is a state jail felony. For additional information on assistance procedures, please see the "Dear Voter" letter included with your balloting materials.

How Do I Return My Marked Ballot to the Early Voting Clerk?

- 1. By Mail through the United States Postal Service;
- 2. By Common or Contract Carrier (e.g., a mail or courier service provided by a private business).

 For more information on this delivery method, see "Special Rules for Delivery by Common and Contract Carriers," below.); OR
- 3. Hand Delivered, in person, by the Voter on Election Day, to the Early Voting Clerk's office.

You may only hand-deliver your own Carrier Envelope/envelope with your marked ballot and not for another individual. Hand delivery of a Ballot by Mail may only be made on Election Day, and the Carrier Envelope/envelope with a marked ballot must be delivered to the Early Voting Clerk's office. You will be asked to present an acceptable form of photo ID listed in Section 63.0101(a) of the Texas Election Code. If you do not possess and cannot reasonably obtain an acceptable form of photo ID, you can execute a Reasonable Impediment Declaration and provide a supporting form of identification listed in Section 63.0101(b) of the Texas Election Code. Also, if you have a Voter Registration Certificate containing the Disability Exemption (E) notation, you may present it. You must sign a signature roster.

The Carrier Envelope/envelope with a marked ballot may only contain one voter's ballot. However, more than one Carrier Envelope/envelope with a marked ballot may be placed together in another envelope for mailing purposes if the additional envelope(s) belong(s) to a person(s) registered to vote at the same address (§ 86.006(b), Texas Election Code). A Carrier Envelope/envelope with a marked ballot may not be collected and stored at another location for subsequent delivery to the Early Voting Clerk. It is a criminal offense for someone to knowingly possesses an official ballot or official Carrier Envelope provided under this Code of another individual without completing the assistant portion of the Carrier Envelope/Signature Sheet, unless the person is one of certain close relatives of the voter, physically living in the same dwelling, an Early Voting Clerk or Deputy Early Voting Clerk, or a U.S. Postal service or other delivery service employee working in the normal course of his or her job. It is also a criminal offense to be compensated for depositing Carrier Envelopes/envelopes containing marked ballots in the mail or with a common or contract carrier. (§ 86.0052, Texas Election Code). IF YOUR BALLOT IS RETURNED BY AN UNAUTHORIZED METHOD, IT WILL NOT BE COUNTED.

What is the Deadline to Return my Ballot by Mail?

For Non-Military Overseas Voters

A ballot that is mailed or delivered by common or contract carrier but does not have a postmark or delivery receipt must be received by the Early Voting Clerk no later than 7:00 p.m. on Election Day.

A ballot that is mailed from overseas and is postmarked or accompanied by a delivery receipt showing the voter submitted the ballot for delivery by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day must arrive no later than the 5th day after Election Day (or the next business day after the 5th day after Election Day, if the 5th day falls on a weekend or holiday).

For Members of the Armed Forces of the United States, or the Spouse or Dependent of a Member of the Armed Forces, Members of the Merchant Marines of the United States, or the Spouse or Dependent of a Member of the Merchant Marine, Members of the National Guard, or the spouse or dependent of a Member of the National Guard

The Carrier Envelope/envelope containing the marked ballot must be received by the Early Voting Clerk no later than the 6th day after Election Day (or the next business day after the 6th day after Election Day, if the 6th day falls on a weekend or holiday). No postmark is required on the Carrier Envelope/envelope with a marked ballot for this category of voter.

For all FPCA voters, a ballot that is hand delivered can only be delivered on Election Day and must be received by the Early Voting Clerk no later than 7:00 p.m. on Election Day.

SPECIAL RULES for Delivery by COMMON AND CONTRACT CARRIERS (§§ 81.005 and 86.006, Texas Election Code)

- 1. If you use a common or contract carrier to return your ballot, the carrier must be a bona fide, for profit business whose primary service is transporting or delivering items.
- 2. If you return your Carrier Envelope/envelope with your marked ballot by common or contract carrier, your Carrier Envelope/envelope with your marked ballot must be accompanied by a delivery receipt when delivered to the Early Voting Clerk. The receipt must indicate the name and address of the person who delivered the Carrier Envelope/envelope with a marked ballot to the common or contract carrier, and the date, hour, and address where the Carrier Envelope/envelope with a marked ballot was received by the common or contract carrier.
- 3. Your ballot will not be counted if it is picked up by a common or contract carrier at an office of a political party or candidate, office for a specific-purpose or general purpose political committee involved in the election, an entity that requested the election be held (unless the delivery is a forwarding to the Early Voting Clerk), or a candidate's house unless the address of the candidate is your address.

If you have any questions about returning your Carrier Envelope/envelope with your marked ballot, please contact the Early Voting Clerk's office at

If you feel that your voting rights have been violated or abused, you may report these incidents to the Secretary of State toll-free at 1-800-252-VOTE (8683) or elections@sos.texas.gov

INFORMACIÓN SOBRE LA DEVOLUCIÓN DE SU SOBRE DE ENVÍO DE FPCA

Cómo Sellar y Firmar el Sobre de Envío de FPCA/Devolución de la Hoja Oficial de Firma Electoral Para Un Votante de FPCA

NOTA: Si no utiliza el Sobre de Envío Oficial para devolver su boleta marcada, debe incluir la Hoja de Firma de la FPCA en el Sobre con Franqueo Pagado de la FPCA o en otro sobre que utilice para devolver su boleta.

- 1. Información Requerida Según la Sección 86.002 del Código Electoral: Usted DEBE proporcionar uno de los siguientes números que está asociado con su registro de votante en el lugar apropiado en el Sobre de Envío u Hoja de Firma: Licencia de Conducir de Texas, Tarjeta de Identificación Personal o Número de Certificado de Identificación Electoral emitido por el Departamento de Seguridad Pública. Si no se le ha emitido uno de estos números, puede dar los últimos cuatro dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social.
- 2.Si no se le ha emitido una Licencia de Conducir de Texas, una Tarjeta de Identificación Personal o un Número de Certificado de Identificación Electoral emitido por el Departamento de Seguridad Pública o un Número de Seguro Social, marque la casilla que indica este hecho. El documento de identidad que utilice para cumplir con estos requisitos de identidad puede estar caducado si la licencia o identificación es válida de otra manera.
- 3. Cuando el Sobre de Envío esté cerrado, su información quedará oculta durante el proceso de envío. Sus números de identificación personal serán revisados por funcionarios electorales autorizados para determinar si el número que ha proporcionado coincide con el de su registro de votante. Si el número que ha proporcionado está incompleto o no coincide con su registro de votante, se le notificará de este defecto y se le dará la oportunidad de hacer las correcciones necesarias.
- 4. Coloque su boleta marcada dentro del Sobre de Boleta. Coloque el Sobre de Boleta sellada dentro del Sobre de Envío. Selle todas las tiras de pegamento de su Sobre de Envío antes de firmar sobre la solapa sellada. Si utiliza la Hoja de Firma, envuélvala alrededor del sobre utilizado para el secreto.
- 5. Firme su nombre junto a la "X" grande del Sobre de Envío u Hoja de Firma. Si usted no puede firmar su nombre, debe tener a una persona que atestigüe su marca. Si no puede hacer una marca, el testigo debe indicarlo en la sección de testigos del Sobre de Envío/Hoja de Firma y completar la sección correspondiente en el reverso del Sobre de Envío o en la Hoja de Firma.
- 6. Si una persona le ayuda a leer o marcar su boleta o deposita su Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada en el correo o se lo entrega a un transportista común o contratado, dicha persona DEBE firmar el Juramento de Asistencia por escrito que forma parte del certificado en su Sobre de Envío u Hoja de Firma, e incluir un nombre en letra de molde, la dirección de residencia, la relación con usted y si recibió o aceptó algún tipo de compensación u otro beneficio de un candidato, campaña o comité político a cambio de prestar asistencia. El hecho de que el asistente no proporcione esta información es un delito, a menos que la persona sea uno de ciertos parientes cercanos del votante o que viva físicamente en la misma vivienda, y puede resultar en que su boleta sea rechazada. El delito es un crimen de cárcel estatal. Para obtener información adicional sobre los procedimientos para asistentes, consulte la carta de "Estimado Votante" incluida con sus materiales de votación.

¿Cómo Devuelvo Mi Boleta Marcada al Secretario de Votación Adelantada?

- 1. Por correo a través del Servicio Postal de los Estados Unidos;
- 2. Por Medio de un Transportista Común o Contratado (por ejemplo, un servicio de correo o mensajería proporcionado por una empresa privada. Para obtener más información sobre este método de envío, consulte las "Normas Especiales Para La Entrega Por Parte De Los Transportistas Comunes y Contractuales" a continuación): O
- 3. Entregado en mano, en persona, por el votante el Día de las Elecciones, en la oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada.

 Sólo puede entregar en mano su propio Sobre de Envío/sobre con su boleta marcada y no para otra persona. La entrega en mano de una Boleta por Correo sólo puede hacerse el Día de las Elecciones, y el Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada debe entregarse en la oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada. Se le pedirá que presente una forma aprobada de identificación con fotografía enumerada en la Sección 63.0101(a) del Código Electoral de Texas. Si no posee y no puede razonablemente obtener una forma aprobada de identificación con fotografía, el votante puede ejecutar una Declaración de Impedimento Razonable y proporcionar una forma de identificación adicional enumerada en la Sección 63.0101(b) del Código Electoral de Texas. Además, si tiene un Certificado de Registro Electoral que contiene la anotación de Exención por Discapacidad (E), puede presentarlo. Debe firmar una lista de firmas.
- El Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada sólo puede contener la boleta de un votante. Sin embargo, se puede colocar más de un Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada juntos en otro sobre con fines de envío si los sobres adicionales pertenecen a una o varias personas registradas para votar en la misma dirección (§ 86.006(b), Código Electoral de Texas). Un Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada no puede ser recolectado y almacenado en otro lugar para su posterior entrega al Secretario de Votación Adelantada. Es un delito penal que una persona posea a sabiendas una boleta oficial o un Sobre de Envío oficial provisto de conformidad con este código de otro individuo sin completar la porción del asistente del Sobre de Envío/Hoja de Firma, a menos que la persona sea uno de ciertos parientes cercanos del votante, que viva físicamente en la misma vivienda, un Secretario de Votación Adelantada o el Secretario de Votación Adelantada Suplente, o un empleado del Servicio Postal de los Estados Unidos u otro empleado de servicio de entrega trabajando en el curso normal de su trabajo. También es un delito ser compensado por depositar Sobres de Envío/sobres con boletas marcadas que contengan boletas votadas por otras personas (§ 86.0052, Código Electoral de Texas). SI SU BOLETA ES DEVUELTA POR UN MÉTODO NO AUTORIZADO, NO SE CONTARÁ.

Para los Votantes que no son Militares que Están en el Extranjero

Una boleta que es enviada por correo o entregada por medio de un transportista común o contratado pero que no tenga un matasellos o un recibo de entrega debe ser recibida por el Secretario de Votación Adelantada a más tardar a las 7:00 p.m. el Día de las Elecciones.

Una boleta que es enviada por correo desde el extranjero que tenga un matasellos o que esté acompañada por un recibo de entrega que indique que el votante envió la boleta para su entrega a más tardar a las 7:00 p.m. el Día de las Elecciones debe llegar a más tardar el 5º día siguiente al Día de las Elecciones, si dicho 5º día es un día de fin de semana o un día festivo).

Para los Miembros de las Fuerzas Armadas de los Estados Unidos, o el Cónyuge o Dependiente de un Miembro de las Fuerzas Armadas, Miembros de la Marina Mercante de los Estados Unidos, o el Cónyuge o Dependiente de un Miembro de la Marina Mercante, Miembros de la Guardia Nacional o el Cónyuge o Dependiente de un Miembro de la Guardia Nacional

El Sobre de Envío/sobre que contiene la boleta marcada debe ser recibido por el Secretario de Votación Adelantada a más tardar el 6º día siguiente al Día de las Elecciones (o el siguiente día hábil después del 6º día siguiente al Día de las Elecciones, si dicho 6º día es un día de fin de semana o un día festivo). No se requiere matasellos en el Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada para esta categoría de votante.

Para todos los votantes de la FPCA, una boleta entregada en mano debe ser recibida por el Secretario de Votación Adelantada a más tardar a las 7:00 p.m. el Día de las Elecciones.

NORMAS ESPECIALES PARA LA ENTREGA POR PARTE DE LOS TRANSPORTISTAS COMUNES Y CONTRACTUALES (§§ 81.005 y 86.006, Código Electoral de Texas)

- 1. Si utiliza un transportista común o contratado para enviar su boleta, el transportista debe ser una empresa de buena fe y con ánimo de lucro cuyo servicio principal sea el transporte o la entrega de artículos a cambio de una remuneración.
- 2. Si devuelve el Sobre de Envío/sobre con su boleta marcada por medio de un transportista común o contratado, su Sobre de Envío/sobre con su boleta marcada debe ir acompañado de un recibo de entrega cuando se le entregue al Secretario de Votación Adelantada. El recibo debe indicar el nombre y la dirección de la persona que entregó el Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada al transportista común o contratado, así como la fecha, la hora y la dirección en la que el transportista común o contratado recibió el Sobre de Envío/sobre con la boleta marcada.
- 3. Su boleta no se contará si es recogida por un transportista común o contratado en la oficina de un partido político o de un candidato, en la oficina de un comité político con propósitos específicos o generales que participe en la elección, una entidad que haya solicitado celebrar la elección (a menos que la entrega sea un reenvío al Secretario de Votación Adelantada), o el hogar de un candidato, a menos que la dirección del candidato sea también la dirección del votante.

Well, if the rejection notices are auto-generated (like they should be) with the reason of rejection based on how the rejected application is entered into the system, any change would result in a formatting change needed in the VR system. I just know that our vendor is slow to respond and when something changes like a form change, it takes a while to get an update. Maybe it wouldn't be a big deal.

Example: I still don't think that there is an option in Vemacs to specify which ID was included on the application that did not result in a match. They lump all ID forms into the same bucket.

Kristi has been working with the offline vendors on changes, but I didn't think these edits would affect the changes they are working on.

What makes you think this would result in a change? I want to make sure I'm not missing anything...

I do like the concept of the change. It lets the voter know what number they provided on the application and also what ID is associated on their record. We both know that they can't remember how they filled out the defective application once it's sent. The proposed is a little confusing but I can't think of a better way to present this information. Maybe something like this?

2. The Texas Personal Identification Number/ Texas Driver's License Number/ Last 4 digits of your Social Security Number/ Election Identification Certificate Number provided on your ABBM is NOT associate with your voter registration record:	d
The type of number associated with your voter registration record is the following: Texas Personal Identification Number Last 4 digits of your Social Security Number Texas Driver's License Number Election Identification Certificate Number
Where the ID number they provided on the original application is circled?
This change would likely result in a large programming change on the offline VR systems side though. Just something to keep in mind.

I have one more sample for you to look at if you don't mind. It says final, but it's still very much in draft form. I can't figure out how to get fewer words on the page. It's so much for the voter to read.	**************************************

Good afternoon Christina. I think anything would help! Maybe if we could afford to install a buzzer that would alert them before sealing the envelope without completing the required info? © Seriously though, I think it's a great idea plus maybe a prescribed/suggested insert.

One item looking at the sample sent, I think the English wording has been pushed down too far and looks funky and cuts off the Spanish.

Hello Denton County!

Can you take a look at the attached document? I'm asking vendors if there will be a substantial price increase to put the personal identification numbers box in red. This has come up in some of our advisory group meetings.

This kind of edit to the design would not invalidate or render previous versions of the envelope unusable. This would be something counties could start using on their next printing of envelopes. I'm still talking with vendors about this change so it's not in any way final – We are just trying to get ahead of some of these issues before November.

Let me know what you think!!

Dear Election Officials:

As you know, under Section 86.011(d) of the Election Code, if an early voting clerk receives a timely carrier envelope that does not comply with the applicable requirements of the Code, the early voting clerk may deliver the carrier envelope in person or by mail to the voter so that the voter may correct the defect. Additionally, the early voting clerk may notify the voter of the defect by phone and advise the voter that they may come to the early voting clerk's office to correct the defect or cancel their Application for Ballot by Mail (ABBM) and vote in person. The early voting clerk may utilize this provision for defects such as a missing signature by the voter, missing or incomplete witness information, missing or incomplete assistant information, and missing or incorrect personal identification information. If a voter fails to return their voted ballot in a carrier envelope, the early voting clerk may also notify the voter of this defect.

As such, our office has released the following forms.

- EVC Notice of Carrier Defect Mailed with Corrective Action Form (Form 6-11)
- EVC Notice of Carrier Defect Phone with Corrective Action Form (Form 6-12)

These items are in the process of being posted to our website. When posted, the forms will be located in our Election Forms manual.

Please let us know if have any additional questions and concerns.

Cómo Corregir el Defecto de Su Sobre de Envío Presentándose en Persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada Puede corregir todos los defectos enumerados anteriormente completando el Formulario de Acción Correctiva que se encuentra en el reverso de este aviso. Usted DEBE entregar el Formulario de Acción Correctiva completado en persona a la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada antes de las 7:00 p.m. del Día de las Elecciones.

Proceso de Corrección de Defectos por Número

- Defecto #1 Firme el Formulario de Acción Correctiva en el espacio designado.
- Defecto #2 Si utilizó un testigo para su Sobre de Envío porque no pudo firmar o hacer su marca y la información del testigo faltaba o estaba incompleta, pídale que complete la parte del testigo del Formulario de Acción Correctiva. Puede utilizar una persona diferente como testigo si la misma persona no está disponible.
 - NOTA: Si ya no necesita un testigo, debe poder firmar el Formulario de Acción Correctiva en la Casilla de Firma.
- Defecto #3 Si utilizó un asistente para ayudarle a leer o marcar la boleta, pídale que rellene la parte del Formulario de Acción Correctiva correspondiente al asistente. El asistente debe completar toda la información, incluyendo la respuesta a la pregunta sobre si recibió una compensación u otro beneficio a cambio de su ayuda. La persona que le ayudó anteriormente debe ser la misma que complete la parte del asistente del Formulario de Acción Correctiva.
- Defecto #4- Complete la Casilla #4 del Formulario de Acción Correctiva que se encuentra en el reverso de esta notificación añadiendo sus datos de identificación personal O puede corregir el Defecto #4 en línea a través del Rastreador de Boleta por Correo de la Secretaría de Estado de Texas. Vea las instrucciones a continuación.

Corrección del Defecto #4 Usando el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo

Puede corregir el Defecto #4 en línea a través del Rastreador de Boleta por Correo de la Secretaría de Estado de Texas en www.votetexas.gov. Cuando ingrese al Rastreador de Boleta por Correo, tendrá la oportunidad de ingresar su(s) número(s) de identificación personal. Tanto el número de su Licencia de Conducir de Texas o de su Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas COMO su número de Seguro Social deben estar asociados con su registro de votante para utilizar el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo. Una vez que su número de identificación personal sea validado por el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo, se procesará el Sobre de Envío que usted presentó previamente. Una vez que se haya revisado su acción correctiva, la fecha de revisión y el estado de su Sobre de Envío se mostrarán en el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo. No tiene que presentarse en persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada si realiza su corrección en línea utilizando el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo.

Usted puede seguir el progreso de su boleta durante el ciclo electoral ingresando al Rastreador de Boleta por Correo en votetexas.gov. Para utilizar el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo, debe ingresar:

- Su Número de Licencia de Conducir de Texas o su Número de Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas, Y
- Los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social Y
- Su dirección de residencia tal y como figura en su registro de votante

Cancelación de Su Boleta Postal - Si no desea corregir el defecto, aún puede votar en persona cancelando su Boleta por Correo. Si cancela su Boleta por Correo en persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada, se le entregará un Aviso de Boleta Postal Renunciada para que lo lleve al lugar de votación. Esto le da derecho a votar con una boleta regular. Si no cancela en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada, podrá votar con una Boleta Provisional en el lugar de votación. No podrá votar en persona después del día de las elecciones.

Si tiene alguna pregunta o duda sobre cómo hacer una corrección en su Sobre de Envío, póngase en contacto con la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada en:

Correcting Defect #4 Using the Ballot by Mail Tracker

You may correct Defect #4 online through the Texas Secretary of State Ballot by Mail Tracker at www.votetexas.gov. When you log into the Ballot by Mail Tracker, you will have the opportunity to enter your personal identification number(s). Both your Texas Driver's License or Texas Personal Identification Card number AND your Social Security number must be associated with your voter registration record to use the Ballot by Mail Tracker. Once your personal identification number is validated by the Ballot by Mail Tracker, the Carrier Envelope you previously submitted will be processed. Once your corrective action has been reviewed, the date of review and the status of your Carrier Envelope will be displayed on the Ballot by Mail Tracker. You do not have to appear in person at the Early Voting Clerk's Office to deliver the completed Corrective Action Form if you make your correction online by using the Ballot by Mail Tracker.

You can track the progress of your ballot during the election cycle by logging on to the Ballot by Mail Tracker on votetexas.gov. To utilize the Ballot by Mail Tracker, you must enter:

- Your Texas Driver's License Number or Texas Personal Identification Number, AND
- The last four digits of your social security number AND
- Your residence address as listed in your voter registration record

Cancelling Your Ballot by Mail - If you do not wish to correct the defect, you may still vote in person by cancelling your Ballot by Mail. If you cancel your Ballot by Mail in person at the Early Voting Clerk's Office, you will be given a Notice of Surrendered Ballot to take to the polls. This entitles you to vote a regular ballot. If you do not cancel at the Early Voting Clerk's Office, you will be able to vote a Provisional Ballot at the polling place. You may not vote in person after Election Day.

If you have any questions or concerns about making a correction to your Carrier Envelope please contact the Early Voting Clerk's Office at:

Thank you for your inquiry.

The EVBB shall only accept a voted ballot by mail if, among other things, the personal identification information provided by the voter on the carrier envelope identifies the same voter identified on the voter's voter registration record. (Sec. 87.041(b)(8), Texas Election Code). This is addressed in our advisory here:

No.2022-08 - NEW LAW: Senate Bill 1 – Opportunity to Correct Defects on Application for a Ballot by Mail and *Carrier Envelope

Please note that the ballot tracker is not used to make edits/modifications to personal ID#s but to confirm that the information in TEAM is correct.

We hope this information will be helpful to you.

Good morning,

I have a number of voters' ballots that require corrective action. All of them are ID related. Some have written their VUID numbers instead of the required ID or SSN. A couple have left off or transposed a digit(s). These voters' personal identifications numbers are correct in TEAM. If their ID numbers are correct, there is no corrective action to take on the Ballot Tracker. Once they have gotten into the Ballot Tracker, their ballot will show Received but it doesn't give them an option to "Correct" anything, since their information is already correct. Their mistake is a hand-written error. Shouldn't they be required to make that correction in person? I will receive nothing in the Ballot Tracker Records on the Dashboard to indicate they have attempted to make a correction since there is nothing to correct. The Notice of Carrier Defect is misleading in the fact that they cannot make all of their corrections for #4 through the Ballot Tracker. Please advise how to go forward with these voters who may have logged into the Ballot Tracker but no action was taken.

Thank you,

Jeanie L. Longoria

Qualifications

- You must register to vote in the county in which you reside.
- You must be a citizen of the United States.
- You must be at least 17 years and 10 months old to register, and you must be 18 years of age by Election Day.
- You must not be finally convicted of a felony, or if you are a felon, you must have completed all of your punishment, including any term of incarceration, parole, supervision, period of probation, or you must have received a pardon.
- You must not have been determined by a final judgment of a court exercising probate jurisdiction to be totally mentally incapacitated or partially mentally incapacitated without the right to vote.

Filling out the Application

 Review the application carefully, fill it out, sign and date it and mail it to the voter registrar in your county or drop it by the Voter Registrar's office.

- All voters who register to vote in Texas must provide a Texas driver's license number or personal identification number issued by the Texas Department of Public Safety. If you don't have such a number, simply provide the last four digits of your social security number. If you don't have a social security number, you need to state that fact.
- Your voter registration will become effective 30 days after it is received or on your 18th birthday, whichever is later. Your registration must be effective on or before an election day in order to vote in that election.
- If you move to another county, you must re-register in the county of your new residence.

Please visit the Texas Secretary of State website, www.sos.state.tx.us, and for additional election information visit www.votetexas.gov.

6-15 - Instructions for Carrier Envelope.pdf; Carrier Envelope 6-15_FINAL.indd

Dear Election Officials,

Today, December 2, 2021 is the effective date of Senate Bill 1 (2nd C.S., 2021). We have previously issued Advisory 2021-21 - 2021 Legislative Summary – Second and Third Special Sessions that broadly outlines the changes in Texas law resulting from SB 1. In addition to this advisory, we will be issuing updates in December and January in the form of advisories, forms, and webinars to provide support and explanations about these new changes.

Below, I've provided a list of forms that are currently updated and posted to our website that MUST be used for elections ordered on or after December 2, 2021. Please be advised that you may need to clear your cache on your browser to access the updated forms. Be sure to look at the revision date on the form to ensure that you are using the correct version.

- 1. Application for Ballot by Mail (ABBM): The ABBM has been updated with required legislative updates, including a new space for the voter's personal identification number (TXDL, Personal ID, EIC Number or last four of SSN). In addition to the links below, I've attached the files as a PDF and an inDesign file to assist you with printing needs.
 - a. Application for Ballot by Mail (English)
 - b. Application for Ballot by Mail (Spanish)
- 2. Carrier Envelope for Marked Mail Ballots: The Carrier Envelope has been updated with required legislative updates, including a new space for the voter's personal identification number (TXDL, Personal ID, EIC Number or last four of SSN). I've also included it as an attachment for your assistance. This envelope has been provided to any known vendors. The SOS prescribes the content of the form, but the format may be modified by vendors provided the content isn't changing and they are able to comply with the requirements for a secrecy flap for the personal identification numbers. If you or your vendor would like to modify the form, the form must be approved by the SOS.
 - a. Carrier Envelope
- 3. Confirmation Notices: Our confirmation notice templates were previously updated in September. They MUST be updated as SB 1 modified the required statements on all voter registration applications. The revised links are located below. The templates have also already been updated in TEAM.
 - a. Notice to Confirm Voter Registration Address
 - b. Address Confirmation Response Fold over
 - c. Address Confirmation Notice and Response Tri-Fold
 - d. Notice to Confirm Voter Registration by Providing Documentation
- 4. Voter Registration Applications: The Voter Registration Applications have been updated with required legislative changes. All of the camera-ready applications for our counties in both English and Spanish have been updated. If you need a copy of your county-specific, camera-ready voter registration applications please email us to request a copy.
- Statement of Residence: The Statement of Residence form has been updated with the required legislative updates, including a new box for current county of residence and the revised required statements on voter registration applications.
 - a. Statement of Residence

- 6. Provisional Ballot Affidavit Envelope: The Provisional Ballot Affidavit envelope has been updated with required legislative updates to the affidavit language. We also modified one of the reasons for voting provisionally to align with the changes to mail ballot cancellations prescribed in SB 1.
 - a. Affidavit of Provisional Voters
- 7. Additional Forms that are Pending Updates: The following forms are in the process of being updated and will be released over the next couple weeks. Please note that this is not an exhaustive list of form updates. Many have already been updated and released to our website including: Recount forms, Confidentiality forms, Candidate Application forms, Order of Election, and Notice of Election forms. The list below contains the notable forms that we wanted to draw to your attention:
 - a. Carrier Insert for ABBMs
 - b. Carrier Insert for FPCAs
 - c. FPCA Signature Sheet
 - d. FPCA Instructions
 - e. Notice of Rejected ABBM
 - f. Notice of Rejected Ballot
 - g. Hand Delivery Roster
 - h. Spoiled Ballot Roster
 - i. Oath of Assistance/Oath of Interpreter
 - j. NEW Curbside Voting Assistance
 - k. NEW Forms related to Voters taking Corrective Actions on the Carrier Envelope
- 8. Combination Forms are NOT being updated.

We will work to provide revised forms and materials to you as soon as possible. Please let us know if you have any questions or concerns.

Thank you,

Christina Worrell Adkins

Printing Notes:

- The Secretary of State prescribes the wording of the Carrier Envelope, but vendors are responsible for creating their own template based on SOS design recommendations.
- Size: The prescribed form should be printed on an approximately 6" x 9 envelope; however, vendors may adjust the envelope size as necessary to provide lower costs in printing and postage, but may not make any other alterations to the text of the envelope. Printers may adjust the design to allow for a larger envelope if the modifications are approved by the Secretary of State.
- Color: The envelope should be white with a color bar across the front (See design)
 - Specifications for the Color bar: PMS 7659 c57 m76 y35 k15 r116 g76 b110 Hex 744c6e (or similar color)
- Required Secrecy Flap: The camerenvelope must contain a place for the voter to include certain personal identifiers (Texas Driver's License Number, Texas Personal Identification Number or Election Identification Certificate Number, AND Last 4 digits of the voter's Social Security Number) These personal identifiers MUST be covered by a secrecy flap that is able to be opened without opening the part of the envelope containing the voter's marked ballot.
 - The current carrier envelope design contains a flap with perforation lines to allow the signature verification committee/early voting ballot board to remove the secrecy flap to reveal the voter's personal identifiers. The flap contains glue lines above the top perforation and below the bottom perforation to ensure that the envelope remains sealed when the secrecy flap is removed.
- USPS: The Secretary of State recommends that all vendors work with the USPS to determine whether their specific design meets postal regulations.

Version: Current form is dated 11/2021.

Hello,

Our office has released the following revised Carrier Envelope (Form 6-15) that is attached to this email as a PDF, along with an InDesign copy of the Carrier Envelope which is also attached. This envelope has also been provided to any known vendors. If you or your vendor would like to modify the form, the form must be approved by the SOS.

Please note that you may continue to use your existing stock of Carrier Envelopes for upcoming elections.

These items are in the process of being posted to our website. When posted, the forms will be located in our Election Forms manual.

Please let us know if have any additional questions and concerns.

Subject: FINAL DESIGN - Texas Carrier Envelope for Marked Mail Ballots

Attachments: Carrier Envelope 6-15 FINAL.pdf; Carrier Envelope 6-15 FINAL.indd; 6-15 - Instructions for Carrier Envelope.pdf

Dear Vendors,

Attached is the final design of the carrier envelope for marked mail ballots in Texas. I've included both a PDF and an InDesign file along with our instruction sheet that contains printing instructions. Please be advised that out office is responsible for the content of the form. The format can be modified provided that it meets the requirements prescribed under the Texas Election Code. While we have discussed the design with the USPS, they have made it clear that they cannot properly vet the design until they have a printed envelope to test through their scanners. We strongly urge you to work directly with the USPS to ensure that your final product meets postal regulations.

If you modify the design or size of the envelope, please let us know and we can review to determine legal compliance. Once you begin printing the form, we would also like to request that you provide our office with a few samples of your envelopes for our files in case there are subsequent questions about your modifications.

Thank you for all the feedback and assistance you've given us as we've worked on this redesign. Please let us know if you have any additional questions or concerns.

Thank you,

Subject: Draft Carrier Envelope for Voted Mail Ballots

Dear Vendors,

Attached is a draft of the revised carrier envelope for voted mail ballots in election ordered after 12/2/2021. Please be advised that the change in envelope format was required to accommodate changes in SB 1 from the 2021, second called session. Please note, this is not in final form and has not yet been approved by our office for use in elections. We would like for this to be collaborative effort. We are providing this to you for review and so you can provide suggested modifications and format changes before we finalize. I do have a few notes I would like to pass along for you to consider in your review.

- 1. Color Change to Envelope: Our County Election Official Advisory Group has overwhelmingly indicated to us that that would like to get away from the solid color carrier envelope that is currently canary yellow to a while envelop with a color bar on the left side of the front of the envelope. This attached design follows the format provided by the Center for Civic Design that was developed in conjunction with the USPS. I have provided this to the USPS election mail design folks and they are reviewing to provide me with suggested modifications or changes. I have talked through the proposed changes with the USPS so they have understand conceptually what we are trying to do. I will provide them an updated draft if more changes are made after you all have reviewed.
- 2. New Requirements under SB 1: SB 1 required the following changes to the carrier envelope
 - a. Additional text for the Oath of Assistance
 - b. Additional information for the Assistant to Complete in the Assistant box
 - c. Voters must provide a DL, or last four of SSN, or an indication they have not been issued a DL or SSN
 - d. The identification number provided must be located behind a secrecy flap.

3. Additional Requirements Related to SB 1:

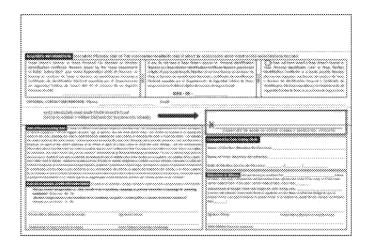

- a. Not everything can be contained behind the secrecy flap. The voter is still required to sign across the envelope seal and the witness/assistant information must be located outside the flap so that it can be completed after the envelope has been sealed.
- b. The secrecy flap needs to be able to be removed without opening the envelope the actual envelope. This is because, for most counties, the ones that are reviewing the signatures and identification numbers (signature verification committee) are not the ones authorized to unseal/open the actual carrier envelope. Only the early voting ballot board can open the envelope.

4. Explanation of Design:

a. Front of Envelope: the USPS has asked that we remove the fill in blacks for the EV clerk's name and address. They have indicated that this information on the envelope causes scanner problems. They would prefer that the EV Clerk's information be printed directly on the ballot or affixed to the envelope with an address label. I did not make that change on this envelope, but will do so on the final version and instructions. The rest of the text is the same.

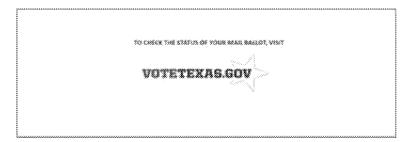

- b. Back of Envelope, containing flap:
 - i. All of this information would be printed on the back of the envelope. This is what is visible before the envelope is closed and sealed.
- c. Outside of Envelope Flap:

d. Inside of Envelope Flap: The dotted lines indicate where perforation would be. We are envisioning two different glue lines that will be printed on inside of the top flap. One that is located above the top perforation and one located below the bottom perforation.

e. Inside of Envelop Flap: The attached logo is in color, but this is not a requirement. All black ink is fine. We are also thinking that a county can opt to print their contact information on the inside below the information about tracking their mail ballot.

Please do not hesitate to contact me with any questions/comments you have. We want as much feedback as possible before we finalize this design. Thank you to those of you have taken the time to provide us with samples and have taken the time to talk through some issues. I look forward to continuing to work with you all on finalizing this envelope.

Thank you,

Christina Worrell Adkins

Subject: Re: New ABBM form
Attachments: ABBM 2021 Legal Size.pdf

Hello,

This modified form is approved.

However, please note that due to recent legislative changes in SB 1, you would not be able to use this version of the ABBM for elections ordered on or after December 2, 2021.

SB 1 included a requirement that the voter must include certain identifying information on their ABBM, including either a driver's license number (or the number of another relevant ID issued by DPS), the last four digits of their social security number, or a statement that they have not been issued either number.

We are currently finalizing the revised version of that updated ABBM form, and will send that updated form out as soon as it is available.

You are welcome to make similar modifications to that updated form, but please submit a copy of that modified version to our office for approval when you do so.

Please let us know if you have any other questions about this issue or anything else relating to the election. You can reach us at Elections@sos.texas.gov or 1-800-252-8683, or you can visit our website at sos.state.tx.us/elections/index.shtml.

Greetings,

I have reviewed the new ABBM form and blew it up to legal size with a tri-fold.

I felt it would be easier to read by my elderly voters, as the font on letter size was so small.

Plus, when tri-folded, this ABBM still fits in our old stock of ABBM envelopes.

Nothing was added to the form, except on the back – I added our contact info. The other change was I moved VUID and Pct to the top, as that is how we process them in our office.

I would like to get permission to use this larger form for our county. I have attached a pdf of the revised legal size form.

Thank you.

Good morning Christina,

We noticed there is no designated area for our email and fax number on the new Application for a Ballot by Mail (ABBM), and we would like to request a variance to be able to include this information on the new form. Please see attachment showing where we would like our email and fax number to appear on the ABBM. We look forward to hearing from you so that we can move forward with our order.

Subject: MASS EMAIL (CC/EA/VR 1038) SOS Updates on Forms and Resources

Dear Election Officials,

As the September 1, 2021 effective date is upon us for many election-related bills from the 2021 Regular Session, we wanted to provide you with updates regarding the implementation of certain new laws. Below we will summarize several items that our office is working on with respect to forms and resources.

Additionally, SB 1 from the Second Called Special Session was passed by the House and Senate on August 31, 2021 and SB 13 was signed in both chambers on August 30, 2021. Upon signing by the Governor, these bills will require additional changes to existing resources, including some that were recently modified due to legislative changes from the 2021 Regular Session. In the list below, we have identified which items will require further updates resulting from subsequent legislative changes. Based on the anticipated effective dates, please note that some changes will not affect the November 2, 2021 election.

- 1. NEW Application for Ballot by Mail form: Per HB 3920 and HB 3107, the Application for a Ballot by Mail (ABBM) was required to be modified to include new language. We will be issuing an advisory on the new ABBM form and other changes related to voting by mail. The revised ABBM is required for all voters voting by mail under the disability category. If someone uses the old ABBM form and is voting by mail due to any ground other than disability, you may still accept and process that ABBM. Please also note that an otherwise valid annual ABBM filed earlier in the year before September 1, 2021 will still be valid, even if the ground was disability.
 - a. English Version Application for a Ballot by Mail (ABBM)
 - b. Spanish Version Application for a Ballot by Mail (ABBM)

NOTE: Please be advised that this form will be updated to accommodate changes in SB 1 for release after the November 2021 election. Please plan accordingly when ordering your current form stock.

2. NEW Address Confirmation Forms: Per SB 1111, the current Address Confirmation Notice and response documents had to be modified to include new language. Additionally, this bill required that the SOS create a new form for an additional address confirmation process. This was explained in Advisory 2021-10, which we released on August 31, 2021. The revised and new notices must be used for all address confirmations sent on or after September 1, 2021.

NOTE: SB 1 did not make any changes to the required information on the Address Confirmation Notice and response forms, so there will be no updates to those forms resulting from SB 1. If any other legislation impacts this form, we will notify you of such changes.

- 3. REVISED Statement of Residence: Per HB 3107, the Statement of Residence form must be modified to include a "County" box. HB 3107 requires the SOS to adopt a Statement of Residence form with the required box, as soon as practicable, on or after September 1, 2021. Please be advised that you may continue to use your old stock for the remainder of the elections occurring in 2021. We will release a new Statement of Residence form that includes this required box, but it will not be officially adopted until January 1, 2022. Therefore, you may continue to use old stock; however, if additional "Statement of Residence" forms are needed, please use the revised form to place new orders.
- 4. Ballot by Mail Carrier Envelopes: We will NOT be updating any of our Ballot by Mail Carrier Envelopes for the November 2021 election. You may continue to use your existing stock for this election. We will be making substantial updates to the carrier envelope in light of SB 1. These changes will likely result in a custom form. This form will be released as soon as the design has been completed, as we recognize that vendors will need time to print these custom envelopes.
- 5. Handbooks: We will NOT be updating our Qualifying Voters Handbook (2020), Early Voting Ballot Board Handbook, or Poll Watcher's Guide for the November 2021 election. Please be advised that we are working on substantial updates to these handbooks to incorporate changes related to SB 1. We expect to release updated handbooks in December 2021.
- 6. Dear Voter Letter: The "Dear Voter" letter for the November 2, 2021 election was posted on our website earlier this month. It is located on our Conducting Elections page. I've included the links below.

- a. November 2, 2021 Uniform Election Date Dear Voter Letter (PDF) | Spanish (PDF)
- 7. Upcoming Advisories and Webinars Related to Legislative Changes: We plan to issue multiple advisories throughout September regarding the implementation of legislative changes. When appropriate, there will be a corresponding webinar to explain the applicable changes. Please consult the Legal Webinar Schedule that was sent out on August 30, 2021 for the full schedule. Our recent advisories include:
 - a. Advisory 2021-09: 2021 Legislative Update (87th Regular Session) (issued 7/30)
 - b. Advisory 2021-10: NEW LAW SB 1111 and Address Confirmations (issued 8/31)
- 7. Additional Special Session Updates: As we review the legislative changes resulting from the Second Called Special Session, our office expects to issue an additional legislative update regarding the impact of election-related bills. We will also notify you of any additional updates to our forms or resources.

We understand that many of you print our materials for reference. We greatly appreciate you studying our advisories and other information, and we encourage you to check back to the online materials on our website for updates.

Please let us know if you have any questions or concerns about these changes.

Thank you,

Subject: RE: Mail in Ballots Registration

Good afternoon,

There have been some changes to the law regarding applications for ballot by mail (ABBMs). Section 84.002 of the Election Code now requires that voters provide either the number from their driver's license, election identification certificate, or personal identification card issued by Texas Department of Public Safety or to provide the last four digits of their social security number on the application. If the voter has not been issued either of these numbers, the voter may include a statement on the ABBM that they have not been issued either number.

If a voter is completing an ABBM and does not remember which number the voter used to register to vote, that voter may contact the county voter registrar to confirm the number that was used to register. The county voter registrar should be able to inform the voter of the type of number that was used by the voter at the time of registration. Additionally, if the voter does not remember which number was used to register, the voter can provide both numbers on the ABBM. As long as one of the numbers is confirmed, the ABBM should be accepted.

We hope this information will be helpful to you.

So I was reading that in Texas there is a restriction that allows the county to bounce votes, if you don't use the same ID you used to register. For example, if you registered using your driver's license, but you requested or sent in your mail-in ballot using your social security last four digits, the ballot gets rejected. That is insane. Who remembers which one they used when they registered to vote 20+ years ago (or yesterday for that matter).

Is this above statement truthful and do I have to worry about the county bouncing my vote out? Thanks for your attention and answer in advance.

Understood – thank you for the update. The requirements to log into the ballot tracker are set by statute, not our office – per Sec. 86.015, it requires the following information for the voter to access the tracker:

- Name
- Registration address
- · Last four digits of social security number
- DL number OR Personal ID card number issued by DPS

Since this is set out explicitly in law, our office doesn't have any leeway to alter these requirements, it would take a legislative change:

Sec. 86.015. ELECTRONIC TRACKING OF APPLICATION FOR BALLOT VOTED BY MAIL OR BALLOT VOTED BY MAIL. (a) The secretary of state shall develop or otherwise provide an online tool to each early voting clerk that enables a person who submits an application for a ballot to be voted by mail to track the location and status of the person's application and ballot on the secretary's Internet website and on the county's Internet website if the early voting clerk is the county clerk of a county that maintains an Internet website.

- (b) The online tool developed or provided under Subsection (a) must require the voter to provide, before permitting the voter to access information described by that subsection:
- the voter's name and registration address and the last four digits of the voter's social security number; and
 - (2) the voter's:
 - (A) driver's license number; or
 - (B) personal identification card number issued by the Department of Public Safety.
 - (c) An online tool used under this section must:
 - (1) for each election, record:
 - (A) each application for a ballot to be voted by mail received by the clerk; and

CONFIDENTIAL STATE105512

- (B) each carrier envelope sent to a voter by the clerk;
- (2) for each carrier envelope, record or assign a serially numbered and sequentially issued barcode or tracking number that is unique to each envelope;
- (3) update the applicable Internet website as soon as practicable after each of the following events occurs:
- (A) receipt by the early voting clerk of the person's application for a ballot to be voted by mail;
- (B) acceptance or rejection by the early voting clerk of the person's application for a ballot to be voted by mail;
 - (C) placement in the mail by the early voting clerk of the person's official ballot;
 - (D) receipt by the early voting clerk of the person's marked ballot; and
 - (E) acceptance or rejection by the early voting ballot board of a person's marked ballot; and

- (4) allow a voter to add or correct information required under Section 84.002(a) (1-a) or Section 86,002(g).
- (d) The secretary of state shall adopt rules and prescribe procedures as necessary to implement this section.
- (e) The information contained in Subsection (c) is not public information for purposes of Chapter 552, Government Code, until after election day.

Added by Acts 2021, 87th Leg., R.S., Ch. 317 (H.B. 1382), Sec. 1, eff. September 1, 2021. Amended by:

Mr. Taylor,

It is not that it does not work, it is that is complicated and the age of people who are generally tracking a mail in ballot can't readily utilize the site. The tracking site ask for ID of Drivers license or last four of SSN. If the voter does not know which one of those numbers we have in our system it will kick out the inquiry. (This is the same problem with the new ABBMs and the Carrier Envelopes).

We have been in contact with these two individuals and their ballots have been "received" in our office.

Until the state makes the ballot tracker more user friendly then you and us will continue to have voter's comment that the site does not work.

Hi

The ballot tracker does work. Please try again but you do not have to provide anything in 'Street Line 2' – that is an optional field. That could be why the ballot tracker is turning up the message "no voter could be found for the details you entered."

I just tested this with my own address and registration to troubleshoot and confirm it works properly. Please let us know if you and those you mentioned are still experiencing issues.

Your Ballot Tracker does not work. Inserted below are screenshots showing

- 1. is registered to vote in Bowie County
- 2. Ballot Tracker does not work
- 3. is registered to vote in Bowie Count
- 4. Ballot Tracker does not work (has confirmed with the county elections office that her mail balitlot was received.)

I believe the state law has not changed in that it is required for the county elections office to post daily the mail ballots it has received. Instead of putting a file on its website everyday, Bowie County just puts a link to state "Ballot Tracker."

This needs to be fixed immediately. If you have any questions, feel free to call me. I have had several people try using Ballot Tracker, so it is not just the two examples I have provided that are having trouble.

Please have someone reply to this message so I know that it was received. Thank you.

CC: Elections Internet [Elections@sos.texas.gov] Subject: RE: Vote Texas Contact Message (El Response)

Good afternoon.

Section 86.001(f) (copied below) provides that an application for ballot by mail must include the same identifying numbers as the voter's registration information. Either the last four digits of the SSN or all the digits in a Texas identification card/driver's license are required to register to vote (or the applicant must indicate that they have not been issued either of these numbers). Although both numbers are not required, the number provided on the application for ballot by mail must match the number in the voter's registration record. This means that if the voter registered to vote using only the SSN, for example, the last four digits of that SSN must be provided on the application for ballot by mail. If the voter provided their Texas driver's license number instead, and that driver's license number is not associated with the voter's registration record, the application for ballot by mail would be rejected. Voters can add either number to their registration record by submitting a voter registration form and including the number on that application and marking the application as an update to their existing voter registration record. Additionally, either number can be added to the registration record by using the Texas.gov website.

On the Application for Ballot by Mail prescribed by the Office of the Secretary of State, instructions are included on the application which state the following: "If you have been issued one of the required numbers, but it is not associated with your voter registration record, please contact your local registrar to inquire about how to add one of those required numbers to your voter registration record." Therefore, we recommend that if a voter is unsure which number is associated with their voter registration record, the voter contract their county of registration to confirm which number is a part of their voter registration record and provide that number. It is also permissible for a voter to put both numbers on the application although only one number is required.

We hope this information will be helpful to you.

- (4) for an application for a ballot to be voted by mail on the ground of confinement in jail, the address of the jail or of a person related to the applicant within the degree described by Subdivision (3);
- (5) for an application for a ballot to be voted by mail on any ground, an indication of each election for which the applicant is applying for a ballot;
- (6) an indication of the ground of eligibility for early voting; and
- (7) for an application for a ballot to be voted by mail on the ground of involuntary civil commitment, the address of the facility operated by or under contract with the Texas Civil Commitment Office or of a person related to the applicant within the degree of consanguinity described by Subdivision (3).
- (b) An application for a ballot to be voted by mail on the ground of absence from the county of residence must indicate that the applicant satisfies the requirements prescribed by Section 82.001.
- (b-1) A person may use the number of a driver's license, election identification certificate, or personal identification card that has expired for the purpose of fulfilling the requirement under Subsection (a) (1-a) if the license or identification is otherwise valid.
- (c) An application for a ballot to be voted by mail on the ground of disability must require the applicant to affirmatively indicate that the applicant agrees with the statement, "I have a sickness or physical condition that prevents me from appearing at the polling place on election day without a likelihood of needing personal assistance or injuring my health," as prescribed by Section 82.002(a).

Sec. 86.001. REVIEWING APPLICATION AND PROVIDING BALLOT. (a) The early voting clerk shall review each application for a ballot to be voted by mail.

- (b) If the applicant is entitled to vote an early voting ballot by mail, the clerk shall provide an official ballot to the applicant as provided by this chapter.
- (c) Except as provided by Section 86.008, if the applicant is not entitled to vote by mail, the clerk shall reject the application, enter on the application "rejected" and the reason for and date of rejection, and deliver written notice of the reason for the rejection to the applicant at both the residence address and mailing address on the application. ballot may not be provided to an applicant whose application is rejected.
- If the application does not include the applicant's correct voter registration number or county election precinct of residence, the clerk shall enter the appropriate information on the application before providing a ballot to the applicant.
- If the applicant does not have an effective voter registration for the election, the clerk shall reject the application unless the clerk can determine from the voter registrar that the applicant has submitted a voter registration application and the registration will be effective on election day.
- (f) If the information required under Section 84.002(a)(1-a) included on the application does not identify the same voter identified on the applicant's application for voter registration under Section 13.002(c)(8), the clerk shall reject the application.
- (f-1) If an application is rejected under Subsection (f), the clerk shall provide notice of the rejection in accordance with Subsection The notice must include information regarding the ability to correct or add information required under Section 84.002(a)(1-a) through the online tool described by Section 86.015(c).
- (f-2) If an applicant corrects an application for a ballot to be voted by mail online and that application subsequently identifies the same voter identified on the applicant's application for voter registration, the clerk shall provide a ballot to the applicant as provided by this chapter.

(g) If a ballot is provided to the applicant, the clerk shall indicate beside the applicant's name on the list of registered voters that a ballot to be voted by mail was provided to the applicant and the date of providing the ballot unless the form of the list makes it impracticable to do so.

When filling out my mothers VOTE BY MAIL form the county refused to send her a ballot due to not using a prior number "the last four numbers of her social security ID" instead using the STATE OF TEXAS Drivers License number. Since both were an option on the application Either Texas Drivers license or Last four of social security number I feel that this is an error in the APPLICATION For a Ballot by Mail. Ector County refuses to send her a ballot because she used her legal ID form of her Texas Drivers License.

Thank you for contacting the Elections Division of the Office of the Texas Secretary of State.

If your application for a ballot by mail was rejected because the required personal identification information on the application does not match the numbers in your voter registration record then the county must provide notice to you of the rejection and explain how to correct the defect by using the online Ballot by Mail Tracker, available at www.votetexas.gov. If you need to update your voter registration record to add or required information numbers you can do so by submitting a new voter registration application to the registrar or by validating their personal identification numbers on texas.gov.

We appreciate your detailed feedback on the issues you encountered. We are always looking for ways to improve the process and the experience, and detailed feedback from the voters is helpful in addressing those issues. Our office does not have the power to change the laws in effect in this state. I have been a registered voter at my address since 1980. The last few years I have voted by mail because of disability and age. My current application for voting by mail has been rejected. The problem is my last 4 digits of my social security number were entered into the voting registration data base incorrectly in 1980 by whomever entered the data. The Tarrant County Election office said the numbers were transposed. When I asked if I could take a picture of my Texas driver's license and social security card and email it to their office I was told I had to come into their office to correct the error. If I was able to go to their office I could vote in person.

Texas voting laws are penalizing people for mistakes made by the election staff members that entered the voting registration data. It is ridiculous that the technology that allows me to update my information to the IRS and the Social Security Administration electronically is not allowed by the state of Texas in regards to voting by mail. As a constituent I am being denied my right to vote by mail simply because of Texas' antiquated procedures. It is time for Texas to embrace technology and stop blocking voters.

Sincerely,

I will make that suggestion to the DPS though my state senator and representative. I will also help my friend correct her voter registration.

I am also aware of the curbside voting since I have worked the elections for more than 20 years. This year we had problems with our machine and sent voters that required this to another polling place. We filed our complaint about this to the county. We had lots of problems in Harris county, but you know that.

Apparently your email contact works but it told me twice that it failed. This is what I got back:

We are sorry your friend experienced difficulties. We respectfully note that our office cannot direct DPS procedures. You would need to direct the request to DPS.

In the meantime, in terms of election procedures, we can advise you that the voter can associate a new number with the voter registration record to help facilitate ballot by mail. One of the ways to do this is to send in a voter registration application with updated information.

OCA-APPX-1446

If the voter is not sure whether her driver license number or social security number are associated with the voter registration record, she may put both on a future application for ballot by mail. Additionally, many voters who vote by mail like knowing about an alternative called curbside voting. A voter with a disability can vote curbside; the balloting materials are brought out to the car. We recommend calling ahead if the voter wishes to curbside vote. For example, during early voting, curbside voting is legally available at any branch. However, as a practical matter, some locations are better suited than others (roomier driveways and so on). https://www.votetexas.gov/voters-with-special-needs/ We hope this will be helpful to you. HI. I would like to address issues with the mail-in ballot. It was VERY frustrating. First, the ballot would not fit into the carrier envelope. I had to get a ruler out to refold it and I was finally able to get it in. Second, after getting the carrier envelope into the mailing envelope my Drivers License information could be seen if you hold the envelope correctly. This is not at all secure and I was not very comfortable mailing this in. I am a republican that is disabled. This stupid system is making it more difficult for voters that the state WANTS to vote. Thirdly, I then get an email that the outside envelope was not signed. After all the frustration with trying to get the ballot into the inside envelope I guess I forgot this. Now I am told I have to figure out how to get to McKinney to sign to make my vote valid. There needs to be an electronic means to correct things like this. I got the email to tell me about the problem – why not allow the problem to be corrected through email? Since I have to go to McKinney to sign that means my vote will not be counted. This STINKS!

My daughter is a registered voter and is a student that now lives out of state. She sent her mail-in ballot application at the beginning of October. The application asked for "EITHER" DL number "OR" SSN, so she put in the DL number. Her application was then rejected. We called Comal County and they said "her registration has her SSN, so she needs to put that". First of all, if that were the case then the application should have said so to begin with! That's very misleading. The rejection letter also said that in order to fix that information on her ballot, she could simply log in to the ballot tracker. However, the ballot tracker REQUIRES you to enter BOTH your SSN and DL number, so it denied her access because her voter registration apparently doesn't include SSN yet. So there was no way

After contacting numerous people, we were then instructed to go to txapps.texas.gov and use the "Voter name and address changes" form that is located there. We successfully got into that site and were able to add her SSN and DL number to her voter registration. The following day, she was finally able to get into the ballot tracker yet there was no ballot or mail in application associated with her name. So once again, we called the county. They said that they could see that she added her SSN and DL number and they would" take care of it". The gal on the phone said as soon as she "rejects the ballot again", it will then show up on the ballot tracker and my daughter can then correct her information there and consequently, her original mail in application will then be accepted. This elaborate and confusing process made zero sense to me, but I said "ok". Now, my daughter can no longer log into the ballot tracker. It is again saying that she doesn't exist. This is beyond frustrating and completely unnecessary. My daughter is a registered voter and has already voted in several elections. Now, as a student attending college, you're telling her she cannot vote! She cannot simply resend a new mail-in application because this long and drawn out process wasted too much time and it takes too long for mail to get back and forth from Maine. This is a case of complete incompetence on someone's part and deception on the part of both the rejection letter we received and the State of Texas Secretary of State website. Please let me know if there is anything else we can possibly do to allow my daughter to use her Constitutional right to vote, since she has done everything correctly up to this point but Texas insists on suppressing her vote with its idiotic and deceptive process!

Thank you for contacting the Elections Division of the Office of the Texas Secretary of State.

Senate Bill 1 amended Section 86.002 to require that the carrier envelope include a space that is hidden from view when the envelope is sealed for the voter to enter one of the following: (1) the number of the voter's driver's license, EIC, or personal identification card issued by DPS; (2) the last four digits of the voter's social security number, if the voter has not been issued a DPS number; or (3) a statement that the applicant has not been issued one of these numbers. (Sec. 86.002(g)).

The carrier envelope has been updated to include a space for the required identification information. A photo of the new carrier is provided below. More information is available on votetexas, gov on "Completing and Mailing your Carrier Envelope."

Sec. 86.002. ADDITIONAL BALLOTING MATERIALS. (a) The early voting clerk shall provide an official ballot envelope and carrier envelope with each ballot provided to a voter. If the voter's name appears on the list of registered voters with the notation "S", or a similar notation, or the residence address on the voter's early voting ballot application is not the same as the voter's residence address on the list of registered voters, the clerk shall provide a form for a statement of residence to the voter.

- (b) Before providing the balloting materials to the voter, the clerk shall enter on the carrier envelope the identity and date of the election.
- The clerk shall enter on a carrier envelope the voter's name in printed form, a notation that a statement of residence is enclosed, if applicable, and any other information the clerk determines necessary for proper processing of the ballot.
- (d) The secretary of state shall prescribe instructions to be printed on the balloting materials for the execution and return of a statement of residence. The instructions must include an explanation of the circumstances under which the ballot must be rejected with respect to the statement.
- (e) If the clerk determines that the carrier envelope and other balloting materials will weigh more than one ounce when returned by mail to the clerk, the clerk shall include with the balloting materials a notice of the amount of first class postage that will be required for the return by mail of the carrier envelope and enclosed materials.
 - (f) The clerk shall include with the balloting materials:
- (1) a notice of the clerk's physical address for purposes of return by common or contract carrier or personal delivery in accordance with Section 86.006(a-1); and
- (2) the list of declared write-in candidates for the election, if applicable.
- The carrier envelope must include a space that is hidden from view when the envelope is sealed for the voter to enter the following information:
- (1) the number of the voter's driver's license, election identification certificate, or personal identification card issued by the Department of Public Safety;
- (2) if the voter has not been issued a number described by Subdivision (1), the last four digits of the voter's social security number; or
- (3) a statement by the applicant that the applicant has not been issued a number described by Subdivision (1) or (2).
- A person may use the number of a driver's license, election identification certificate, or personal identification card that has expired for purposes of Subsection (g) if the license or identification is otherwise valid.
- (i) No record associating an individual voter with a ballot may be created.

I am writing you concerning how the new voting law impacts voters who vote by mail. I am asking you to highlight the change in the law that requires that voters who vote by mail indicate on the carrier envelope, before sealing it:

- The number of your driver license, election identification certificate, or personal identification card issued by the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS);
- The last four digits of your social security number, if you have not been issued any of the abovementioned numbers by DPS; OR
- A statement that you have not been issued a number described by (1) or (2) above.

This change should be communicated separately to all voters who request a vote by mail ballot. It should be in bold on all instructions sent with the ballot. Voters should be reminded before the carrier envelope is sealed that they need to provide this information before the seal the envelope.

Your website clearly indicates this change and provides excellent instructions on what is required. I'm concerned that not enough voters will see this information before voting by mail.

I voted in an election earlier this year and my ballot was rejected. I found this out two weeks after the polls closed. The reason my ballot was rejected was because I didn't write my driver's license number underneath the flap that seals the carrier envelope.

I have voted by mail numerous times in Texas. When I received my ballot earlier this year, I looked through the instructions provided. I was not aware that there had been a change in the information required on the carrier envelope, under the flap. After I sealed the carrier envelope, I signed my name where indicated and looked at it one last time before I mailed it.

I feel like I am an engaged and educated voter yet my ballot was rejected. I'm concerned that many other vote by mail ballots will also be rejected because voters are not aware of this change. I feel it is imperative that all of us do everything we can to educate voters of this change so that everyone's vote is counted. Please help to bring awareness to this change.

Sincerely,

I mailed my vote by mail ballot and I got a corrective action paper saying I had not put my drivers license number on the outside envelope. That's wrong because both me and my wife checked our entire inside and outside ballot three times making sure we followed all the new rules. I tried to correct this online as it suggested but was told I didn't exist when I filled out the form and it dismissed me. I checked my registration and that is correct. I called my local office in Georgetown and they said half of the people are unable to get through this website with the same problem I just stated. That's curious. I have just finished cancer treatment and am nervous about going to the Wilco office to turn in the paper. How else can I verify with you my numbers so my ballot counts?

Please respond to voter letting them know the required information for the ballot tracker. They do have the option to contact the county if they are missing one of the items below or have issues.

To track your mail-in ballot, you must enter the following information:

- First Name
- Last Name
- Date of Birth
- The last 4 digits of your Social Security Number
- Your Driver's License or Department of Public Safety Personal ID number
- Your residential address (must appear exactly as listed on your voter registration record. To look up the address listed on your voter registration record, use the 'Am I Registered?' tool)
- City
- ZIP code

If you are having issues accessing the ballot tracker, please contact your county election officer. While our office hosts the website, the county is the one responsible for inputting information into the tracker. Contact information for your county can be found here: https://www.sos.state.tx.us/elections/voter/county.shtml

My mother-in-law has mailed back her ABBM. When I went to the ballot tracker at https://teamrv-mvp.sos.texas.gov/BallotTrackerApp/#/login, the online form gives me the following error message:

"You must enter your Texas driver's license # or DPS PIN"

My mother-in-law is registered using the last 4 digits of her social security number (which I entered into the online tracker form); however, the tracker form is requiring that I also enter a TXDL # or DPS PIN. ELECTION ADVISORYNo. 2022-02

TO: County Elections Officers (County Clerks/Elections Administrators/Tax Assessors-Collectors)

FROM: Keith Ingram, Director of Elections

DATE: January 10, 2022

RE: Instructions and Deadlines for Mailing/Emailing Ballots Under the Federal

"MOVE Act" for Overseas Voters

Pursuant to the federal Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment ("MOVE") Act, the blank official ballot must be mailed or emailed to any voter who submits a Federal Postcard Application ("FPCA"). All FPCAs submitted on or after January 1, 2022 are effective for the 2022 primaries and general election.

Section 84.007, Texas Election Code, provides that if an ABBM is faxed or emailed or if an FPCA is faxed, then the applicant must submit the original application by mail to the early voting clerk so that the early voting clerk receives the original no later than the 4th business day after receiving the emailed or faxed ABBM or faxed FPCA. An FPCA still has independent authority for email delivery under Section 101.052. This means an emailed FPCA is not required to be followed by hardcopy.

Deadline to Mail Overseas Ballots

As a reminder, all ballots to FPCA voters must be mailed on or before the 45th day before election day. The deadline for mailing ballots for the 2022 primary election is Saturday, January 15, 2022. Please note that although the deadline falls on a Saturday, it does not extend to the next business day. Therefore, we recommend mailing your ballots by Friday, January 14, 2022. If you plan on mailing your ballots on Saturday, we recommend that you consult with your local post office to confirm dates/hours their office will be open.

If a FPCA is received after the 45th-day deadline, the ballot should be mailed or emailed not later than the seventh calendar day after the date the FPCA is received. If a regular (non-FPCA) application for a ballot by mail is received after the 45th-day deadline from a voter who is not in the military or overseas, the ballot should be mailed not later than the seventh calendar day after the date the application is accepted. TEX. ELEC. CODE § 86.004(b).

March 1, 2022 General Primary Election

- Saturday, January 15, 2022 Deadline to mail or email ballots to ALL FPCA voters. (We have more information about deadlines to mail ballots in Advisory No. 2021-18 March 1, 2022 Primary Election Law Calendar.)
- Friday, February 18, 2022 Deadline to Receive FPCAs and Deadline to request an emailed, unmarked ballot.
- 3 Business Days after FPCA Voter Activity Submit your FPCA tracking information for new FPCAs received, FPCA ballots mailed and received to the Office of the Secretary of State in order that the Ballot by Mail Tracker is populated with timely information. As a reminder, offline counties can update FPCA information via file import, online counties may update directly in TEAM.

May 24, 2022 Primary Runoff Election

- Saturday, April 9, 2022 Deadline to mail or email ballots to ALL FPCA voters. (We have more information about deadlines to mail ballots in Advisory No. 2021-18 March 1, 2022 Primary Election Law Calendar.)
- Friday, May 13, 2022 Deadline to Receive FPCAs and Deadline to request an emailed, unmarked ballot.
- 3 Business Days after FPCA Voter Activity Submit your FPCA tracking information for new FPCAs received, FPCA ballots mailed and FPCA ballots received to the Office of the Secretary of State in order that the Ballot by Mail Tracker is populated with timely information. As a reminder, offline counties can update FPCA information via file import; online counties may update directly in TEAM.

November 8, 2022 General Election for State and County Officers

- Saturday, September 24, 2022 Deadline to mail or email ballots to ALL FPCA voters. (We will have more information about deadlines to mail ballots in our November 8, 2022 Election Law Calendar.)
- Friday, October 28, 2022 Deadline to Receive FPCAs and Deadline to request an emailed, unmarked ballot.
- 3 Business Days after FPCA Voter Activity Submit your FPCA tracking information for new FPCAs received, FPCA ballots mailed and FPCA ballots received to the Office of the Secretary of State in order that the Ballot by Mail Tracker is populated with timely information. If you need an updated spreadsheet for submission, please contact a member of the Voter Registration team as soon as possible.

Emergency Ballots

We would also like to take this time to remind you that you have the authority to create emergency ballots. If you do not receive your ballots in time to meet the 45-day deadline, you may create your own paper ballots or, if you have a copy of the ballot in the Adobe .pdf format, which is often provided by the printer for your proofing, you may forward a copy to the voter. If you have a physical copy of the ballot and a scanner, you could scan the ballot and attach a copy of the scanned ballot to the email to the voter. If you have a copy of the ballot in Microsoft Word, you could attach a copy in that format. The main key is that it should be in a digital format that the average voter will be able to open and print.

Instructions for Emailing Ballots

Any voter who submits an FPCA and requests that the ballot be emailed, must be emailed a blank official ballot. The voter should be emailed a signature sheet and detailed instructions on returning their voted mail ballot. Below you will find information related to email instructions which we encourage you to use and modify as necessary for your county:

Instructions to the Early Voting Clerk

When an early voting clerk emails the balloting materials to a MOVE voter, the early voting clerk should take the following steps:

- 1. Paste MOVE Act Email Ballot Instructions into the email. The MOVE Act Email Ballot Instructions form contains several instances where the early voting clerk will need to add attachments and personalize the email to make sure that MOVE voters receive all instructions necessary for completing and returning the marked ballots, as appropriate to their early voting clerk.
- 2. Attach Ballot or Insert a Link to the Ballot and List of Certified Write-In Candidates (if applicable). The Early Voting Clerk will need to attach an Unmarked Ballot (appropriate to the voter's specific precinct) and the List of Certified Write-In Candidates, if applicable. The Early Voting Clerk may insert a link to the unmarked ballot, as the ballot is "static," which means that voter can mark and print the ballot without being connected to the Internet.
- 3. Attach all applicable instructions. The Early Voting Clerk must remember to include the ballot instructions for the applicable method of voting and the signature sheet (PDF) as prescribed by the Office of the Secretary of State.
- 4. Insert early voting clerk contact information in the attached notice to voter. In the email instructions to the voter, the early voting clerk should include the clerk's telephone number, email and mailing address in the designated areas for MOVE voters to use if they need additional assistance in completing or returning their marked ballot by mail.
- 5. The early voting clerk MUST provide the voter with a signature sheet that contains a place for the voter to include the required personal identification number.
- 6. The early voting clerk MUST provide the voter with information about mailing the voted ballot back to the early voting clerk.
 - The voter can mail their FPCA, ballot or FWAB postage-free using a proper return envelope. Below are the envelopes prescribed by FVAP for this purpose:
 - Standard U.S. Envelope Size (#10)
 - FPCA Postage-Paid Return Envelope
 - Ballot Return and FWAB Postage-Paid Return Envelope

- Ballot Return and FWAB Security Envelope
- Standard Europe Envelope Size (C4)
 - FPCA Postage-Paid Return Envelope
 - Ballot Return and FWAB Postage-Paid Return Envelope

NOTE: Starting in 2022, you must send the signature sheet to FPCA email ballot voters, as the voters must include their required personal identification number for review by the early voting ballot board.

- 7. The county has two choices with regard to the carrier envelope or mailing envelope for voters to use when returning the voted ballot:
 - The county may rely on the voter to print the carrier envelope from the link provided on the email; or
 - If the county has access to the appropriate software and the technological ability, it may include, as an attachment with the unmarked ballot, a carrier envelope file that has the voter's name in the upper left hand corner and the county's return mailing address to assist the MOVE voter in returning their marked ballot by mail.

Sample Email Instructions to Voter

The text below contains a sample email you may use to provide voters with their balloting materials. Please note that the email contains information that must be personalized to your county.

Dear FPCA Voter

Per your request and in accordance with the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment (MOVE) Act, this correspondence includes your unmarked ballot for the upcoming election. This email also includes instructions for processing the ballot, and a list of certified write-in candidates, if applicable.

If, after reading the instructions, you have questions regarding the completion or return mailing of this ballot, please contact your early voting clerk at [insert county telephone number] or by email at [insert county email address].

Note: Your marked ballot must be received in our office by regular mail on or before 7:00 p.m. on Election Day. If you are a non-military overseas citizen submitting your ballot from outside the United States, the ballot must be postmarked by Election Day and received by the county elections office no later than the 5th day after Election Day. If you are a member of the military, Merchant Marine or National Guard, the ballot must be received by the 6th day after election day. If your ballot is not received by the applicable deadline, it will be rejected and will not be counted for this election.

Instructions for Processing the Emailed Ballot

- Open the attachment designated as the unmarked ballot, or click on the link in your email to access your ballot.
- Follow the ballot instructions provided for marking your ballot.

- Place the marked ballot in a secrecy (or security) envelope. An envelope may have been provided, or you may use any envelope you have at your disposal. If you cannot provide a secrecy envelope at all, don't worry; the lack of a secrecy envelope will not invalidate your ballot.
- Print out and complete the signature sheet (PDF). The signature sheet MUST be completed and returned with the voted ballot. The signature sheet contains information that is required for the Early Voting Ballot Board to verify when reviewing your ballot.
- Place your marked ballot contained in the secrecy envelope, and the signature sheet in your carrier envelope. Note that the carrier envelope is "postage-free" if mailed within the U.S. postal system, including APO and FPO addresses, U.S. Embassies and Consulates for use by absentee voters covered under UOCAVA. You are not required to use the "postage-free" envelope. You can place the marked ballot and signature sheet in a separate envelope and affix the proper postage for mailing.
- Put your name and current mailing address in the upper left hand corner of your mailing envelope or carrier envelope, if it has not already been pre-printed by our office. Also, put the county address in the middle of the envelope (if not already provided for you).
- Mail marked ballot to our county elections office: [county official, please insert your mailing address here for affixing to the federal envelope, if used].

Instructions for Marking the Emailed Ballot

• Make sure you follow the instructions provided by our office for marking the ballot and for voting for write-in candidates, if any.

Federal Write-In Ballot Process

- If you have submitted an FPCA by the state application deadline of the 11th day before election day AND you do not feel you can return your ballot by the deadline, you are entitled to use a "FWAB" -- a "Federal Write-in Absentee Ballot" -- to vote in federal elections only.
- The Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP) provides a Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) wizard. According to FVAP, this wizard will seamlessly, intuitively, and easily guide a military or overseas voter through the State-specific requirements for completing the FWAB, including providing the voter all federal candidate choices. Here is a link to their website: http://www.fvap.gov/.

Principles

The League of Women Voters believes in representative government and in the individual liberties established in the Constitution of the United States. The League of Women Voters of the United States believes that all powers of the U.S. government should be exercised within the constitutional framework of a balance among the three branches of government: legislative, executive, and judicial.

The League of Women Voters believes that democratic government depends upon informed and active participation in government and requires that governmental bodies protect the citizen's right to know by giving adequate notice of proposed actions, holding open meetings, and making public records accessible.

The League of Women Voters believes every citizen should be protected in the right to vote; every person should have access to free public education that provides equal opportunity for all; and no person or group should suffer legal, economic, or administrative discrimination.

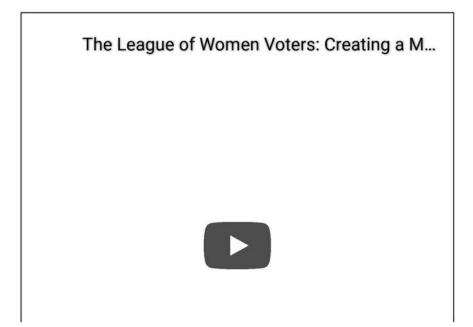

The League of Women Voters believes efficient and economical government requires compet personnel, the clear assignment of responsibility, adequate financing, and coordination among the different agencies and levels of government.

The League of Women Voters believes responsible government should be responsive to the will of the people; government should maintain an equitable and flexible system of taxation, promote the conservation and development of natural resources in the public interest, share in the solution of economic and social problems that affect the general welfare, promote a sound economy, and adopt domestic policies that facilitate the solution of international problems.

The League of Women Voters believes cooperation with other nations is essential in the search for solutions to world problems and that development of international organization and international law is imperative in the promotion of world peace.

League of Women Voters of Texas Strategic Planning Goals 2022 - 2027

Achieve a Free and Fair Democracy

- Strengthen relationships with state and local election officials and like-minded community organizations to effect change
- Advocate with legislators and take legal action as necessary to make voting easier
- Educate local Leagues on best practices to achieve free and fair elections in their communities.

Increase Participation in Government

- Promote a diverse pool of people running for office at all levels
- Increase awareness of what elected officials and appointed bodies do
- Expand the pool of qualified election workers
- Improve government access and transparency especially for underserved communities
- Highlight good government practices and hold government accountable

Expand Voter Participation in Texas

- Increase voter registration rates
- Expand Get Out The Vote programs with partner organizations
- Broaden VOTE411 to cover more elections in unserved communities
- Identify barriers and customize approaches to reach low-propensity voters
- Make engagement in elections the norm, embedded in the culture of communities.

Create a League that is Diverse, Equitable & Inclusive

- Recruit board members and leaders with a variety of backgrounds, and who represent geographic, social-economic and racial diversity
- Diversify our membership to reflect the diversity in our state
- Make the League accessible and relevant to Texans, including diverse communities, youth, rural residents and people with disabilities.

League Principles

League Principles are concepts of government to which all Leagues subscribe.

They are the beliefs shared by League members everywhere. Principles are the basis upon which national, state, and local program is adopted.

The Principles themselves may be used to take action at any level of government.

However, because they are broad statements, such action is usually taken in conjunction with current League positions. Additional information on their use is found in Impact on Issues, the program publication of the League of Women Voters of the United States (LWVUS).

The League of Women Voters believes:

- In representative government and in the individual liberties established in the Constitution of the United States.
- That all powers of the U.S. government should be exercised within the constitutional framework of a balance among the three branches of government: legislative, executive, and judicial.
- That democratic government depends upon informed and active participation in government and requires that governmental bodies protect the citizen's right to know by giving adequate notice of proposed actions, holding open meetings, and making public records accessible.
- That every citizen should be protected in the right to vote; that every person should have access to free public education that provides equal opportunity for all; and that no person or group should suffer legal, economic, or administrative discrimination.
- That efficient and economical government requires competent personnel, the clear assignment or responsibility, adequate financing, and coordination among the different agencies and levels of government.
- That responsible government should be responsive to the will of the people; that government should maintain an equitable and flexible system of taxation, promote the conservation and development of natural resources in the public interest, share in the solution of economic and social problems that affect the general welfare, promote a sound economy, and adopt domestic policies that facilitate the solution of international problems.
- That cooperation with other nations is essential in the search for solutions to world problems, and that the development of international organization and international law is imperative in the promotion of world peace.

What is Advocacy and Issues?

This publication contains all the positions of the League of Women Voters of Texas (LWVTX), including an explanation and a history of all state advocacy since the adoption of the position. It is intended for LWVTX Issue Chairs, local League presidents, and any other member who is interested in League advocacy. It will help local League leaders understand and act on state League program. Advocacy and Issues is updated after each Texas legislative session and each biennial League convention.

What is program?

The word program has a special meaning in the League. It is not a meeting or a series of speakers. League program consists of the government issues selected by League members for study and – after consensus is reached – action.

LWVTX may also take action at the state level using LWVUS positions, and the League may not take action if we do not have a position. The LWVUS positions that we regularly use are listed at the end of We Support and our LWVTX positions, with a summary of our action.

What is program review?

In order to keep LWVTX positions current, certain positions are periodically updated. Members, issue chairs, and/or the state board recommend reviews during state program planning. The appropriate issue chair and/or a board-appointed committee carry out the review. If the committee recommends any changes and the board approves, delegates at the next Convention or Statewide Conference must approve them. Delegates readopt all positions at each biennial Convention with any approved amendments.

A Few Uses for Advocacy and Issues

This handbook may be used to:

- Educate local presidents, program/action vice presidents, and other members about state positions.
- Find state positions that may be used as a basis for action on local issues.
- Find additional background when responding to Action Alerts or other calls for action.
- Educate members about state program during the Program Planning process. (During Program Planning in the fall before the Convention, members will recommend issues for study and state positions to be reviewed or amended.)
- Help members with program language when they write letters, speeches, news releases, etc.

Action Guidelines for Local Leagues

Action is our League effort to bring about governmental change based on the positions we derive through member study and consensus. Because we are a multilevel organization with positions at each level, we must:

- Coordinate our action efforts to speak with one voice.
- Choose Priority Issues at all levels in order to allocate resources effectively and maximize political impact.

Action Guidelines for All Leagues

- Leagues act only when we have a local, state, or national position or are acting under League principles.
- Leagues never lobby in opposition to a League position.
- Lobby only your own representatives unless otherwise directed.
- Local Leagues may only lobby at the local government level without asking for state or national authorization; any local, state, or national position may be used to lobby at the local level.
- Only the president may speak for the League, unless another person is authorized by the president.

Advocacy Rules of Thumb

- Generally, local Leagues advocate to local officials, the state League advocates to state officials, and the national League advocates to national officials.
- If a local League wishes to advocate a local position to a state or national official, they must obtain authorization from LWVTX or LWVUS.
- The state League must obtain authorization to advocate a national official.
- For permission to lobby national officials: https://www.lwv.org/federal-action-request-form
- For permission to lobby state officials: lwvtexas@lwvtexas.org

Before Taking Action on an Issue, Ask Yourself

- Under what position do you wish to act: local, state, national? League Principles?
- Is authorization needed from LWVTX, LWVUS, or other local Leagues before you act? (See Action Guide on next page.)
- Who should receive copies of your letter, testimony, etc.? (See Action Guide on next page.)
- How can my League promote the action to get the best response from the community-letters to the editor, social media, website, email?

Action Alerts

There are three sources of action alerts: LWVUS, LWVTX, and your local League. Action in response to these requests is expected and does not require authorization.

- An Action Alert means your League's help is critically needed. Leagues are expected to respond to action alerts. Action alerts provide specific instructions.
 - LWVTX sends Action Alerts to all local League members by email and posts them on social media and lwvtexas.org. Action alerts give information on pending state legislation or governmental actions, and a sample letter to be sent to your elected representative or a legislative committee.
 - LWVUS sends Action Alerts to the League's online grassroots supporter list and state and local League presidents. These detail the subject under consideration, the proposed action steps, and the officials to be contacted.
 - All local League presidents are expected to respond to Action Alerts on behalf of their local League.

When You Initiate Action

Local action you initiate may require contacting officials shared with other Leagues. Or you may wish to contact officials other than your own. If so, you must contact the other local Leagues who are affected. For example:

- LWV Houston Area wants to testify before a state legislative committee holding a hearing in Houston on land use and protection of critical areas. They believe this is a good opportunity to advocate the League's state land use position. After authorization by LWVTX, they are ready to act.
- LWV Tarrant County wants to appear before the North Central Texas Council of - Governments on a regional issue. After consulting other Leagues in the region, they speak at the Council of Governments meeting.

Action Guide: What to Do When Your Local League Initiates Action Before a...

Local government or official in your League area only (E.g., city council, mayor, planning commission, school board)

✓ A local League board decision; copy action to local League files

Regional agency or official which is shared with other local Leagues (E.g., common city government or special purpose district, council of governments, regional task force)

- ✓ A local League board decision; copy action to local League files
- Requires authorization from other local Leagues affected by this action; copy to these local Leagues

State government or official (E.g., state representative or senator, governor, state agency)

- ✓ A local League board decision; copy action to local League files
- ✓ Requires authorization from LWVTX advocacy committee chair or president; copy action to state office by email to lwvtexas@lwvtexas.org

Federal government or official (E.g., member of Congress, federal agency, U.S. President)

- ✓ A local League board decision; copy action to local League files
- ✓ Requires authorization from LWVTX advocacy committee chair or president; copy action to state office by email to lwvtexas@lwvtexas.org
- ✓ Requires authorization from LWVUS (sometimes LWVTX can authorize); copy action to national office and to state office by email to lwvtexas@lwvtexas.org

LWVUS Recommendations for Taking Action

Speaking with One Voice

"Speaking with one voice" is one of the most important tenets of the League. The national League is responsible for determining strategies and action policies that ensure that the League's message on national issues is consistent throughout the country. Similarly, state Leagues are responsible for a consistent state message, and local Leagues must cooperate with one another to ensure that regional issues are addressed in a manner consistent with neighboring Leagues. Typically, the president of the national, state, or local League is the only person who speaks for the League in an official capacity, unless another person has been designated as the official spokesperson on a specific issue. This may be a League expert, a senior staff person, or a former board member. The key is that this designation is explicitly made by the appropriate Board. This helps to ensure that the League speaks with one voice. which is essential for our effectiveness as an advocacy and lobbying organization.

Advocacy vs. Lobbying

Advocacy is a broader concept than lobbying. Advocacy activities are often considered "educational." This is the case even when only one side of an issue is presented if no action on a piece of legislation is requested. Such activities can include: 1) developing public policy briefs that analyze issues and provide detailed information and recommendations for addressing them through specific reforms and 2) providing forums for discussing issues and educating policymakers and the public. Speaking in support of the organization is also advocating, i.e., for the overall cause of the organization.

Lobbying is defined as an attempt to influence specific legislation, both legislation that has been introduced and specific legislation that has been proposed. Lobbying includes actions that transmit a point of view on a specific piece of legislation to elected officials or their staffs, as well as action urging the public to contact their legislators about a specific piece of legislation. It also includes communications to the general public expressing a view on specific referenda or other ballot measures.

Applying Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) Lens to Our Work

The DEI lens is a way of examining a program, a process, a product, or otherwise in relation to how it will be perceived by a variety of communities, voices, and perspectives, and what barriers may exist that are preventing it from being equitable or inclusive to everyone. All League work should be examined through this lens to best ensure that we are reaching the full diversity within League communities and are being equitable and inclusive in how we approach and execute our work. Applying a DEI lens asks that you consider the following key questions:

- 1. Who is involved in the process? Leagues should consider whether this work impacts a group or community, and is their voice represented and how diverse is the group of decision makers who represent a variety of relevant viewpoints.
- 2. Who will be impacted? Leagues should consider who benefits from this, how it helps meet the needs of underserved voters, and how we address various specific marginalized groups and how they'll be impacted.
- 3. What are the intended and unintended outcomes? Leagues should consider the issue we are trying to solve, what we hope will happen, what the potential negative impacts are, who could be hurt by this, what data or evidence supports this, and how might this be perceived by others.
- 4. Does this align with our vision for an equitable and inclusive organization? Leagues should consider how equity is addressed, what barriers might this place in the way of achieving equity, and how does this impact the organization's culture.
- 5. What changes could be made to make this more equitable? Leagues should consider what the shortand long-term goals are, what policies or bylaws need to be added or amended, what the benefits to members are, and what the benefits are for partners and/or members of the community.

Please consider downloading LWVUS DEI lens resource at https://www.lwv.org/league-management/dei-resources/dei-lens for inclusion in your planning documents.

Leagues should be aware that this process will take more time in the beginning, but as the DEI lens is regularly applied it will become easier to move through the questions, identify opportunities, and react in a way that bolsters DEI. In instances where Leagues go through the questions and find that the DEI lens is not present fully or partially, Leagues should work to include as many factors as possible and consider obstacles that led to gaps in one area versus others and how to continue to build upon this work anytime the League is taking action. When applying the DEI lens to events, Leagues should consult the LWVUS DEI checklist, https://www.lwv.org/sites/defBault/files/2019-10/deichecklist_module2.pdf.

The League is a multi-issue organization and we hold positions on issues at the national, state, and local levels. These positions are updated periodically, and are readopted at each League convention. We use these positions for advocacy at all levels of the League. Each position is detailed in our publication Advocacy & Issues, with a history of our advocacy on the issue. A complete statement of LWVUS positions can be found in Impact On Issues.

League of Women Voters of Texas Positions

Government. Achieve an efficient, effective, responsive state governmental system through constitutional revision and legislative action.

Campaign Finance/Ethics. Eliminate excessive and/or inappropriate spending and limits to contributions to promote equitable competition among candidates. Strengthen accountability and combat undue influence.

Natural Resources.

Energy. Support policies that reduce energy growth rates, emphasize energy conservation, and encourage the use of renewable resources.

Hazardous Waste. Promote policies for solid and hazardous waste, including reduced generation, reuse and recycling, and safe transportation, handling, and disposal.

Program Study/Review/Update

Adopted by Convention 2020

Review and update of the LWVTX Voting Rights/Election Laws position.

- a. Focus. Assess the impact of the current state of election administration and technology, including voting process protections.
- b. Scope. 1) Review and possibly update the following Facts and Issues from our 2010 study of Voting Procedures to Increase Voter Participation: Vote by Mail, Election Day Centralized Voting (now called Countywide Polling Place Program), Instant Runoff Voting, and Military and Overseas Internet Voting.
 - 2) Develop new Facts and Issues on Physical and Cybersecurity Measures and Election Equipment, and Measures to Increase Confidence in Elections.
- c. Rationale. This update was recommended by Issue Chair Cinde Weatherby. Since 2010 several of the recommendations from the past study have been implemented in Texas or elsewhere. Technology has rapidly evolved in the past nine years, while the potential for interference in elections looms large. The work will be aided by a recent LWV Wisconsin study completed in late 2018, as well as by a current ongoing multi-state League study of cybersecurity and elections led by LWV Oregon.

Review and update of the LWVTX Immigration position.

- a. Focus. Update our Immigration position to address current issues related to the treatment of immigrants in Texas.
- b. Scope. 1) Study the impact of family separation, detention centers for men, women, and children; all persons including children without legal representation; all persons including children without adequate medical care, food, heat, and basic comforts.
 - 2) Study the effects of racial profiling and the cooperation between ICE and local law enforcement, as dictated by SB 4 (2017).
 - 3) Study the covert, chartered, pre-dawn ICE flights that transport refugees to Guatemala.
- c. Rationale. This update was recommended by LWV Comal Area and Issue Chair Gloria Suarez Sasser. The current position on Immigration is now 23 years old, and it focuses on immigrants after they are allowed into the United States. Today issues of immigration have changed, and our position needs to reflect the current state of immigration in Texas.

2020-2022 LWVTX Program Positions

With complete wording, explanation, and history of our advocacy

I. Government

A. Campaign Finance/Ethics

1992, 1999 (See also LWVUS position "Money In Politics" in Impact On Issues)

Campaign Finance

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports laws and practices relating to political campaign finance that eliminate excessive and/or inappropriate spending and promote equitable competition among candidates. Appropriate measures include:

- A limit on the total amount of campaign contributions a candidate may accept from a person or an individual political action committee (PAC).
- A limit on the total amount a candidate may accept from PACs, individuals, and out-of-state contributors.
- A limit on the total amount of contributions a candidate may accept.
- A limit on the time during which a candidate may accept contributions.
- A limit on what a candidate may spend to get elected.
- Comparable media public service time and/or space made available to candidates who agree to limit their campaign expenditures.
- Requirements that campaign contributions be used only for campaign expenses.
- Responsibility of the media to:
 - Encourage candidates to discuss issues.
 - Report inconsistencies in public statements by candidates.
 - Assign reporters with appropriate expertise to cover campaigns.
 - Seek independent verification of candidate allegations.
- Responsibility of candidates to:
 - o Articulate their positions on issues.
 - Verify allegations prior to their release.
 - Control the conduct of their campaigns by staff and consultants.
 - Be accountable for advertising decisions.
 - Voluntarily limit campaign spending.

Ethics

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports limits on the contributions that can be accepted by political parties in Texas and supports enforcement of regulations governing their use.

The League of Women Voters supports public financing for state elected offices in Texas. In order to receive public funding, candidates would agree to limits on private contributions and campaign spending.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports changes in laws, practices, and policies governing political campaigns in order to protect citizens' right to know; strengthen accountability in financial reporting; combat corruption and undue influence; and promote fairness and accuracy on the part of candidates, public officials, former officeholders, lobbyists, and the media.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports full, timely disclosure through electronic filing of required finance reports. Specifically, the League supports:

- Requirements that candidates report or disclose:
 - The total amount of contributions during a year.
 - In-kind contributions.
 - Personal finances, income distributions, and assets/liabilities.
 - Any funds deposited in a political account.

- Ethical standards that include:
 - A minimum time before a former elected official can become a paid lobbyist.
 - A requirement that lobbyists disclose gifts to candidates.
 - A fairness code governing the conduct of individuals and groups engaged in election campaign.

Explanation: Campaign Finance/Ethics

The LWVTX was founded in 1919 to carry on the work of the Texas Equal Suffrage Association after the ratification of what was then called the Susan B. Anthony amendment, giving women the right to vote in Texas. Many early activists felt that efforts to promote informed and active citizenship were a necessary and logical next step for those involved in the suffrage movement (Humphrey, J. G., 1988, A Texas Suffragist). These efforts are still part of the League's mission.

In recent years, the breakdown of confidence in the integrity of the electoral process in Texas and nationwide sparked an interest among League members in examining the political campaign process and its effect on voter disillusionment and apathy. These considerations led delegates to Convention 1991 to adopt a study of the Political Campaign Process in Texas, which would evaluate political campaign laws, practices, and finances, and their ethical implications. Facts & Issues: How They Run, The Political Campaign Process in Texas, was produced by the study committee and circulated to members, public officials, and other interested persons. Consensus was reached in the fall of 1992, and the state board announced the position in November of that year.

During the Periodic Program Review process of 1997-98, the committee suggested additions to the 1992 position that would allow the League to advocate for public financing of campaigns and for better disclosure procedures of campaign funding. The additional positions were adopted at Convention 1999.

History: Campaign Finance/Ethics

1991. In the 1991 Legislature the League supported the creation of the Texas Ethics Commission as originally introduced. This support was based on the LWVUS position calling for an independent body to monitor and enforce laws concerning the election of public officials. However, the bill that finally passed had been considerably weakened, and the League decided to oppose the proposed constitutional amendment on the November 1991 ballot because the prescribed method of appointing members to the commission was flawed. The amendment passed, however, and the commission was created in January 1992. The League closely monitored the proceedings of the Ethics Commission during its first two years of existence, 1992-93.

1993-94. During the 1993 Legislative Session, Political Campaign Process was one of the League's priority issues, and an advocacy paper, "Take Back the System," was published. LWVTX supported bills that would have imposed limits on campaign contributions and expenditures, working in coalition with groups such as Common Cause and Public Citizen. These bills did not pass.

Several bills were introduced which would have modified the commission's regulation of lobbyists. These proposals were a mixed bag, from the League's point of view; none were enacted. After the session ended, a League representative was asked to serve on a Rules Advisory Task Force to evaluate the rule-making authority of the Ethics Commission, including that of regulating lobbyists' activities.

The League also joined a coalition of public interest groups that asked candidates running for the Texas Supreme Court, Court of Criminal Appeals, and Courts of Civil Appeals to sign a Fair Campaign Practices Pledge. This initiative was undertaken in response to concerns expressed by citizens, attorneys, and judges about special interest contributions to judicial campaigns and the possible effects of such gifts on judicial decisions.

1995. The notion that justice was for sale came to a head in the 1994 General Election and helped create a climate in which campaign finance reform had the attention of the 74th Legislature. A law was passed that limits the period of time in which judicial candidates can accept contributions and the amount of money they can accept from specific sources, including law firms and political action committees (PACs). The measure also provides for voluntary limits on candidates' expenditures. The LWVTX supported the Judicial Campaign Fairness Act and looks to it as a step toward more comprehensive reform in the next session.

Campaign finance reform and other aspects of the political campaign process in Texas will continue to be active issues in the foreseeable future, and the LWVTX will maintain an active role in advocating its positions.

1997. Although many bills relating to election laws/campaign finance were filed during this session, few met with success. The League published an advocacy paper, "Take Back the System: Campaign Finance Reform in Texas," and also actively supported a bipartisan bill to move primary elections from March to May. Using testimony presented to the House Elections Committee, the League distributed information to each member of the House prior to floor debate. The bill passed the House, but failed to pass in the Senate.

1999. Disclosure of campaign funding through the filing of campaign finance reports became the focus of League efforts during the legislative session. The League was successful in achieving passage of a measure that mandates that campaign finance reports be filed electronically and published by the Ethics Commission on the Internet. A new advocacy paper was produced for this session and is listed below.

2001. Limits on campaign contributions and expenditures continue to elude us. Very few bills were filed in the 77th legislative session that would provide for limits, and those that were, did not get hearings. Both political parties continued to support closing loopholes in existing disclosure laws. Comprehensive bills were filed in the House and the Senate, but differences over including identification of contributors' occupations and employers (and other issues) sent the bill to a conference committee. No agreement was reached and the bill died in committee. The League was active throughout the process providing testimony in favor of the House version, and urging passage out of the conference committee.

2003. The Ethics Commission was due its first review by the Sunset Review Commission since its establishment in 1991. In anticipation of legislation to be presented in the 78th Session of the Texas Legislature, the League joined Show Me the Money, a coalition composed of 60 diverse organizations throughout the state. Of these, six organizations, the LWVTX, Common Cause, Campaigns for People, Public Citizen, The Baptist Christian Life Commission, and Texans for Public Justice, developed strategies during the interim to prepare for legislation in the upcoming legislative session.

House Speaker Craddick appointed a Select Committee on Ethics, which introduced a comprehensive bill that outlined reforms to make the Ethics Commission more effective and included strengthening disclosure laws. The League testified in favor of the bill although it did not include all the reforms the coalition and we would have liked. The bill passed the committee unanimously, and subsequently passed the House. However, the Senate Government Organization Committee produced and passed a watered down bill, despite testimony presented by the League and other coalition members. The watered down bill passed the full Senate. As a result, the bill was referred to a Conference Committee to settle House and Senate differences. Fortunately, the Conference Committee restored the provisions that had been deleted by the Senate.

The Governor signed the bill. These provisions will:

- Restrict contributions until after the deadline for the governor to veto bills.
- Require disclosure of cash balances.
- Require reporting of occupation and employer of large donors.
- Require filing of campaign reports electronically.
- Prohibit lawyers to represent paying clients before state agencies.
- Require disclosure by lawyers of trial delays during the legislative session.

During the 79th Legislative Session, a coalition of diverse, statewide organizations concerned about the unlimited amounts of money used to finance our state's elections will focus on:

- Closing corporate and union money loopholes.
- Setting reasonable individual and aggregate contribution limits.

- Improving the effectiveness and independence of the Texas Ethics Commission.
- Opening the legislative process and recording legislative votes.

2005. In preparation for the 79th Legislative Session, the LWVTX collaborated with a coalition of over 60 diverse, statewide organizations, including both political parties. There was great concern about the unlimited amounts of money used to finance campaigns, and concern about unnamed corporations that contributed undisclosed millions of dollars to defeat candidates with mass mailings, negative issue ads, flyers, and phone banks. This appeared to circumvent the century-old Texas state law prohibiting corporations and unions from contributing funds for administrative costs to engage in political activity. The fundraisers claimed that the issue ads were educational because they did not use the words for "for" or "against" the candidates they were targeting. These activities were concentrated in the last 60 days before the primary election of 2002. The proponents also claimed that the definition of administrative costs in the Texas Election Code was unclear. As a result, the coalition agreed to focus on:

- Closing the cooperate and union money loopholes
- Setting reasonable individual and aggregate corporate contribution limits
- Improving the effectiveness and independence of the Texas Ethics Commission
- Opening the legislative process and recording non-ceremonial votes

During the session, the group prioritized its focus primarily on closing the corporate and union money loopholes. Working with Representative Eiland (D-Galveston) and Representative Smith (R-Euless) that ensured bipartisan support, a bill was filed, HB 1348, that would specifically define administrative costs as those incurred in the normal course of business, would prohibit acceptance of contributions and make expenditures 60 days before a primary election, ban sham issue ads 60 days before the primary election, and would prohibit expenditures from PACs not connected to unions and corporation. Over 90 bipartisan House members signed on as cosponsors.

A subcommittee of the Elections Committee held a public hearing in which the League presented testimony and was left pending with a substitute. The Elections Committee did not hold a hearing. Consequently, a bold maneuver to bypass the Elections Committee and debate the bill on the House floor was attempted but was defeated when Representative Keel, one of the cosponsors, scuttled the bill on the basis that it bypassed the legislative process. Subsequently, the Elections Committee held a formal hearing and defeated the bill 4-3. The bottom line is that the bill did not have the support of the House leadership, most of who benefited from the unreported funds given by the unnamed corporations. It is very likely that the issue will be visited in the 80th Legislative Session.

2006 (Legislative Interim). The LWVTX joined with Common Cause Texas and Texans for Public Justice in efforts to make the state government more transparent and accountable. The groups, acknowledging that reforms are needed to strengthen Texas' campaign finance laws and insure open and independent government, free from the influence and dominance of special interests, developed a list of five, nonpartisan reforms:

- Place a $100,000 aggregate limit on individual contributions
- Close the revolving door between the legislature and lobbyists
- Keep judges independent by appointment and retention election
- Record all nonceremonial legislative votes
- Create an independent redistricting commission

2007. In the 80th Legislative Session, the League, in collaboration with Common Cause, Texas for Public Justice, Public Citizen, Baptist Christian Life Commission, and Gray Panthers, focused on two of the five campaign finance issues agreed to in the 2006 interim. The group advocated and provided testimony for three bills limiting individual contributions. HB 110 (Strama) broke down in categories the amount the limits would impose on candidates for the executive branch, state senator, state representatives, and state board of education. HB 111 (Villereal) would impose limits of $ 100,000 on the total amount an individual could contribute to a candidate in an election cycle. HB 1085 (T. Smith) prohibited the use of corporate or union funds to pay for phony issue ads. Closing the revolving door HB 602 (Howard) required legislators who leave office to wait 2 years before becoming lobbyists. None of these bills made it out of the Elections Committee.

Two disclosure bills we supported did pass although without the governor's signature. These bills provided some measure of success in the session. The Texas Ethics Commission ruled it had no authority to report the value of cash gifts given to elected officials unless the legislature passed required legislation. To correct this, HB 158 (Naishtat) would require the reporting the value of cash gifts. Both houses of the legislature passed it. SB 64 (Zaffirini), passed by both houses, requires a general-purpose committee to file additional reports 9 days before an election until noon on Election Day. This would curtail the "late train" donations before an election in which the public was not previously informed.

2009. In the 81st Legislative Session, not much progress was made to reform the way political campaigns are financed. Four minor bills supported by the League were passed by both Houses and were signed by the governor. Two of the bills were related to the Texas Ethics Commission: HB 3216 provides for immediate notification to respondents of complaints either electronically or by telephone and by written notice after 5 days; HB 3218 requires that a sworn complaint must include the person's name, address, telephone number, email address if known, be a resident of the State of Texas, and include other pertinent information. These reforms standardize the complaint process.

SB 1152 prohibits accepting political contributions in state buildings. HB 4060 limits the time when judicial candidates can accept contributions even if the candidate is unopposed. While these four bills could be called piece-meal legislation, they do tighten up some loose ends of the political campaign process. More comprehensive legislation such as HB 105, the Texas Fair Campaign Act, HB 391 and SB 246, The Clean Elections Act, would impose limits on individual campaign contributions for elected state offices. The League supported these measures.

2011. In the wake of the most expensive election in the state's history, it should come as no surprise that campaign finance reform was a low priority this session. Only one League-supported campaign finance bill (HB 336) passed. It requires school boards to post candidate financial information on their websites, beginning September 1, 2011. Strangely, a very similar bill that focused on city and county elections failed to get out of committee.

2013. On May 1, 2014, the House State Affairs Committee held an interim hearing on campaign finance disclosure. This hearing was to revisit the issue that was addressed in the 2013 session by SB 346 (Seliger), a bill that was passed by both legislative chambers but was vetoed by the governor after adjournment.

Currently, names of contributors who give directly to candidates and officeholders must be disclosed, but certain types of political PACS are not required to disclose the names of their contributors. The League believes that voters have the right to know the names of any person or entity that spends money to influence elections.

At the hearing, a Utah legislator testified about a political scandal in his state in which members of his own political party forced the Utah Attorney General to step down after an investigation conducted. The investigation revealed that much of his campaign money, although "laundered" four times, came from the payday loan industry after he had made promises to rule in their favor. The Utah legislator urged the Texas Legislature to pass stringent disclosure measures.

While the LWVTX does not believe that disclosure is the only remedy to a government answerable to the people and not just big donors, we see it as an essential part of democracy. We expect to work with the legislature in the next session to get this measure passed.

2015. The governor stated that one of his five priorities for the 84th Legislature was to address ethics reform. The LWVTX worked with the Texas Anti-Corruption Campaign (TACC), a partnership of several organizations, including Common Cause, Public Citizen, and Clean Elections Texas, to track and support serious ethics reform bills.

More than 100 bills were filed relating to government ethics. Just 15 passed the House and Senate. Two were vetoed. The bills passed were, by and large, limited efforts to curb specific abuses in a piecemeal manner. For example, SB 20 (Nelson), which the LWVTX watched carefully, did pass and, while it has some loopholes, it has the potential to prevent some contracting abuses. Another bill, HB 23 (Davis, Sarah), which the LWVTX supported, will extend contracting disclosure requirements to immediate family members.

SB 19 (V. Taylor), the most comprehensive bill, which the LWVTX testified on, passed both the House and the Senate. Although it was not perfect, following testimony by the LWVTX and other organizations it was improved to include a number of provisions that, if enforced, would have strengthened the Texas Ethics Commission and established meaningful guidelines and criminal offenses for serious official misconduct. Unfortunately, it did not pass out of conference committee, apparently due to disagreements regarding whether to include curbs on "dark money" (undisclosed campaign contributions). The last-minute loss of this bill means serious reforms to rein in egregious campaign practices and almost unimaginable spending once again have eluded us.

Most significant, HB 1690 (P. King), which the LWVTX strongly opposed, passed and was signed by the governor. Its primary purpose was to dissolve the Public Integrity Unit based in the Austin District Attorney's office. Instead, the Texas Rangers are to investigate complaints and refer them to the alleged offender's home county prosecutor. The LWVTX concern is that this bill creates a separate and unique legal system for politicians and government officials. In addition, a strong nondisclosure provision will prevent public scrutiny. We are left to conclude that the political will to root out and prevent corruption just wasn't there, despite the governor's professed concerns.

2019. We registered support for two bills, HB 1876 and HB 1877 (Davis). Both were omnibus bills which incorporated several laws passed by the House in 2017, but not the Senate. The Texas Ethics Commission for recommended these bills.

HB 1876 would have expanded the blackout period for political contributions that exist for the regular legislative session to also apply to special sessions. HB 1877 would have allowed corporations and labor organizations to make political contributions to certain political committees; extended existing prohibition of using public funds to make political contributions to include an officer or employee with a political subdivision; removed unconstitutional regulations on contributions to Speaker of the House campaigns. Both bills were left pending in the House State Affairs committee.

B. Texas Constitutional Revision

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports revision of the Texas Constitution. Principles for a good constitution include:

- A bill of rights.
- A framework of basic law.
- Clear separation of powers with responsibility definitely assigned.
- Qualifications for voter eligibility and guarantees of fair elections.
- Provisions for justice with a minimum of delay.
- A coordinated finance structure capable of flexibility.
- Maximum home rule for municipal and county governments with coordination of overlapping functions.
- Provisions for support of public education.
- Provisions for support of public health and welfare services.
- Provision for amendment and revision.
- Basic policies regarding state employee selection, retention, and promotion.

Explanation: Texas Constitutional Revision

Interest in Texas constitutional revision grew out of a 1948 League Know Your State survey. By 1954 the League had reached consensus supporting general revision of the constitution, to be preceded by thorough review and adequate research. By 1959 the League had adopted nine principles for a good constitution, adding a tenth in 1959, an eleventh in 1971, and a twelfth in 1979. The last was dropped by delegates to Convention 1993. In response to renewed interest in Texas constitutional revision, the Convention 2003 requested that the LWVTX develop a publication with up-to-date information on this position.

History: Texas Constitutional Revision

1962-70. League members agreed in 1962 that a constitutional convention position preceded by qualified research is the most desirable method for general revision of the constitution. A Texas House resolution in 1967 established a 25-member Constitutional Revision Commission, and the governor appointed a League member to the Commission. League members, fearing they would be unable to support the commission-revised constitution even if the wished to do so, added a new position in 1969: "...preferably by a constitutional convention although alternative methods can be supported."

The completed document, submitted to the legislature in 1969, failed to win the approval of two thirds of both houses. The League supported this document because it was more logically arranged, shorter, and more understandable. Obsolete sections had been removed. Action in 1969-70 centered on supporting three proposed constitutional amendments. Voters approved the amendment to remove some obsolete, superfluous, and unnecessary sections of the constitution.

1972-75. In 1972 the League supported a constitutional amendment calling for members of the legislature to sit as a constitutional convention beginning in January 1974. Voters approved this amendment, and a 37-member Constitutional Revision Commission was appointed to study the present constitution. A League member was appointed to this commission. At a series of statewide hearings held by the Commission, members of both the state League board and many local Leagues testified regarding League positions. The League supported the recommendations of the Commission.

As a result of an article and tear-off postcard in the Texas Voter, the League added new details to its Texas Constitutional Revision position:

The question of calling a constitutional convention should be submitted to voters at least every 20 years; the legislature should provide for the election of delegates from each legislative district and should appropriate sufficient funds for the work of the commission and convention.

When the constitutional convention convened in January 1974, League members across the state worked hard to get League positions incorporated in the new constitution. The convention was unable to produce a document to submit to voters. In 1975 the 64^{th} Legislature approved a new constitution to be voted on article by article. Once again the League worked tirelessly for passage of a revised constitution, but all 11 articles were defeated at the polls.

1987-89. The League made constitutional revision and advocacy issue in 1987 when 25 proposed amendments were submitted to voters. The League neither endorsed nor opposed individual propositions, but widely publicized the view that many of the proposals dealt with matters that should not be in a state constitution, and that the large number and complexity of propositions demonstrated the need for constitution reform. The League reiterated its arguments for reform again in the fall of 1989 when 21 proposed amendments were on the ballot.

At Council 1988 League members heard a speech by Professor Terrell Blodgett of the LBJ School of Public Affairs, University of Texas at Austin, in which he encouraged the League once again to look at constitutional revision. He also presented the League with a check from a disbanded coalition account dating to the time of the 1974 constitutional revision efforts. League directors talked legislators about the possibility of another revision attempt. Legislators and other state officials advised that it would probably be better to wait until after the 1991 session when redistricting had been completed.

1990s. Unfortunately, legislators showed little interest in constitutional revision in the 1991, 1993, 1995, and 1997 sessions. However, the League continued to call attention to the need for a new constitution in conjunction with the inordinate number of proposed amendments that appear on the ballot after each legislative session.

1999. Leaders in the House and Senate introduced companion bills to attempt constitutional revision through a legislative process, the reopening an official discussion after many years of silence. While the LWVTX was not able to support the specific proposals in the legislature, we issued a press release supporting the concept of constitutional revision.

2005. The LWVTX provided updated written information to local Leagues about the history of constitution revision in Texas and the current state of constitutional reform. The LWVTX worked with KLRN in San Antonio to produce and televise a successful program, "Conversations on the Texas Constitution."

Position is now inactive.

C. Election Laws & Voting Rights

1999, 2010 (See also LWVUS position "Citizen's Right to Vote" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports every citizen's right to vote, improvement in voter registration procedures, uniformly enforced election procedures, clearly stated election laws that facilitate citizen participation, and the right to a secret ballot.

Specific measures include:

- Adequate safeguards against fraud.
- Convenience to the voters.
- Impartiality of treatment for all voters.
- No declaration of party affiliation when registering.
- Revision of election laws to ensure enforcement.
- Supervision of all local elections by a single county election authority responsible to a central state authority.
- Mandatory uniform training for all election personnel.
- Provision for jointly conducted primaries.

Criteria for election administration should include:

- Reasonable costs for conducting elections.
- Election laws and procedures that uniformly and regularly produce honest and accurate results.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports election laws that facilitate citizen participation and voter convenience, as well as voting procedures that may increase voter participation.

Our support includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- The use of uniform election dates for local and state elections whenever possible.
- Consolidation of polling places when several governmental entities conduct elections simultaneously.
- Reduction of the number of days between the primary and general elections.
- Unlimited access to vote-by-mail with no restrictions.
- A permanent vote-by-mail list on which any voter may request to be placed.
- The establishment of guidelines that would allow jurisdictions to conduct all vote-by-mail elections.
- Election Day registration.
- Election Day centralized voting, with applicable safeguards.
- Poll site Internet voting for military/overseas voters.

Explanation: Election Laws, Voting Rights

The right of every citizen to vote is a principle of the League of Women Voters. The 1976 national Convention delegates adopted voting rights as an integral part of the national program. This added impetus to the LWVTX position and provided additional ways for Leagues to take action through vertical programming.

In 1991 the LWVUS Board of Directors launched the campaign to "Take Back the System" as the top priority of the League. Included in this campaign was a major grassroots effort to pass the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA), finally passed by Congress in 1993. The LWV believes the legislature should be given the responsibility and the necessary authority to build a statutory framework essential for a proper electoral system. The specific details of election administration are thus left to legislation.

During the LWVTX periodic program review of 1998-99, the positions dealing with election laws which had been part of "Political Campaign Process" were moved to be part of "Election Laws and Voting Rights," where they seemed to fit more logically.

At Convention 2008 a study of "Voting Procedures to Increase Voter Participation" was adopted. A Facts & Issues, consisting of five separate papers, was distributed to members electronically. Consensus on several issues was achieved and was added to our position in 2010.

History: Election Laws and Voting Rights

1985-86. A bill recodifying the election code was passed by the 1985 Texas Legislature; it became effective January 1, 1986. The recodification was a result of more than a year's work by the Joint House-Senate Select Committee on Election Code Revision and its advisory committee. The LWVTX was represented on the advisory committee and actively supported the recodification bill during the. With passage of the legislation, the LWVTX position on recodification was achieved after many years of advocacy. Therefore delegates to the 1987 Convention voted to drop the position.

In addition to eliminating obsolete matter and clarifying some ambiguous provisions, the recodification addressed several of our other positions, including: mandatory uniform training for all election personnel; supervision of all local elections by a single county election official responsible to a single state authority; protection of secrecy of the ballot; and restoration of voting rights to ex-felons 2 years after completion of probation, parole, or mandatory supervision.

1987-89. During the 1987 Texas Legislative Session, the League supported a bill providing for conjointly operated primaries, which failed to pass. A bill requiring agency-based voter registration passed the legislature but was vetoed by the governor. In 1989 the League supported an omnibus voter registration bill that included voter registration when a person applies for a driver's license or personal identification card ("motor voter"), a change in the purge date, and changes in the method of verification by computer. This legislation passed the Texas Senate but died in the Texas House.

1991. The 1991 session of the legislature was a productive one for voting rights issues. A motor voter bill was introduced and strongly supported by the League. Although it appeared to be progressing well, in the waning hours of the session its sponsor withdrew the bill from House consideration when it appeared that strong opposition to the method of funding was certain to kill the bill. However, a similar bill passed quietly through the first special session as a small addendum to the weighty bill reorganizing the Texas Highway Department and the Department of Aviation into the new Texas Department of Transportation. Thus without fanfare, Texas joined the vanguard of states with motor voter legislation in place.

Additionally, the League supported legislation to extend hours of early (formerly "absentee") voting in person in counties with a population of 100,000 or more, and in counties of 4000,000 or more to provide additional places for early voting. This bill eventually passed. Other successful bills supported by the League included one that amends the voter application form by identifying the "county in which applicant resides and intends to vote." Another bill broadens the jury source to include all those who have a valid driver's license or personal identification card issues by the Department of Public Safety.

1993. In 1993 two bills were introduced which would have facilitated voter accessibility to the electoral process by permitting voter registration at all state agencies dealing directly with the public and allowing election day registration at polling places. The League supported these measures and countered opponents' arguments with evidence that similar laws in other states do not encourage fraudulent practices. The bills died in committee.

In the study of the Political Campaign Process in Texas (1991-93), League members reached consensus in support of changes in election laws to shorten the election cycle. The League believes that a shorter cycle would reduce the cost of campaigning and lessen the pressure on candidates to raise enormous amounts of money. A sorter election cycle was also one of the Texas Ethics Commission's recommendations to the 73^{rd} Texas Legislature. There was some discussion of this recommendation in committee hearings during the 1993 session, but the topic did not gain sufficient momentum for serious consideration 1994-95. The LWVTX voting rights efforts during this period focused on assuring full implementation of the National Voting Rights Act (NVRA) in Texas. The national motor voter law, which went into effect January 1995, extends Texas' previously enacted motor voter law by providing for voter registration at additional government agencies, including those that serve people with disabilities or provide public assistance. Bills enacted in the 1995 Texas Legislative Session established implementation procedures hat have brought Texas into full compliance with the federal statute.

A League representative served on the state NVRA Task Force, appointed by the secretary of state, charged with assisting Texas to achieve the NRVA goals. The League continued to monitor agencies to ensure that the process is fully implemented and that it works. As we monitor agencies, we hope to learn: Are individuals asked about voter registration? Are voter registration applications readily available? Is assistance offered in completing voter registration applications?

Our position on voting rights is an important way of helping to achieve the purpose of the LWV to encourage citizens to participate in their government. The League will continue to take action to support the right of every eligible citizen to vote. Though many of the improvements called for in our positions have been implemented, we retain some positions to enable us to act should these rights be threatened, as the following two examples illustrate. In one case, many counties have central election authorities, but many legislators are not comfortable with this arrangement. In the second case, the League believes that a declaration of party affiliation is detrimental to the establishment of a strong two-party system in Texas. Year-round registration with no fee and no party declaration has been in effect for some time in Texas. However, there remain those who would like to see this undone, so we retain our position. In summary, much work for secure voting rights remains, though progress is being made.

2001. After disappointments in several past sessions, both houses of the legislature passed, and the governor signed into law, a bill that removed at least 3 of 10 exemptions from the Election Code that provides for four uniform election dates. "This is a bill whose time has come" was the focus of League testimony and work with a special statewide Uniform Election Dates Coalition. This reform has been long in coming. A major exemption, and one that created the most controversy, that of school bond elections, has been curtailed. Two of the dates have also been changed to the first Saturday in February and the second Saturday in September. A bill that would have consolidated polling places when several governmental entities conduct elections failed to pass.

2003. The legislature passed and the Governor signed a bill that implements the Help American Vote Act (HAVA). The LWVUS and the LWVTX have been actively involved in HAVA since its inception. Following federal guidelines, the state HAVA bill requires the state to expand the size of its voter registration application to include space for additional requirements and additional voter instructions. It also requires the state to create a statewide, computerized voter registration system that will be the official database for all voter registration purposes. It sets up an administrative complaint process; develops and implements a provisional voter program; places a Direct Recording Electronic (DRE) device in each polling place for disabled voters; creates additional instructional information for voters, including a voter's bill of rights; and launches a voter education program. The state HAVA legislation includes no state funds, but provides the legal basis for the state to appropriate funds that will be provided by the federal government. Much of the funding will be transferred to county governments to enable them to satisfy new federal mandates.

The most significant change in this legislation for Texas is going from the current system of challenge ballots to one of provisional ballots. This means that any ballot cast by voters who can't prove (by affidavit) that they are registered, would go to a board that would determine if the ballot should be counted. The bill contains detailed procedures for determining eligibility, how that ballots are handled, how they are counted, disposition, etc. Because of the additional time required for this review, the time period for holding runoff elections will be extended from 3 to 4 weeks.

The legislature also dealt with other election issues such as uniform election dates, tightening loopholes and developing methods for electronic filing and transfer of campaign data, posting and publicizing a list of voter's rights, and removing the postage paid from the voter registration card. Legislation giving all persons completing a felony sentence voter information at the completion of their sentence, when they in fact become eligible to register to vote, did not pass.

2005. Many election law changes were proposed in the 79^{th} Session. Five of the bills signed into law related to our positions. HB 57 reduced the number of election dates from four to two. Reducing the number of election dates is a long-held LWVTX position. The bill eliminated the February and September elections and changed the May election to the second Saturday. The November election date remains the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. The bill laid out the procedures for early voting in May and for making the transition to the May and November elections.

The issue of a recountable voting system did not have support. (For the position on electronic voting adopted by the LWVUS Convention 2006, see Impact on Issues.) The closest Texas came to addressing direct-recording electronic (DRE) voting machines was making tampering with DREs a 3rd degree felony.

HB 2465 dealt with public hearings on approval of electronic voting machines. The LWVTX strongly supported an amendment to this bill that would have strengthened the bill by requiring testing methods such as electronic hash code testing before and after the election, parallel testing of programming and equipment during the early voting and post-election periods, and verification counts from each redundant electronic source provided by the voting system. The amendment failed and Texas was left with weak protection from fraud in connection with DREs.

Two other bills that addressed ease of voting issues: HB 120 related to using regular polling places even if the regular polling place of the election precinct is not located wholly in the political subdivision holding the election; and HB 2454 would allow a registered voter who has resided in a new county for less than 90 days to vote a limited ballot.

There was a strong push for legislation to require a photo ID at the polls (the LWVTX was part of a coalition that worked against this bill, and it died in committee), and there will be a strong push in 2007 to adopt a photo ID bill. During the interim there will be a focus by the attorney general's office on potential voter fraud.

HAVA implementation proceeded on schedule. The LWVTX continued to meet with the secretary of state to keep up to date on HAVA progress in Texas while offering assistance that would be needed to implement the reforms.

2007. Five bills regarding the ballot and elections supported by the LWVTX passed and were signed by the governor. They are: SB 90 related to establishment of a pilot program to provide a ballot by electronic mail to military personnel serving overseas; HB 629 related to the consolidation of elections; HB 2823 related to voting by a person who applied for a ballot by mail; a voter can request a provisional ballot if they did not receive their ballot by mail; HB 3105 related to a program allowing for countywide voting locations for elections.

HB 770 requiring the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to give notice to certain persons for their right to vote, supported by the LWVTX, was passed by the legislature, but was vetoed by the governor. HB 218, the Voter ID bill opposed by LWVTX, was narrowly defeated when Senator Mario Gallegos, recovering from a liver transplant, was brought to the Capitol in a hospital bed to vote against the bill.

2009. After the 81st Legislature convened, the Senate changed the rules for passing a Voter ID bill (requiring a photo ID at the polls) from two thirds to three fifths. (The last time that the two-thirds rule was ignored was in 2003 when the Senate forced through the redistricting plan engineered by Tom DeLay.) This action signaled the start of the push to pass a Photo Voter ID Bill, SB 362, vigorously opposed by the LWVTX. The LWVTX sponsored two press conferences on this issue and participated in a third. At the last press conference we presented a two-page statement of Principles for Non-Partisan Voter Reform, a paper developed by the Election Reform Coalition of which the LWVTX is a member. The paper asked others to join with the coalition as we move forward using these principles to increase voter turnout. The Voter ID bill ultimately failed to pass. Toward the end we watched legislative procedural moves aimed at stopping it, among these chubbing, or the putting intended obstacles in the way of voting for a bill. A special session was called and Voter ID was not included on that agenda.

SB 310, supported by LWVTX, allowing counties to have super precincts on Election Day, was added as an amendment to another bill and passed. It authorizes five counties to apply for a trial of super precincts. Issues that never made it out of committee included: rules regarding electronic voting machines, same-day registration, and procedures for voting. The governor vetoed one election bill supported by LWVTX that would have required the secretary of state to develop a system for accepting voter registration applications when the information provided by the voter does not match the identifying information for that individual in the records of the Department of Public Safety.

2009 was also the year that Texas finally ratified the 24th Amendment. Most states passed this 45 years ago. This was a symbolic stand against the poll tax.

2011. The LWVTX and the Election Reform Coalition were active in holding off voter photo ID legislation in previous sessions, but were not successful in 2011 when photo ID was included in the emergency items designated by Governor Perry. The LWVTX participated in a press conference and testified against the bill at both House and Senate hearings. Nonetheless, the bill was signed into law on May 27. The secretary of state was given responsibilities to educate election workers and voters on the new requirements beginning September 2011. Voters must show one of a limited set of photo IDs to vote a regular ballot after January 1, 2012. As of the publication of this document this law is still pending.

Note. Under the 1965 Voting Rights Act, Texas is among the states required to obtain preclearance from the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) or courts before putting election law changes into effect. Texas sought preclearance of election law changes from DOJ. The LWVTX submitted written comments to the DOJ raising questions about preclearance for voter photo ID and for the prohibition against performance-based decisions in voter registration efforts. The State of Texas has sued and the LWVTX has intervened against the state's position. This case is expected to go to the U.S. Supreme Court as a challenge of the Voting Rights Act. As of June, 2012 we don't know if Voter ID will go into effect for the November 2012 election.

The LWVTX testified against requiring documentary proof of citizenship to register to vote, and this bill was not considered by the full House. While Texans will still be able to register to vote without providing proof of citizenship, most voters will need to provide documentary proof of citizenship to obtain or renew the forms of photo ID required to cast a regular ballot as of 2012.

The LWVTX supported the bill to bring Texas into compliance with the federal requirements for military and overseas voters. The bill was passed and signed by Governor Perry. Email transmission of ballot materials to military/overseas voters is allowed, but not electronic return. To provide the time required for preparation and return of ballot materials, candidate filing and runoff dates for spring primaries were changed. Because some county election officials would be unable to meet requirements for a May primary runoff in addition to local elections on the May uniform election date, the law allowed for changing local elections to the November uniform date.

A number of bills on which the LWVTX took positions failed either to make it out of committee or to pass both chambers. Bills the LWVTX supported that did not pass include those on Election Day voter registration, voter suspense list procedures, allowing electronic voter registration for those with a valid Department of Public Safety driver's license or ID, and adding Texas to the National Popular Vote Compact. Bills which the LWVTX opposed that did not pass include those limiting the number of voters an individual could assist, allowing poll watchers to record images and sound, increasing penalties for untimely volunteer deputy registrars, and limiting volunteer deputy registrars to registered voters with 6 months of continuous state residence.

Two bills, HB 2194 and HB 2817, became more complex as they progressed through the legislature and, as passed, included both positive and negative provisions. They contain unnecessary restrictions on volunteer deputy registrars; also performance-based compensation and employment decisions are prohibited in voter registration efforts. On the positive side, the secretary of state was given authority to increase the number of counties participating in trials of countywide polling locations.

2013. As the League's 2012-14 biennium began, the LWVTX was involved in litigation over preclearance of the photo ID requirement passed by the 2011 Legislature, SB 14 (Fraser), which LWVTX opposed. The LWVTX lobbied the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) to deny preclearance and intervened supporting DOJ's decision to deny preclearance when Texas sued for preclearance. The Washington, DC, court denied preclearance in late August 2012, so the requirement was not in effect for the November 2012 General Election. The State of Texas appeal of the denial was put on hold while the U.S. Supreme Court considered the Shelby County, Alabama, challenge to preclearance.

A number of positive bills on voter registration passed during the 2013 Regular Legislative Session and were signed by Governor Perry: SB 910 (Duncan) faxed voter registrations; HB 2465 (Farias) suspense status information online; and HB 3593 (Burnam) determining a voter is deceased.

Positive election bills that were passed and signed include: SB 160 (Huffman) poll watcher identification; SB 553 (Uresti) high school students as early voting clerks; and SB 578 (Duncan) countywide polling locations for primaries and runoffs. Several positive bills the LWVTX supported did not pass: HB 465 (Johnson) repeal of photo ID; SB 315 (Uresti) and HB 313 (Strama) online voter registration; HB 331 (Guillen) accepting voter registration from any eligible Texan; HB 2728 (Gutierrez) volunteer deputy voter registrar online training; HB 3081 (Wu) voting in a precinct of former residence; HB 1958 (S. Turner) curbside voting; and HB 2306 (S. Thompson) permanent mail ballots for some voters.

Significant bills the LWVTX opposed that did not pass include: HB 2093 (Harless) limiting early voting; HB 3049 (Springer) eliminating the May uniform election date; HB 966 (Murphy) voter registration residence address; and HB 3074 (R. Miller) proof of citizenship to register. HB 148 (Burkett) limiting assistance with mail ballots has become law but in its final form only limits payment for ballots mailed and does not otherwise limit assistance with mail ballots. Election law bills were filed in special sessions, but none were heard in committee.

In late June 2013, after the regular session, the U.S. Supreme Court announced the Shelby County decision striking down the Voting Rights Act (VRA) criteria for determining jurisdictions subject to preclearance. Texas immediately implemented the photo ID requirement passed in 2011. U.S. Representative Marc Veasey and others quickly filed a VRA Section 2 challenge to photo ID in the Corpus Christi federal court. Others, including the DOJ, have filed challenges raising constitutional and other legal issues in Corpus Christi and asked that Texas be bailed-in to preclearance under Section 3 of the VRA. Trial is scheduled for early September 2014 with the possibility of a decision prior to the November 2014 general election. In the meantime, the photo ID requirement remains in effect.

2015. As the League's 2015-16 biennium began, the photo identification requirement lawsuit remained under consideration. The Corpus Christi federal court ruled in favor of U.S.

Representative Veasey, yet there was no stay of the voter ID law during the State's appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court. A Fifth Circuit Court three-judge panel met during the 84th Session on the case with no final outcome. Arguments included judicial questions asking why the Texas Legislature has not broadened the types of accepted photo IDs.

During the 84th Session of the Texas Legislature, eight bills were introduced to add acceptable IDs to the list acceptable for voting that died in committees without any hearing. Other IDs proposed included the addition of student photo IDs from public and private higher education institutions, Texas and federal government–issued photo IDs, expired Texas driver licenses, Veteran's Administration health photo IDs, and any form of photo ID. The House Elections Committee allowed a hearing on only one bill that would allow tribal photo IDs, but it also died in committee without a vote.

Only one voter ID related bill, SB 982 (Bettencourt), passed into law. It provides a cost-free birth certificate for anyone in need of that document when applying for a Department of Public Safety photo ID. The only other voting/elections bill supported by LWVTX that passed during the 84th Session and was signed by Governor Abbott, made a variety of minor improvements all related to voting by mail. HB 1927 (Bonnen, Greg) requires vote by mail (VBM) be made available for all elections, regardless of the election's administration (special districts, ISDs, etc.) and includes runoff elections; allows VBM applications to be submitted any time in the preceding year prior to an election; and allows VBM applications to be emailed.

The LWVTX supported a number of other positive bills that did not pass: providing online voter registration, HB 76 (Israel), HB 953 (Alvarado), both garnering one late session public hearing but no action; HB312 (Harless), HB 444 (Johnson), HB 446 (Johnson), and SB 385 (Uresti); broadening acceptable photo IDs, HB 535 (Nevárez), HB 295 (Canales), HB 447 (Johnson), SB 170 (Uresti), SB 230 (Watson), HB 534 (Nevárez), HB 536 (Nevárez), HB 733 (Israel), and HB 1117 (Martinez, "Mando"); improving the vote by mail process, HB 1198 (Israel), HB 1540 (S Thompson), HB 913 (Israel), HB 954 (Alvarado), and SB 86 (Ellis).

The most significant bill the LWVTX opposed that did not pass was HB 1096 (Murphy) and its companion SB 984 (Bettencourt), calling for identical residential addresses on photo IDs and voter registration cards. HB 1096 was left languishing on the full Senate bill intent list on the final day it could be considered.

2017. The brief story of the 2017 Texas Legislative Session for voting rights and elections: Nothing really bad was passed and a few minor process improvements were made.

The chants of "voter fraud" continued to be recited even though all League members know that there is no "rampant voter fraud or impersonation" in our state or any other. Governor Abbott and Lt. Governor Patrick, the two chief cheerleaders rallying the voter fraud cry let it be known that no online voter registration bills would be considered this session. Although, mail-in balloting, the one area where some irregularities have been documented, was addressed in a somewhat even-handed manner during the regular session, but was overturned in the special session. There was only one very small victory: Volunteer Deputy Registrars (VDRs) will now be able to deliver voter registration applications to county offices the day after the deadline to be registered before elections.

We followed 280 bills related to voting and elections during the 85th Session. The House and Senate committees offered public hearings on precious few of those. Thankfully only a few made it to the finish line and were passed by both houses.

Online voter registration. As mentioned above, none of the bills to establish online voter registration even received lip service this session. When it became common knowledge that the governor and lt. governor would quash any online voter registration action, the early session hope of passing HB 143 by House Elections Vice Chair Celia Israel ended. Israel authored HB 76 in the 2015 Session and received 75 House coauthors and an abbreviated hearing in the House Elections Committee, but no vote. Neither HB 143, nor any other voter registration modernization bills received any action but referral to committee. Others included:

- HB 70 by Representatives Minjarez/Gullen, automatic registration
- HB 80 by Representative Alvarado, online voter registration
- HB 159 by Representative Dutton, optional county online voter registration
- HB 469 by Representative Eric Johnson, same day registration
- HB 955 by Representative J. Rodriguez, same day registration
- HB 1955 by Representative Reynolds, secretary of state online voter registration

Other positive voter registration bills were introduced and did not see any action. Among those:

- HB 910 by Representative Romero, allow volunteer deputy registrars to register voters in all counties
- HB 953 by Representative J. Rodriguez, requiring counties to contact registrants via email about application problems before rejecting the applications
- HB 1002 by Representative Israel, requiring the Department of Public Safety to provide receipts for voter registration

Voter ID. Legislators filed numerous bills to expand the types of photo voter identification. Only HB 1173 by Representative Nevarez, to add tribal ID cards, received a public hearing, and then was left to die in committee.

The most talked about bill approved this session was SB 5, the lt. governor's high priority voter ID bill. It passed early in the session; soon afterwards there was a hearing on the companion bill, HB 2481 by Representative King in the House Elections Committee. It then languished in the House Calendars Committee. On Sunday night, May 21st, Governor Abbott named is an "emergency matter for immediate consideration," and it was set for House floor action the following Tuesday. On June 1st Governor Abbott signed it, and it is set to become law January 1, 2018.

The bill generally codifies the changes in voter ID requirements set in the July 2016 U.S. District Court order, with a few exceptions. The main SB 5 addition is making it a state jail penalty to make a false statement on the substitute impediment form used when voting without one of the seven photo IDs. That was just one of several differences between SB 5, as introduced, and the Court order. On the House floor members added multiple amendments making the bill more reasonable. Some of those changes (retaining the 4-year expiration date for IDs and address matching issues) remained in the final adopted bill.

However the Court is set to revisit the Issues in June 2017, following the legislative session. Because the Court ruled SB 14, the voter ID law passed in 2011, as intentionally discriminatory, it is still to be determined how SB5's passage will be received. Placing Texas back under U.S Department of Justice preclearance for any election-related actions is a possibility, although U.S. Attorney General Sessions' Department of Justice idea of preclearance will likely be different than his predecessors.

2017 LWVTX actions. While our advocacy on online voter registration languished, we took positions and actions on the following bills.

Bills we supported. A few bills we registered our support for were passed by both Houses, although none of the bills we presented testimony to support made it to the finish line. Also note below, some bills we supported in one house were significantly amended in the other house.

Bills passed and sent to the governor.

- HB 658 by Representative Bernal, originally introduced to provide priority treatment for voters with certain disabilities, and our support was based on that. It became a "Christmas tree" bill in the Senate with a more than six-page comprehensive amendment by Senate State Affairs Chair Huffman adding special voting available to residents in residential care facilities (senior living/nursing homes). It is meant to address voting irregularities in elder care residential or nursing homes. It was hailed as a major improvement by Governor Abbott, yet the provisions for residential care facility ballot by mail were repealed in the special session (see below).
- HB 961 by Representative J. Rodriguez, allows the option of plurality voting for junior/community college trustees (other than Blinn College). Governor Abbott vetoed the bill.
- HB 999 by Representative Israel, unless otherwise required by statue, requires water district officer/board elections on the May uniform election date. Signed by Governor Abbot, effective September 1, 2017.
- HB 2324 by Representative Israel, allows individuals or volunteer deputy registrars to turn in voter registration applications to county offices the day after the deadline 30 days prior to elections. Signed by Governor Abbot, effective September 1, 2017.
- HB 4034 by Representative Bohac, originally introduced to require counties to send list of registrants who indicate an interest in working elections to the two county chairs of each county executive committees. Our support was based on that original bill. Amended in the Senate by State Affairs Chair Huffman to give secretary of state authority to eliminate duplicate voter registration records as part of the statewide registrations rolls, though indicating weak or strong matches and only acting on strong matches; allow secretary of state to withhold funds to counties not complying with deleting dead voters from the rolls.
 Signed by Governor Abbot, effective June 12, 2017.

Note. HB 2837 by Representative Dean also passed and contains exactly the same language on dead voters as HB 4034. We testified against HB 2837 because registrars report often not being in receipt of deaths from the various suppliers of that information. Signed by Governor Abbott, effective September 1, 2017.

Bills we supported with testimony that died.

- HB 187 by Representative Dutton and HB 260 by Representative E. Johnson, on Department of Criminal Justice providing those "off paper" with voter registration forms and information
- HB 450 by Representative Fallon, to allow mobile devices in the voting booth
- HB 1887 by Representative and SB 148 by Senator Garcia, concerning eligibility of interpreters in an election
- HB 3328 by Representative E. Rodriguez, requiring secretary of state to make public the expenditures for voter identification education

Bills we opposed. While none of the bills passed that we opposed, two bills passed that we would have like to see fail. One we testified against, HB 2837 by Representative Dean (mentioned above) passed on its own and as part of HB 4034. The other is SB 5 by Senator Huffman that is discussed above and was signed by Governor Abbott.

Bills we opposed that did not move forward.

- HB 384 by Representative Murphy, to require photos on voter registration certificates
- HB 1149 by Representative S. Davis, to allow for only electronic posting of voting locations rather than printing in a newspaper
- HB 1683 by Representative Fallon, to significantly reduce the number of early voting days
- HB 3422 by Representative Laubenberg, to authorize data sharing to permit Texas participation in interstate voter registration crosscheck program, with the stated intention of that being the State of Kansas free matching system, not the more reliable and multistate Electronic Registration Information Center system.
- HB 3474 by Representative Fallon, to require proof of U.S. citizenship at voter registration Took no position: Bills that passed.

• HB 1735 by Representative Faircloth, began as a mostly partisan primary bill and became more so in the last days of the session. It deals with a miscellany of election officer rules, oaths, and penalties for voting in both primaries in the same election. It makes it easier for someone to discreetly select the party primary they wish to vote in. It provides for prosecution of "vote harvesting organizations" that consist of three or more who may or may not know each other, but are subverting the rules. Of note to LWV voters guide leaders: It spells out the contents of a candidate's application for office, including a reliable email address for reaching the candidate or campaign.

Additional action in special session.

- SB 5 by Senator Hancock, dealt with ballot by mail abuse; widens the definition of mail-in ballot fraud, boosts penalties for certain offenses, and strengthens rules for signature verification. Somewhat helpful, it also requires election judges to notify voters when ballots are rejected. It also limits who may assist mail-in voters. The LWVTX recognized that there is an issue to be addressed; however, it opposed the severity of increased penalties and
 - called for clearer mail-in ballots and carrier envelopes to prevent innocent mistakes. Signed by Governor Abbott, effective December 1, 2017.
- Representative Goldman, the House sponsor of SB 5, inserted a surprising amendment on the last day of its consideration. The amendment was meant to eliminate the new nursing home/residential facility mail-in ballot process passed in regular session in HB 658 by Representative Bernal (discussed above). The intention was to eliminate the new residential facility process before it began, but as finally passed, it was in effect for the November 2017 General Election and officially removed from law December 1, 2017. Removing the process was largely the result of county election officials across the state objecting to the new process that would have called for election judges to go to the nursing home/residential facilities to accept the mail-in ballots in person.

2019. In the 86th Legislative Session, LWVTX made dramatic strides in its advocacy on voting rights and election law issues. We contributed to the defeat of SB 9, the most suppressive voting rights/election administration bill since Voter ID was adopted. This defeat and the denial of David Whitley's confirmation as Secretary of State, were symbolic of a major change this session in our collaborative strength. Most amazing was our establishment of an ongoing organizational infrastructure, and the availability of the Texas Civil Rights Project's legal insights on the meaning and potential impacts of legislative proposals. The LWVTX Action Alerts (using One-Click Politics) played a gigantic role in our successes. These alerts provided a quick/easy link for all League members for contacting their personal representatives at opportune times to affect legislative action. President Grace Chimene and VP Advocacy Janet Imhoff played a big role in assuring they were appropriate and timely.

We did not achieve our major goals of establishing online voter registration in Texas or requiring improved paper trail election equipment that would permit post-election audits. However, progress was made on the latter. The most negative efforts were defeated, and no major bills passed to decrease voter access. LWVTX testified in favor of 11 bills – 3 of those passed and were signed by the Governor. We testified in opposition to 3 bills – none of them passed! In addition to our testimony, we registered support for 24 bills – 10 passed and were sent to the Governor. All 10 made it off his desk and became law. LWVTX registered opposition to 13 bills and only 2 of them passed and were signed by the Governor.

In addition to procedural bills, we supported a budget rider that allows Texas to participate in the Electronic Registration Information Center (ERIC) process to improve the accuracy of our voter rolls and increase access to voter registration for all eligible citizens. ERIC is governed and managed by states who choose to join, and was formed in 2012 with assistance from The Pew Charitable Trusts. Participation requires expenditure of approximately $1.5 million to begin the membership. This session, Elections Committee Chair Stephanie Klick successfully inserted that amount in the budget and the Governor exercised no line item budget vetoes.

The demise of SB 9 in the House was a high point for League members and many other organizations and individuals. It included many of the proposals seen in previous sessions (and will likely be seen again in the 87th) to restrict voter access and establish or increase penalties for unintended errors. Other positive actions include passage of bills to greatly improve the county and Secretary of State websites by requiring more voter information (HB 933). Another new law requires improvements to county cybersecurity protection of voter registration lists and other election-related documents, systems and technology (HB 1421). Female candidates for office may now choose to run using any surname acquired by law or marriage on ballots (HB 2075), and there will be personalized auto license plates available that promote voter registration (HB 1130).

The most negative new law requires any temporary voting location in the early voting period to be open for the entire early voting period. In other words, eliminating temporary voting locations that have been so useful in urban and rural settings alike (HB 1888).

D. Executive, Legislative, and Judicial

1968, 1969, 1970

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports measures to increase the effectiveness of the executive department of the state government including:

- The governor limited to two terms that may or may not be successive.
- Constitutional provision for the succession to the office of the governor should the governor become unable to perform the duties of the office.
- Cabinet-type executive department, with only the governor, lieutenant governor, and the attorney general elected.
- The governor having the power, with safeguards prescribed by law, to remove appointive officers of the executive department and citizen appointees to boards and commissions.
- Reorganization of state boards and commissions along functional lines by grouping them in areas of responsibility.

Explanation: Executive

In 1968 the LWVTX decided to evaluate the organization and functioning of the State of Texas executive department as a continuation of its studies of the constitution and the legislature. In the first year, the study concentrated on the office of the governor. In the second year, the League examined the total administrative organization, discussing other officers in the executive branch. In 1970 the League focused on the various executive boards and commissions, concentrating on those concerned with natural resources.

History: Executive

1974. During the Texas Constitutional Convention, the League actively supported change in the executive article.

1979-81. In 1979 and again in 1981, the League successfully opposed passage of a constitutional amendment providing for legislative review of the process of rule making by executive agencies. We believe this amendment to be a violation of the separation of powers of the executive and legislative branches of government. In 1980 the LWVTX supported a constitutional amendment, approved by the voters, allowing governors to remove public officials they appoint.

1985. Over League opposition, a vague and deceptive amendment that also violated the principle of separation of powers was passed by the voters. The amendment requires that an undesignated group, to be named by the legislature, approve expenditure of appropriated funds.

1991. Major reorganizations of state agencies were carried out during the 72^{nd} Texas Legislature as a result of recommendations made by the Performance Review Panel. Legislation implementing these recommendations provided for appointment of agency heads by the governor rather than by the legislature. The LWVTX supported these measures in keeping with its position in support of a cabinet-style executive branch. As a result of these changes, the governor how has significantly more accountability for the actions of agency heads.

1967, 1968, 1969

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports measures to increase the efficiency and responsiveness of the legislature including:

- Annual sessions of sufficient length and scope to permit efficient handling of legislative business.
- Adequate compensation for legislators and elimination of salary amounts from the constitution.
- Increased power of the legislators in relation to the power of their presiding officers to include (a) greater voice in determining committee membership, and (b) bills referred to committees of appropriate jurisdiction.

Explanation: Legislative

League members decided in 1966 to evaluate the organization and functioning of the Texas Legislature and over the next 3 years reached consensus on a number of areas. Through the years, some goals were achieved, and positions have therefore been dropped. For example, conference committees are now limited to reconciling differences between Senate and House bills and are not permitted to add new provisions. Thus the position advocating this practice was dropped at Convention 1985.

History: Legislative

1969. During the legislative session, the League worked for a code of ethics, annual sessions, and realistic pay for legislators.

1974. During the Constitutional Convention the League was active in support of revision of the legislative article. Bills pertaining to legislative salaries and/or annual sessions have been introduced in a number of sessions; none have passed.

1960, 1965, 1983, 2001, 2003, 2006, 2009

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports an effective, independent, qualified, and inclusive judiciary for Texas, which includes:

- A uniform fiscal policy as part of a single system of centrally administered statewide courts.
- A single system of centrally administered statewide courts with a uniform fiscal policy.
- Assignment of judges according to special training and docket needs.

The League supports the selection of judges in the following manner:

- Nomination is by a diverse, representative, nonpartisan commission, with appointment for a specific term or appointment by the governor for a specific term.
- Judges are subject to retention or rejection in an unlimited number of periodic nonpartisan elections.
- This should apply to Texas Supreme Court, the Court of Criminal Appeals, and Courts of Appeals.
- Selection of state district court judges may be by nonpartisan election or by appointment/retention.
- Judicial campaigns should be funded with public money.

Explanation: Judicial

In 1958, the League adopted nine principles for a good constitution, one of which was "Provisions for justice with a minimum of delay," and in 1959 undertook the initial study of the judicial article as part of its work for general constitutional revision. Consensus was reached in the areas of court structure, court administration, and court financing.

In early 1965, the position on the selection and tenure of appellate judges was adopted. Members again looked at selection of judges in 1982 and, by February 1983, included district judges in the position on judicial selection. The position was amended by Convention in 2001 following review.

Following delegate debate at Convention 1999, the Program Review Committee was assigned review of the judicial position, especially regarding judicial selection, and the following recommendations were adopted at Convention 2001. Since centrally administered statewide courts have been in effect since 1985, the wording in the first bullet was reversed to reflect emphasis on the need for a uniform fiscal policy. (There is still disparity of funding levels among various appellate and district courts.) The PPR committee had suggested dropping the position regarding assignment of judges according to special training and docket needs, but during the program planning process, local Leagues recommended retaining the position since it is used for advocacy at the local level for specially trained judges, such as in family courts.

Delegates at the 2001 Convention, at the PPR committee's recommendation, also voted to drop the position regarding effective removal procedures for judges. The state constitution provides for removal procedures through a State Commission on Judicial Conduct. This provision was added to the constitution in 1965, after the League's initial study/consensus in 1959-60. Thus this bullet has been achieved. Although it is conceivable that the removal process could be thwarted by a legislative effort to cut off funds to the Commission, the LWVTX does not need to retain the position in order to address such a situation. The overarching statement of the judicial position and/or the League principle that "efficient government requires competent personnel" could be used to advocate effective judicial removal procedures.

Judicial selection. The 2001 convention approved a restudy of judicial selection. A committee restudied the issue producing a Facts and Issues entitled Judicial Selection in Texas: Nothing's Perfect. Limited consensus was reached in the fall of 2002 and approved by the LWVTX board in January 2003. That consensus continued to support the appointment of Texas Supreme Court and Courts of Appeals judges. But for local judges, Leagues only agreed that if judges are to be selected by an election, it should be nonpartisan. s

At Statewide Conference in March 2009, a bullet was added to clarify our position on district judges in order to lobby more effectively and to provide flexibility to work with legislators to reform the way judicial offices are selected in Texas. At Convention 2010, delegates voted to add the provision that judicial elections should be funded with public money, although this is covered in our position on Political Campaign Process.

History: Judicial Selection

1985. The legislature passed a constitutional amendment that addressed the League position of centrally administered statewide courts. The League supported this amendment, and voters adopted it.

1989-95. Merit selection (or election, as some call it) has been an active issue for the LWVTX during this period. Reform efforts have been spurred and complicated by federal lawsuits challenging the at-large election of district and appellate judges as a violation of the Voting Rights Act because the system dilutes minority votes. The most recent development in this lengthy litigation is Texas' appeal from a U.S. Justice Department finding that countywide partisan election of judges in the major urban areas infringes minority lawyers' right to win seats on the bench under the Voting Rights Act. Using the LWVUS position supporting the Voting Rights Act, the LWVTX has supported single-member judicial districts as part of a merit system plan.

In the 1995 Legislative Session, the League lobbied in support of Senate-passed measures that called for appellate judges to be appointed by the governor with approval by the Senate and subject to retention/rejection elections on a nonpartisan ballot; and for district judges to first run on a nonpartisan ballot and then face retention/rejection elections for the next two terms. The House, however, failed to pass the Senate's reform initiative, instead reporting out of committee a version that included partisan elections. This version did not reach the House floor.

During the 1995-97 interim, the League was represented on the newly created Commission on Judicial Efficiency. The Commission, appointed and chaired by Texas Supreme Court Justice Tom Phillips, was charged by the legislature with studying various issues related to the state judiciary, including judicial selection. The commission made several recommendations, but their most significant success was their recommendation for the creation of a Judicial Committee on Information Technology, which passed the legislature with funding. The 15-member committee, made up of judges, court personnel, legislators, attorneys, and citizens will gather information for a statewide network and justice information system.

1997. The House passed a bill changing appellate judicial selection to nonpartisan elections, an attempt to move the procedure at least one step away from the current partisan election system.

The Senate companion bill differed, proposing an appoint/elect/retain system for appellate judges. This bill failed and time did not permit the Senate to take up the House bill.

2001. Legislation was introduced, supported by the League, which offered a viable, nonpartisan approach that would have reformed the electoral process for the selection of the chief justice and justices of the Texas Supreme Court, and the judges of the Court of Criminal Appeals. The bills would have required nonpartisan judicial elections of the highest courts in the state. Candidates would have sought certification from the secretary of state to be put on the ballot and would have been required to submit a petition signed by 1,000 registered voters in connection with a request for public financing. Testimony given during the hearings on the legislation raised many issues of concern that surround judicial elections: the necessity for judges to become involved in party politics, to raise large sums of money in order to run, and the perceived influence on the system as a result. Many supported the certification process as opening the doors for increased minority participation, but testified that a selection commission could act as a barrier.

The League restudied this issue in 2001-03.

2003. Following the adoption of the new judicial selection consensus, the LWVTX supported a number of bills during the 78th Session. None of these bills passed, and the lack of legislative support for these bills during the session was a real disappointment. Some bills and joint resolutions (possible constitutional amendments) focused on all of the judiciary, others only on appellate judges. Both appointments, followed by nonpartisan retention elections at the end of their terms, and nonpartisan elections were considered along with terms of office and for public financing of such elections.

In line with the League's new position, there is a great deal of support in Texas for the nonpartisan selection of appellate judges, but less for the selection or appointment of district judges. Opposition to the appointment of district judges was one factor leading to the defeat of introduced bills.

2005. Companion bills were introduced in the 79th Regular Legislative Session that would provide for the appointment and a nonpartisan election for the retention or rejection of justices and judges. The bill included all appellate courts and all types of district court judges, with appointments made by the governor as currently provided for in the Texas Constitution. No hearing was held for the Senate bill, but the House bill was heard in the House Judiciary Committee. The League presented written testimony to explain the League position that supports nonpartisan election of appellate court judges nominated by a nonpartisan diverse commission. The bill was left pending in committee. The House leadership was not supportive of the issue.

We supported and testified for Senator Duncan's bill that would increase salaries for state and county judges who had not had a salary increase since 1998. This issue had widespread support. However, after passing out of the conference committee, the bill was scuttled in the House over a dispute with an amendment that included increases for indigent defense. Although this item was not on the agenda, Senator Duncan introduced a similar bill in the special session without the indigent defense provision. The League presented written and oral testimony at the Senate State Affairs Committee in favor of the bill. The committee voted in favor of the bill. It was hoped that the issue would be included in the special session.

2007. As in the 79th Legislative Session, Senator Duncan filed SB 806 with its companion SJR 32 for a constitutional amendment. The enabling bill would provide for a nonpartisan merit selection system of appointment of judges followed by a retention or rejection election of judges after a specified period of time of service. Identical bills were filed in the House. None of the bills were heard by their respective committees. However, both bills contained a position the League cannot support at this time, the inclusion of state district courts judges. The bills would provide for initial appointments that would be made by the governor as provided in the Texas Constitution during the interim in 2008. The League spoke with the general counsel for Senator Duncan to ask for a filing of a bill in 2009 Legislative Session with modifications that can meet the League position. In April 2007 the LWVTX, through the assistance of KLRN, produced and televised a program, "Conversation on Judicial Independence."

2009. In the 81st Legislative Session, Senator Duncan, supported by the League, filed an enabling bill and constitutional amendment that would provide for a nonpartisan appointment/retention system to select appellate judges. This was slightly different from previous sessions. Not included were state district judges. However, the bills were withdrawn. Subsequently, the Senator filed SB 2226 and SJR 44 to provide for partisan judicial elections in the primary followed by a nonpartisan appointment/retention election. The League remained neutral as our position for judicial selection clearly states it be nonpartisan. The bills were not placed on the Senate calendar. In the House, HB 3995 provided for a nonpartisan appointment/retention system. The League presented oral and written testimony. Although the bill was voted out of the House Civil and Jurisprudence Committee, it did not pass out of the Consent Calendars Committee.

Early in the session Chief Justice Wallace Jefferson of the Texas Supreme Court made a strong case for the adoption of an appointment/retention system for judicial selection during his State of the Judiciary speech to the Legislature. Early in the same day, the League participated in a press conference with several other organizations in anticipation of the Chief Justice's speech.

A group to which the League is a collaborator, Clean Elections Texas, supported a bill that would provide for public financing for judicial candidates. Although the League supports public financing of campaigns this measure was not nonpartisan as required by our judicial position. As a result, the League did not support it.

2011. In the 82nd Legislative Session, Senator Duncan filed SB 1718, which proposed filling vacancies in appellate judicial offices by appointment, partisan elections for all judicial offices, and nonpartisan elections for retention or rejection of all judicial offices. The League remained neutral as our position for judicial selection clearly states elections be nonpartisan. There was a hearing on this bill in the State Affairs Committee, testimony was taken, but the bill was left pending in committee.

In February, Chief Justice Wallace Jefferson of the Texas Supreme Court urged the Legislature to "send the people a constitutional amendment that would allow judges to be selected on their merit." He also urged "common-sense solutions to the problems that plague partisan election of judges."

2019: After nearly a decade of inaction and disinterest, the Legislature woke up to the need to at least examine our state's system of selecting judges. The result was the passage of one of three bills supported by LWVTX, calling for an interim study of methods of choosing judges. Though not the strongest of the three proposed bills, the new law presents an opportunity to move forward, away from partisan judicial elections toward a fairer system for selecting qualified, impartial judges. The measure calls for appointment of an Interim Commission on Judicial Selection that is tasked with considering the fairness, effectiveness and desirability of electing Texas' judges through partisan elections.

The Commission's study must also consider judicial selection methods proposed or adopted by other states, as well as the merits of using a public member board to nominate or assess the qualifications of candidates for judicial offices, among other specified methods of selecting judges. The Commission must submit a report to the Governor and Legislature by December 31, 2020 that includes specific recommendations for statutory and constitutional changes.

The statute specifies that the Commission include: four members appointed by the governor; four senators appointed by the lieutenant governor (including one senator who is a member of the political party with which the lt. gov. is affiliated and one senator who is a member of a political party other than the party with which the lt. gov. is affiliated); four members of the house of representatives appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives (including one representative who is a member of the political party with which the speaker is affiliated and one representative who is a member of a political party other than the party with which the speaker is affiliated); one member appointed by the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court; one member appointed by the presiding judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals; and one member appointed by the board of directors of the State Bar of Texas.

The makeup of the Commission will be critical to its deliberations and recommendations. LWVTX, as an affiliate of the Texas Fair Courts Network that supported the new law, suggested suitable and qualified candidates to those appointing Commission members. We were pleased that two members recommended by the Network were appointed: Former Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Wallace Jefferson (by Chief Justice Hecht, current Chief Justice of the Texas Supreme Court) and former Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips (by Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Presiding Judge Keller).

The Commission held its first meeting in January 2019 and has been holding monthly meetings, with a hiatus due to the pandemic in April and May. The Fair Courts Network has had a representative in attendance at each Commission meeting. At the Commission's meeting on June 5, 2020 (held via Zoom because of the pandemic), the Texas Fair Courts Network presented testimony, with LWVTX signing on to most of the points made. In addition, LWVTX presented its own testimony, highlighting our Judicial Selection position.

LWVTX applauds the bill creating the Interim Commission and is cautiously optimistic that we will be able to support at least some of its recommendations in accordance with the Judicial Selection position. As always, the "devil will be in the details."

2021. At the close of the prior session in 2019, the passage of HB 3040 calling for appointment of an Interim Commission on Judicial Selection presented an opportunity to move forward, away from partisan judicial elections toward a fairer system for selecting qualified, fair and impartial judges. The LWV and other proponents of a fairer system were cautiously optimistic that the Commission (which was tasked with presenting a report and recommendations by December 31, 2020) and the 2021 Legislature would bring about needed changes to the system.

Unfortunately, meaningful reform has not occurred in 2021. The Commission report indicated an even (7-7 with one abstention) split on adoption of an appointive judicial selection system followed by retention election (basically the LWV position) but rejected adoption of a nonpartisan judicial election system. No bills were filed that would have significantly changed the current system. However, two proposed constitutional amendments that favorably "tweak" the system, supported by the League and our coalition partner, Fair Courts Network, have passed the legislature and will be presented to Texas voters for their approval in November:

SJR 47 would increase the minimum qualifications for judicial offices by increasing the required amount of judicial experience as well as the period during which a person's license to practice law could not have been revoked, suspended or subject to a probated suspension. The report of the Interim Commission on Judicial Selection overwhelmingly recommended (by a vote of 12 yes,1 no, and 2 abstain) these changes to current law.

HJR 165 would allow the State Commission on Judicial Conduct (SCJC) to accept complaints or reports, conduct investigations, and take any other action authorized by the Texas Constitution with respect to a candidate for state judicial office in the same manner the commission may take those actions with respect to a person holding such office. HJR 165 would thus level the playing field between candidates for judicial office who are not current officeholders and incumbents by expanding the authority of the SCJC to receive complaints and conduct investigations. Currently, elected judicial officers are held to high standards specified in the Code of Judicial Conduct, whereas their non-judge opponents are not.

Sadly, the zeal of some legislators to restrict voting rights and access also threatened to adversely and unfairly affect judicial selection in Texas: SB 11 would have restructured the Texas Courts of Appeals by consolidating the number of appeals courts districts from 14 to 7, SB 1529 would have created a special appeals court of limited jurisdiction, giving the state undue preference in litigation brought against the state by citizens alleging injustices committed by the state or its agents - with the judges on this new court elected at-large statewide, HB 1875 would have created special Business Courts at the trial and appellate levels which would have jurisdiction in cases involving complex business law - with the judges on both courts being appointed by the governor.

Fortunately all of these bills, vigorously opposed by LWV and many members and supporters via Action Alerts, died during the regular session, but may be revived in a special session.

E. Financing State Government

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports constitutional and statutory provisions for flexibility within a coordinated finance structure; equitable taxation system that assures adequate revenue; and increased accountability including the following:

- Removal of provisions relating to dedicated funds, ad valorem tax exemptions, dollar amounts of debt limitations, and other such specific wording from the constitution and making them statutory.
- Budget execution to be a joint responsibility of the executive and legislative branches of state government.
- Application of appropriate fiscal management and business practices to conduct state business.
- An equitable system of taxation that assures adequate revenue, is easily administered; and is consistent with economic, social, and environmental goals.
- Appraisal of taxable property at full market value; state supervision to ensure equitable and uniform appraisal and taxing procedures.

Explanation: Financing State Government

The League studied state financing as part of its multiyear study of Texas Constitutional Revision, adopting in 1973 a 2-year study, "Financing State Government." The League study first focused on constitutional provisions relating to state finances. League members found that the state's elaborate restrictions on taxing, spending, and borrowing, intended to ensure fiscal prudence, often had quite the opposite effect. Instead they created obstacles to sound fiscal planning, management, and organization, and failed to limit the financial practices they were intended to restrict. An example is the flat prohibition of state debt. Texas' outstanding debt not only exists but also has been on the rise, just as total state spending has risen in recent years. The prohibition has served at times to increase the debt load by forcing the state to resort to more expensive methods of borrowing, such as the issuance of revenue bonds, rather than lower interest rate general obligation bonds. The League agreed that the Constitution should permit the legislature and governor the freedom to develop fiscal policies for the state to meet current needs.

Next, the League study centered on the taxes imposed by the state government. The ability-to-pay approach for new or expanded taxes is preferred, although, in some cases, a tax levied according to the benefit theory would be acceptable as long as it was equitable and certain to be collected. A graduated personal or corporate income tax meets the League criteria for a new tax, but a general sales tax does not. An equitable system of taxation also requires that tax laws be rewritten and enforced so there is certainty of collection at a relatively low cost.

History: Financing State Government

Late 1970s-early 1980s. League members agreed that taxation to encourage desirable economic and social goals (such as preservation of agricultural lands and open space by preferential tax treatment; see Land Use position) is valid provided that there are sufficient safeguards to ensure that the goal sought actually is met by the preferential tax treatment, and that the cost of meeting the desired goal be accurately and truly known so responsible cost-benefit evaluations can be made.

The League worked for major changes in property tax administration to make this tax more equitable and more easily and uniformly enforced. League-supported legislation requiring the establishment of single appraisal districts, appraisal of property at full market value, state supervised reports of taxable values, and training for tax appraisers was enacted in 1979.

1980s. Progress toward LWVTX positions on tax reform has come largely as a result of continuing economic crisis in the 1980's and early 1990's. Declining state revenues have led successive legislatures to look for new sources of funds while some legislators sought to ban constitutionally the enactment of a state income tax. The League has urged restructuring of the state's revenue sources, while opposing a constitutional ban on the income tax. In 1987, the enactment of the largest tax increase in Texas history led to the creation of a Select Committee on Tax Equity charged with recommending changes to the state's financial system. The League supported many of the committee's recommendations, including efforts to broaden the tax base by use of expanded business taxes and exploring the eventual necessity for personal and corporate income taxes; however, reforms in the 1989 session were limited in scope and did not address the need for thorough reform.

1991. Reform of the state's finance structure was given priority by the LWVTX in 1991 because the projected $5 billion gap between estimated revenues and needed expenditures indicated that funding would be a major issue. State leaders, in an unusual move, postponed action on funding and budget issues until the first special session in order to await the results of thorough reviews of both expenditures and revenue sources. A Performance Review Panel appointed by the state comptroller carried out an audit of state agencies and held public hearings on how to cut costs of state government, while the Governor's Task Force on Revenue heard from experts and the public on ways to improve the state's revenue position. The LWVTX monitored both proceedings and presented the League's positions to the Governor's Task Force on Revenue.

The solutions ultimately adopted in 1991 for the state's fiscal crisis represented, from the League's point of view, partial progress in some areas while pitfalls were avoided in other areas. There was no movement on a personal income tax, but efforts to pass a constitutional amendment prohibiting it failed, and the sales tax rate was not increased. The corporate franchise tax, while not expanded to include other forms of business organization, was revised to include a tax on earned surplus (similar to an income tax).

The special session also produced the state lottery proposition that was approved by voters. The LWVTX took no position on the lottery as such, but opposed constitutional dedication of lottery revenues and also warned against making any essential state service dependent upon a lottery because such services require revenue sources that are both stable and adequate. The version ultimately approved contained no dedication of revenues.

1993. State leaders, facing another fiscal crisis in 1993, took a no-new-taxes stance on the budget. The League, speaking out on the proposed appropriations bill, called for increased funding for public schools and health and human services and reiterated that the state's fiscal crisis can only be resolved by restructuring Texas' tax system. The 73rd Legislature was able to adopt a balanced budget by cutting the level of services, by mandating better fiscal management, and by further shifting of tax burdens to the local level, particularly the burden of public school finance.

Implementation of suggestions set forth in the state comptroller's second performance review helped balance the budget, and some of the adopted recommendations are in accord with the LWVTX positions favoring increased accountability in the state's financial system. Of particular note was the adoption for the first time of a performance-based budget, a format advocated by the League since 1975.

The LWVTX was one of the few groups to testify against the proposed constitutional amendment adopted by voters in November 1993 that prohibits legislative enactment of a personal income tax without a majority vote of the people. This amendment also dedicates at least two thirds of income tax revenues to local school property tax relief and the remaining revenues to education. League opposition was based on our positions that call for a flexible state finance structure and for removal of provisions relating to dedicated funds.

1995. Once again, legislators avoided a tax increase. The 6.2% spending increase over the previous state budget is to be financed by growth in state revenue. Yet the need for changes in Texas' tax structure is apparent to the League and to the state's political leaders as well. Governor Bush has pledged an interim study, with special attention to reducing reliance on property taxes.

1997. A tax relief bill dominated the session, but the final version bore little resemblance to that introduced by the governor, which had placed a high priority on the issue of reliance on property taxes. Reluctant to tackle the complicated problem of public school finance, legislators produced a last minute compromise bill that used the state's $1 billion surplus to fund property tax relief. A business tax provision in the original version held promise of broadening the tax base and developing a more equitable system of taxation, a longtime League goal. The League testified before both Senate and House committees, advocating the need for a state income tax in the long run, and a reform of the state sales tax and greater equity in taxes levied on businesses in the short term. Proponents of a state income tax were encouraged by the frequency with which the words "income tax" came up during this session.

The bill that was signed into law also dedicated lottery proceeds to fund education. The League opposes dedicated revenue funds of this type, which tend to make government less flexible and efficient. The League also has concerns about making a state service such as education dependent on a revenue source such as a state surplus, which is neither adequate nor reliable.

1999. Due to sizeable income from a tobacco suit settlement and a booming economy, debates regarding financing state government dealt with how and where to appropriate the income. League advocates were present and vocal during specific appropriations discussions. See sections regarding Health Care and Natural Resources.

2001. As in 1999, League advocates focused on the appropriations process. During this session, the LWVTX promoted funding for comprehensive health care services for women and children, increased childcare subsidies, Medicaid simplification (which became a large budget issue as the session progressed), implementation of the SB 1 regional water planning process, and public participation in environmental decision making. The League distributed a fact sheet to legislators with information on League budget priorities. State Government financing and the financing of public education will be two of the most important issues that will be examined during the interim.

2003. The LWVTX included both Financing State Government and Public School Finance in its periodic program review during the 2001-03 biennium. Minor editorial changes were made to our Financing State Government position but no substantive changes were made. Knowing that the state was facing large deficits and there was a likelihood of significant cuts in state spending, the LWVTX joined with other organizations concerned about adequate funding of state services in the Fair Taxation Coalition under the umbrella of ProTex, a grassroots organizing group. One of the results of the coalition's work is a Fair Taxation Workshop, which can be given to community groups. It received high marks when it was presented at Convention in April and in other venues. The League expects to be giving the workshop throughout the next year.

Although much of the focus of the legislature and the LWVTX was on public finance issues as the state was faced with a $10 billion deficit for the biennium, lack of agreement or time left most bills relating to public finance neither passed nor considered by the end of the session. The League testified for several bills that would have increased state revenues, and against several which would have further hampered the ability of the legislature to increase state revenues through taxation. The League and a few other members of the Fair Taxation Coalition were frequently the only advocates for increased funding in order to assure adequate state services.

Almost all of the bills we followed, good and bad, did not pass. Only one bill, which affects local property taxes, passed. This law puts teeth into the requirement that businesses render their property for ad valorem tax purposes; it is estimated that it will increase local property taxes significantly.

Two constitutional amendments voted on in September 2004 will impact local property taxes. One freezes school taxes for disabled homeowners, and the other allows counties, cities, towns and junior college districts to freeze other property taxes for persons over 65 and for persons with disabilities.

Governor Perry signed a $117 billion state budget on June 22. Keeping campaign promises by many legislators, the budget contained no new taxes, although it does include some increases in fees. Although higher in total than the appropriations for last biennium due to anticipated increased federal spending, general revenue spending was reduced by $2.6 billion.

The new budget will result in decreased services and/or demands for increased funding of many services at the local level. Tuition increases are expected at some public universities and colleges since public institutions were given the power to set their own tuitions. While the eligibility levels for Children's Health Insurance Program, Medicaid, and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) were maintained, procedural changes in these programs are expected to reduce or at least not significantly increase caseloads. In addition, for the Children's Health Insurance Program, a number of previously provided benefits, including dental and most mental health benefits, were eliminated. Services to the elderly and mentally ill were also eliminated or reduced in scope, and cuts were made in criminal justice programs including all state funding for the highly respected Criminal Justice Policy Council.

2005. Of the 59 bills related to public finance that the League followed, only one (HB 1, the General Appropriations Bill) actually passed, and this was the bill from which the governor line item vetoed all funds related to public education. Bills such as a statewide property tax and indexing of gasoline taxes didn't pass; a lot of bad bills, like greatly increased sales taxes, caps on tax rates and appraisals for example, also didn't pass. However, once the governor called a special session to consider school finance, it appeared that some of the same battles would be fought all over again.

The governor put caps on property tax rates, school funding, and education reform in the call for the special session. He also issued his proposed solution to the school-funding situation. Major provisions included making partnerships owned by corporations subject to the corporate franchise tax; increasing the sales tax by 0.007%; adding certain services to the sales tax base; and increasing the cigarette tax by $1.00/pack. Presumably to offset the increase in the sales tax that would fall most heavily on the poor, the governor proposed to increase the homestead exemption by $7,500 to $22,500 in 2007. When added to vetoed funds from other bills, the governor said that there would be a $1.9 billion net increase in school funding for the biennium, significantly lower than the $3 billion the House was aiming for and the up-to $7 billion cited as necessary by public school support groups. Property taxes would be reduced by 30 cents/$100 valuation in 2006 and 35 cents/$100 in 2007. None of these passed the special session.

HB 3 did not pass. It was revenue neutral, and its sole purpose was to replace the property tax with other taxes. HB 4 would reduce the increase in tax rates from 8% to 5% to trigger a rollback election if 10% of the voters petition for one.

2011. For the decades since the League started recording, Texas state leadership has struggled to finance the government of a growing population while refusing to raise revenue. The attempt to reconcile the two opposing goals has continued through feast and famine, which this year involved an estimated $27 billion shortfall. That is, for this biennium, the legislature was short one fourth of the money it needed to simply keep the same level and amount of services it provided in 2010.

The shortfall is the result of the protracted national recession that started in 2007, and of an institutional deficit created in 2006 when property taxes were reduced by one third, and an inadequate business margins tax established to balance the loss of funds. The permanent deficit leaves Texas government $10 billion per biennium short in needed revenue. Instead of dealing with the problem, state leaders couched the fiscal crisis in terms of towing the financial line. Before the session both the governor and members of the legislature vowed there would be no new taxes. In addition, they decided not to tap the majority of the Rainy Day Fund, a renewable pot of money–estimated to be $6 billion by the end of this biennium–that was created for just this type of fiscal emergency.

By the end of the special session, the only viable finance bill, SB 1/HB 1, had cut total spending by $15 billion. To do that, the legislature cut some waste, employed a combination of fiscal tricks involving delayed payment, underestimated future obligations to Medicare and Medicaid, and raised some user fees. The final legislation was $4.8 billion short of covering projected Medicaid costs and had stripped $4 billion from public education. This amounts to about $500 per pupil across the state.

The most ominous move during this session, however, was the breaking of an almost 60-year promise Texas lawmakers have kept, until now, to provide each student in the state an adequate basic education through the Foundation School Program. It remains for the 2013 legislative session to do the hard work of fiscal reform this session shirked.

2015. State budget bills: We submitted detailed remarks to both the House and Senate regarding our views on the proposed budgets—both that of the Senate and that of the House. All budget bills must originate in the House, and the Senate proposes a substitute HB 1.

Additionally, several bills were introduced which we responded to: We opposed HB 31, which decreased the state sales and use tax rate. We opposed this bill because our position states that we support "an equitable taxation system that assures adequate revenue." As we currently do not have the revenue to cover our essential needs for education, health care, transportation and infrastructure, it is illogical to cut taxes for the future. The bill died in the Finance committee. SB 1 reduced the ad valorem taxes by increasing the exemption of $15,000 for a homestead to $25,000. We presented testimony on this bill before the House Ways & Means Committee. It passed both Houses and was signed by the governor.

SB 9 limited the rate of growth of appropriations for future years. In our letter to the Budget Conference Committee, not only did we speak to issues which we support, but we also opposed any cap on future budgets, saying "But the most egregious budgetary action would be to put a cap on future budgets which would lower our ability to meet growing needs, much less address needs from past years. We strongly OPPOSE such an action." Fortunately no budget caps passed.

2017. The Conference Committee on the General Appropriations Bill (SB 1) was signed by Governor Abbott on May 31. We now have a budget of $217 billion. The Senate proposal was $171.7 billion and House proposal was $218.1 billion. The difficulty is that it is not enough to adequately fund a number of programs, including public education and Medicaid. To reach even this number, however, $1 billion was taken from the Rainy Day Fund and $2 billion from the dedicated highway fund.

At this point the biggest loss is education, when the Senate would not accept HB 21 by Representative Huberty–due to the Senate adding school choice (vouchers) to the bill–which has now failed. Our children will feel the burden.

2019. According to the May 31 issue of the Texas Tribune, the final biennial budget for the state of Texas was $250.7 billion, up 15.7% from two years ago. It includes increased spending for public education and property tax cuts.

Legislators did not use the Economic Stabilization Fund for the regular budget, but did make a $6.1 billion withdrawal for the supplemental budget to pay for Hurricane Harvey recovery and infrastructure projects.

It includes $6.5 billion for school funding and teacher pay, $5 billion for property tax cuts, $66.5 billion for Medicaid, $4.4 billion for mental and behavioral health, $342 million for early childhood intervention, $256 million for judicial salaries, $12.2 million for adult protective services pay raises.

The League issued an Action Alert on April 10 asking all Representatives to vote against HJR 3, a proposed constitutional amendment to increase the state sales tax from 6.25% to 7.25%. The tax would have hit low income Texans the hardest: low-income Texans pay 7.4% of their income to state sales taxes, while the wealthiest pay only 1.6%. Our current sales tax rate is 13th highest in the country, and adding another percent would have made Texas the highest (tied with California). The Alert generated 381 letters to legislators. The resolution passed the House Ways and Means Committee on May 1, but was never voted on by the full House.

F. Homeowners Association Reform

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports changes in Texas law governing mandatory homeowner associations that would:

- Protect against unreasonable foreclosure on homesteads.
- Assure priority of payments so that assessment payments apply first to delinquent dues and then to non-assessment items, such as interest and penalties.
- Reform HOA elections to ensure secret ballots in homeowner elections and safeguards against fraud to assure uniform, honest, and accurate election results.
- Assure that homeowners have access to meetings and records of the homeowner associations.

Explanation: Homeowners Association Reform

This issue was first proposed as a not-recommended concurrence at Convention 2010 by LWV of the Houston Area. Delegates voted to defer the issue to Convention 2012 pending further consideration by a committee to study the Houston materials, consider bills pertaining to homeowner association reform filed in the 2011 legislature, and the need for statewide advocacy. The board recommended the concurrence in 2012.

History: Homeowners Association Reform

2013. The positions of LWVTX on homeowners associations limited which bills could be analyzed or supported.

HB 35 (Menéndez) was passed. It amended the property code to provide that when an owner owns a lot adjacent to the lot on which his residence is located, the adjacent lot can be sold separately only in its original condition as to be suitable for construction as originally platted. HB 2928 (Sheets) that the League opposed would have circumvented a homeowner's right to a judicial foreclosure as established in the 82nd Legislature. It died in committee.

The 82nd Legislature in 2011 passed HB 2761, which provided that any vote cast in an election or vote by a property owners' association must be in writing and signed by the member. Immediately thereafter provision was made that electronic votes cast constitute written and signed ballots. The League position argues there is weak protection from fraud with electronic balloting. In 2013 HB 818 (White) that the League opposed would have specifically eliminated the requirement that a ballot must be in writing, signed by the member or that identity of the property owner be confirmed, greatly raising risk of fraud. It did not pass out of the Calendars Committee.

G. Intestacy (Dying Without a Will)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports equitable intestacy laws including the following provisions:

• The surviving spouse should inherit all of the community property when the decedent had no children or when the surviving spouse is the parent of all the children of the decedent.

- The surviving spouse should not inherit all of the community property when the decedent is survived by minor children not of the surviving spouse.
- The surviving parent of a minor child should be required to obtain court permission to dispose of the child's property when it is valued at more than $50,000.

Explanation & History: Intestacy

Delegates to the 1983 state Convention identified intestacy as needing study. It has not been a legislative priority in recent years. Intestacy was studied as part of the 1995-97 periodic program review. The position reflects current law but was retained and clarified to allow the League to advocate for equitable intestacy laws in the event of a backlash.

H. Public School Finance

1973, 1981, 1993, 2003

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports a school finance system that would provide taxpayer equity and an equitable distribution of funds to ensure that all Texas school children receive a high-quality education. Specific measures that we support include:

- A sufficient level of state support to Texas public schools to ensure that all Texas school children receive a high-quality education.
- A guaranteed tax base yield approach for part of the local enrichment, to mitigate spending disparities resulting from differences in wealth among school districts in Texas; however, the League believes some un-equalized local enrichment should be allowed within a substantially equalized system.
- Equalized state assistance to districts for essential capital outlays.
- Taxpayer equity in the form of state equalization aid to local districts allotted in direct proportion to local tax effort.
- State established minimum local expenditure levels with joint state-local financing (known as the foundation school approach) that includes:
- Adequate salaries to attract and retain qualified teachers and/or teaching personnel.
- Adequate funding of the basic allotment, which provides for operations and programs for special categories of students, specifically vocational education, compensatory education, special education, kindergarten, and gifted and talented.
- Maintenance of a weighted approach to distribution of state school finance money to individual student needs.

The League of Women Voters of Texas opposes:

- The voucher system as well as choice options that do not promote racial integration and/or equal access to quality education.
- Any state requirement that local districts use state school finance monies to provide local tax relief.

Explanation: Public School Finance

Our school finance positions are the products of two separate studies undertaken by the LWVTX and two subsequent program reviews. The first study was adopted in 1972, and the resulting consensus led to active League involvement in school finance legislation during regular and special sessions from 1973-79.

Because new issues were raised during these sessions and because League members wished to clarify some positions reached earlier, delegates to Convention 1979 adopted a restudy of the Texas school finance system. The restudy was completed in 1981. In 1992 the LWVTX Periodic Program Review Committee reviewed the public school finance positions and recommended extensive revision. Most of the recommendations involved updating terminology, but the review committee suggested substantive changes in the positions concerning equalization of facilities funding and caps on local enrichment. All of the recommendations were approved at Convention 1993. In 2003 the LWVTX Periodic Program Review Committee again recommended changes in the Position, most notably by adding a section on accountability of charter schools. The recommendations were approved at Convention 2003. In 2004 accountability of charter schools and the four related bullets were removed from the public school finance position. The LWVTX position covers charter schools since they are public schools.

History: Public School Finance

1979. The system of property tax administration, which had been contributing to inequities among school districts, was made more rational by passage of League-supported bills in 1979 requiring one appraisal district per county and by the establishment of the State Property Tax Board. The tax board is responsible for determining the market value of taxable property in each school district, an essential factor in calculating school finance formulas.

1983-84. Much attention was focused on school finance and teacher salaries during the 1983 Legislative Session. Because of a tight budget and the unwillingness of some legislators to raise taxes, no substantive changes were made. Following the session, the Select Committee on Public Education, chaired by Ross Perot, was appointed to investigate the financing of education in Texas with a view toward reform of the system in a special legislative session.

The Texas Legislature met in special session during the summer of 1984 to enact many of the recommendations of Select Committee on Public Education, including a complete overhaul of the foundation program. HB 72 changed the foundation program from one based on objects of expenditure (teacher salaries, transportation, operating expenses) to a weighted approach based on various educational programs (regular education, special, vocational, compensatory, and bilingual education). Three significant new programs were mandated: prekindergarten for disadvantaged 4-year-olds, summer bilingual education for 4- and 5-year-olds with limited English, and a class enrollment cap of 22 in Grades K-4. HB 72 expanded the foundation program level to absorb a greater share of local enrichment.

For 1985, $900 million in state funds were added and the local share was raised by $1.1 billion, thereby diverting local tax revenue from enrichment to the local share of the foundation program. While the legislature enacted the largest tax bill in the state's history, local school board trustees enacted the largest school property tax increase ever, raising property tax levies by $519 million. Increased local tax levies substantially negated the equalization improvement that the legislature tried to achieve.

1985. School funding in the lean budget of the 1985 Legislative Session fared comparatively well in the face of gloomy revenue projections. Little significant education legislation passed as the state leadership remained firm in its resolve to avoid a major overhaul of the recent education reforms. The gifted and talented were added as a special population to the foundation program, and the jeopardized optional full-day, full-state-funded kindergarten was retained.

1987. During the 1987 Legislative Session, several attempts were made to cut the public school budget because of the revenue shortfall. The League testified in favor of an increase in the level of state aid to ensure that all Texas school children would receive quality education. By the time that the final 1988-89 budget was adopted, public education was not trimmed substantially.

We also testified against a bill that would have mandated the adjustment of public school funding formulas through the appropriations process since a League position speaks to the clear assignment of responsibility in state government, and we believed school funding formulas were the primary concern of the Texas Education Agency and the House Education Committee, not the House Appropriations Committee.

1989. In the spring of 1987, Judge Harley Clark declared Texas' school finance system unconstitutional. This decision was overturned by the Court of Appeals and was then appealed to the Texas Supreme Court.

In the meantime, during the 1989 Legislative Session, several attempts were made to add substantial amounts of money to the Foundation School Program in order to offset the Clark decision. However, because there was great reluctance to raise taxes again, only $450 million in new state money was provided to the public schools although $360 million was in the form of a guaranteed tax yield system.

Most observers agreed the legislative action was insufficient to rectify any inequities in funding between rich and poor districts. Indeed, in October 1989, the Texas Supreme Court, in Edgewood I, threw out the school finance system.

1990-91. In response to the Texas Supreme Court ruling that the school finance system was unconstitutional, the legislature passed SB 1, which was also declared unconstitutional by the high court in the Edgewood II decision in January 1991. The court set a deadline of April 1, 1991, for the legislature to adopt a constitutional system. Thus, the search for an equitable school funding system and the means to fund it dominated the regular session of the 72nd Legislature. The LWVTX adopted public school finance as a priority and consistently affirmed the need for adequate as well as equitable funding for the public schools.

The plan ultimately adopted created 188 new taxing districts known as County Education Districts. Funds raised within the County Education Districts were redistributed among school districts within the County Education Districts on the basis of property tax wealth and tax effort.

1992. In January the Texas Supreme Court in Edgewood III struck down the County Education District tax system as unconstitutional, holding that this system was in effect an unconstitutional state property tax, and furthermore that the County Education District tax was not a valid local tax since it had not been approved by the voters in each County Education District. The high court set a firm deadline of June 1, 1993, for the legislature to come up with an equitable system that did not violate other sections of the state constitution.

The League was active in the November 1992 special session that was called to find a solution to the school finance dilemma. A proposed plan to switch from the County Education District countywide system to statewide recapture of property taxes, redistributing certain property tax revenues from the wealthiest districts statewide, failed to win the necessary legislative approval to put it on the ballot as a proposed constitutional amendment.

1993. With the court-imposed June 1993 deadline looming, the League chose to dedicate significant resources to following and shaping the school finance bill as the 73rd Legislature convened in January. The League lobbyist stayed on top of the ever-evolving bill as the state struggled to find a formulation that the court would find constitutional, that the legislature would approve, and that met the state leadership promise to voters of no new taxes.

Voters rejected the constitutional amendment that the legislature, with League support, put on the May 1993 ballot. This proposition, known to some as a "Robin Hood" or "share-the-wealth" plan, would have required a limited redistribution of local property taxes from the wealthiest districts to the needlest districts statewide.

With the defeat of the May 1 proposition and with 1 month before the court-imposed deadline, the legislature passed a school finance plan that gave wealthy districts five choices for sharing property tax revenues with property-poor districts in the state.

In the summer following the 1993 Regular Session, many of the wealthy districts chose, with overwhelming voter approval, the option of transferring funds to the state for redistribution statewide in lieu of risking forced consolidation. At the same time, however, these districts were challenging the new school finance plan in court. The needier districts were also challenging the plan, contending they would have to raise taxes just to stay even financially.

While the League was actively supporting the equitable, limited redistribution of local school taxes to property-poor districts in the 73rd Legislature, the League called again for a restructuring of the state tax system. The League noted that the share of school funding continues to decrease while the burden on the local school property tax increases each session. What the League has long advocated to reverse the trend is adequate state revenue from a broad-based, statewide tax, such as the income tax.

1995. As the 74th Legislature convened, the Texas Supreme Court affirmed the constitutionality of the 1993 school finance plan. Thus, for the first time in several sessions, public school finance was not a priority issue for legislators or the League. Although the League was not active in this area, the legislature enacted and the governor signed SB 1, a rewrite of all of the state's public education laws. Some highlights of the new law include:

- Individual districts are given the option of more local control if they adopt rule charters.
- Minimum teacher salaries were increased.
- Schools will now have "foundation" and "enrichment" curricula.
- In the area of school finance, the basic allotment per student was raised. $170 million was appropriated for assistance for instructional facilities. Low-wealth districts with acceptable tax efforts may apply for state assistance for construction/improvement of instructional facilities.

Note. In affirming the 1993 school finance plan, the Texas Supreme Court emphasized the state's duty to provide all districts with substantially equal access to operations and facilities funding. The court stated that there was no requirement for a separate facilities component in the plan as long as districts are able to meet their operations and facilities needs from available funding. The court warned, however, that the point at which some districts will be unable to meet these needs under the plan is near.

1997. As noted in the Financing State Government section of the handbook, a tax relief bill dominated the session, but the legislature was unwilling to tackle real reform of the state's taxation system, particularly the thorny issue of public school finance. The tax bill finally passed by the legislature funded property tax relief for homeowners with the state's $1 billion surplus. The League expressed concern about this type of funding, taking money away from important services such as public education. In addition, there may be no surplus in the next biennium to compensate for the reduced property tax, imposing an added burden on local school districts. The only significant change in public school finance to come out of this legislature was the dedication of lottery funds for education, a move that the League strongly opposes. Once again during this session, legislation that would have allocated funds for public education to private schools, via vouchers, was defeated. The League presented testimony and wrote to legislators expressing opposition to such measures.

1999. Once again, the issue of private school vouchers took center stage in the arena of public school finance. The LWVTX was a part of the Coalition for Public Schools. We used our grassroots network not only to contact legislators telling why using public funds for private education is bad public policy, but also to contact targeted legislators at crucial times during the session. No voucher-legislation is one of the successes of this session.

2001. The LWVTX again worked with the Coalition for Public Schools. This session the issue was charter schools, not vouchers. The Coalition supported an excellent charter schools bill based on an interim study that passed the House. A less desirable bill passed the Senate. However, the compromise bill addressed the issues identified during the interim. These issues include a cap of 215 on open-enrollment charter schools and elimination of the category "at-risk" charter schools; the designation of funds received by charter schools as public funds held in trust for children; increased powers for the commissioner of education over licensing of charter schools; a requirement of at least a high school diploma for all teachers in charter schools; and a requirement for notification of parents about the qualifications of all teachers.

A teachers' health insurance bill also passed. Because there were many advocates on this issue, the LWVTX monitored but was not heavily involved in its passage. Funds in the amount of $1.24 million were earmarked for health benefits for teachers. Small districts (fewer than 500 workers) are required to join a statewide insurance pool that is also optional with districts up to 1,000 workers. Larger districts must wait until 2005 to join unless the state is ready sooner.

2003. Legislators vowed to revamp the way Texas public schools were funded, but the House and Senate couldn't agree on a plan. The House plan would have put a sunset date on Robin Hood and allowed lawmakers to come back during a special session to study the issue. The Senate plan, backed by Lt. Governor Dewhurst, would have cut property taxes while expanding sales taxes and would have repaired the system during the regular session. Neither plan passed during the regular session, but legislators did extend an additional $1.2 billion to public education using per-student formulas to keep school districts alive until a new system is found. To complicate matters, during the session the courts ruled that the case from property rich schools calling for an end to Robin Hood could be heard. Governor Perry vowed to call a special session, but did not set a date.

House Speaker Craddick appointed a House Select Committee on School Finance, divided into eight subcommittees, which is charged with looking at school finance and the state tax system. While the focus will be primarily on school finance, there could be repercussions across the entire Texas public finance spectrum. A special session of the legislature is expected in late winter or spring, 2004.

In the area of vouchers, which were very much a part of the session, "organized people defeated organized money," according to the Coalition for Public Schools comprised of 38 organizations, including the LWVTX. For the first time, the governor, It. governor, speaker of the House, and the chairs of the Public Education Committees in both the House and Senate supported private school vouchers. In addition, prominent state and national individual and organizational proponents testified before legislative committees and/or took leadership roles in the voucher fight.

The voucher and virtual charter school battles started with straight-up bills discussed in public settings. But when those bills failed to pass, skirmishes continued until the final hours of the regular session in less visible negotiations in conference committees and via last-minute floor amendments to other bills. Lawmakers realized it would be fiscally irresponsible to take away funding from cash-strapped public schools to set up a new program to subsidize private and religious schools and home schools. The message from the Coalition for Public Schools members was that Texas taxpayers cannot afford private school vouchers, and that every available dollar must be used to ensure that every public school in every neighborhood is adequately funded so all Texas children can succeed.

2004. The governor called a special session on public financing in the spring. The LWVTX partnered with Common Cause, Public Citizen, the Grey Panthers, the Christian Life Commission, Texas Impact, and the Texas Education Crisis Coalition to write and release a joint statement on school finance reform addressed to the legislature and sent to the governor. Through work with other groups and League statements to the Joint Committee on Financing Education and to the Senate Finance Committee, the LWVTX supported the message that reform provided taxpayer equity and adequate funding to ensure that all Texas school children receive a high quality education and recognize that equity and quality are inseparable. (See the Spring 2004 Texas VOTER.) The session expired without completion of legislation or constitutional amendments.

2005. During the regular session, the legislature did not accomplish their #1 goal: to reform and improve the state's school finance system. By failing to pass a school finance reform bill, the legislature once again let politics shortchange the school children of Texas. Cuts were made during the last session, and the special session that followed failed to provide a solution. This session is the 3rd failure to provide meaningful support for the public schools. The leadership team of Governor Perry, Lt. Governor Dewhurst, and Speaker Craddick was unable to reach a compromise on the public school finance/education reform/property tax relief package that was the centerpiece of the 79th session of the legislature.

It appeared that the emphasis was more on lowering property taxes than on solving public school finance problems. In addition, state leaders were determined not to raise taxes overall, which limited the money available for schools and cost them support among education groups. During the late days of the session, Senate negotiators put emphasis on seeing that every school district in the state had nearly the same amount of money per student. They were also particularly critical of House efforts to raise the sales tax, saying they hurt low- and middle-income families.

The one success was that again, no voucher legislation was passed. There were several attempts to pass vouchers, both in specific bills about vouchers and as amendments to other bills. One session on the House floor was especially dramatic with close votes and parliamentary maneuvering.

Special Sessions #1 and #2. Governor Perry called a special session following the regular session. Public school finance was also back in the courts. The Texas Supreme Court will rule on a district court judge's decision that the state school finance system is unconstitutional in both equity and adequacy. During Special Session #1, the LWVTX issued two Action Alerts asking local Leagues to contact first their house members, then both their senators and representatives, urging them to oppose HB 3 (See Financing State Government). The LWVTX sent a letter to all members of the legislature asking them to vote against the bill when it came out of the conference committee. The LWVTX believed that the bill did not fund the schools more adequately or equitably and believed that the property tax relief and sales tax increases were not equitable to those taxpayers with incomes of $100,000 and below. Again the legislature had clearly not addressed the dual issues of funding public education and reforming the tax system to pay for that education.

2006. Public school finance and education reform was the agenda for the Senate Select Committee on Education Reform & Public School Finance that met biweekly in anticipation of a special session.

A special legislative session on public school finance was called early in the spring following the March primaries. The session had to address the subject of the Texas Supreme Court June 1 deadline on school finance that regarded as unconstitutional the current (statewide) property tax structure. State tax reform was the subject of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Tax Reform, chaired by John Sharp. The report and recommendations of the Committee formed the basis for a broad-based business tax reform (supported by the LWVTX) that was adopted by the special session and which served to answer the Texas Supreme Court decision. Schools were able to open on time. It remains to be seen if the business tax and the actions taken by the legislature (much of which concerned lowering the property tax) will form an adequate, dependable source of revenue for the public schools.

2009. The surviving public school finance bill, HB 3646, provides $1.9 billion in new money, largely from federal stimulus dollars. It was allocated in SB 1, the state biennial budget bill. HB 3646 makes changes that improve the way schools are funded and provide teachers with a minimum $800 pay raise. However, comprehensive reform of public school finance in Texas looms large. Schools face rising costs and a state funding freeze at 2006 levels. In addition, local revenues are capped at a rate that can be increased only through local elections. The need to change public school funding formulas remains a critical issue for the next session.

2011. Public school finance was a critical issue during this session, when legislators faced a $27 billion shortfall. Impasses over funding for education and health prompted a special session, though other issues were added later. Once again, the legislature failed to address systemic problems with the state's school finance system that is both inequitable and inadequately funded.

SB 1, the fiscal matters bill that passed during the special session, underfunds schools by $4 billion in the Foundation School Program and by $1.5 billion in state grants for such programs as full-day prekindergarten, science labs, Student Success Initiative funding for extra help for students at risk of failing state high-stakes tests, educator bonuses, the Communities in Schools dropout prevention program, and advanced-placement incentives. This is the first budget bill in more than 60 years that does not fund new enrollment in Texas public schools, estimated at 80,000 to 90,000 more students each year.

After using $3.2 billion of the state Rainy Day Fund to address the budget deficit, the legislature refused to spend any of the remaining $6 billion in the fund for schools. Nor would the legislature tackle the root cause of the school budget crisis, the 2006 tax swap that replaced property tax support for public education with a tax on small and medium business, called the margins tax. It has never resulted in expected revenues.

SB 1 does begin to phase out the target revenue-funding model that was created in 2006 in connection with the margins tax. This model created inequities in how funding is distributed to local districts. While SB 1 repeals target revenue in 2017, it is unclear how it will be further reduced and what future legislatures might do. Another provision of SB 1 allows certain charter schools that qualify to access the Permanent School Fund to guarantee bonds for facilities, a privilege previously authorized only for school districts. Many believe the new provision will put the Permanent School Fund at risk, since charter schools do not have a tax base.

SB 2, passed in special session, appropriates money for the support of government from September 1, 2011, to August 31, 2013. It is a technical bill that avoids having deficits in both public education spending and Medicaid at the same time. It is related to HJR 109, a proposed constitutional amendment, which appeared on the November 2011 ballot as Proposition 6 and passed. It allows SB 2 to appropriate $150 million each of the next two school years from the Available School Fund to public education. However, these additional funds will be offset by a matching reduction in state general revenue funding. Thus, passage of this amendment will not result in any additional funding for public education.

SB 8, passed in special session, was designed to provide flexibility to school districts to deal with shrinking budgets and personnel cuts. The bill allows districts to cut teacher pay in several ways, repeals the salary floor established in 2009, and changes the 45-day deadline to notify contract staff of nonrenewal to 10 days before the end of the school year. These changes were vigorously opposed by organizations representing teachers, who have been rocked by job cuts and expectations to do more with less.

SB 6, passed in special session, creates a new Instructional Materials Allotment that merges funds for textbooks, electronic textbooks, and technology into one fund. The Instructional Materials Allotment creates a new funding formula that requires the State Board of Education to set an annual distribution from the Permanent School Fund to the Available School Fund to the Instructional Materials Allotment. School districts will have greater flexibility over use of the dollars.

Successfully stopped were a number of proposals including: a provision in SB 8 that would have increased the 22-1 class-size cap in kindergarten through Grade 4; proposals that would have raised or eliminated the current 215 cap on the number of open-enrollment charter schools that may be granted by the State Board of Education; and several voucher schemes that would have drained tax dollars from public schools.

2013. After the dramatic cuts to education funding by the 82nd Legislature in 2011, the 83rd Legislature was under pressure to restore the money. The 2011 cuts had resulted in the elimination of 25,000 faculty and staff jobs, including 11,487 teaching positions. The $5.4 billion cut amounted to a loss of more than $500 per pupil. The 83rd Legislature responded with HB 10 (Pitts), a supplemental appropriations bill that funded various agencies through August 31, 2013, and included $317 million from general revenue and $313 in "recaptured" property tax revenue to the Foundation School Program. This bill passed both houses and went into effect March 10. It was supported by the LWVTX.

The final 2013-15 budget included $3.4 billion in education funding, but that was only 85% of what was cut in 2011, and still left the per-pupil funding more than $500 short of the level reached before the recession. It also did not restore the massive cuts to programs such as full-day prekindergarten and the Student Success Initiative, which offered help to students struggling to pass the state exams. Another supplemental budget bill, HB 1025 (Pitts), supported by the LWVTX, would have added $500 million more for education. It passed both houses, was included in the budget, but was subject to a line-item veto by Governor Perry.

In early 2013, the lawsuit by coalitions of Texas school districts against the state resulted in a ruling that the public school finance system was inadequate and inefficient. However the judge agreed to have a new trial after the legislative session, to take into account changes made by the 83rd Legislature. The new trial is scheduled for January 2014.

The cap on charter schools was reset from 215 to 305 (by 2019) in SB 2 (Patrick), opposed by the LWVTX. It passed both houses and was signed by the governor. This bill exempts dropout recovery charters from the cap. On the positive side, the bill gives the Texas Education Agency more authority to close poor performing charter schools.

Vouchers reappeared in the 83rd Legislature as "scholarships" for poor and at-risk students, with the funding to come from "donations" of part of an entity's state insurance premium tax or franchise tax. We opposed at least five Senate bills and two House bills, and all failed to pass their respective houses. The bills were by Senators Patrick, Paxton, Williams, and Campbell. The House bills were by Representatives Capriglione and Callegari.

2015. This was not the year to consider revamping public school finance. The push in the legislature was to lower taxes, especially property taxes, which mainly fund public schools at the local level. The House wanted to lower the sales tax instead, but the conference committee on the budget decided on the property tax reduction, as well as franchise tax reduction. However the state promises to reimburse districts for lost revenue. The reduction is formed by raising the exemption on the value of the property from $15,000 to $25,000. All this will require the passage of a constitutional amendment this fall.

The final budget did give $1.5 billion to public schools above the $2.3 billion needed for enrollment growth. This includes $41 million for math and reading academies, and $118 million for high-quality prekindergarten programs.

Meanwhile, for the second time in 2 years, State District Judge John Dietz ruled that the Texas school finance system is unconstitutional. His ruling states that Texas fails to provide its schools with sufficient funding and that it distributes its funds among districts unfairly. Even though the 83rd Legislature restored 65% of its 2011 cuts, it wasn't enough, and Texas now spends $600 less per student than it did in 2009 (adjusted for inflation). The state appealed his ruling to the Texas Supreme Court, which will not decide it until next year. House Public Education Chair Jimmie Don Aycock offered a bill, supported by the LWVTX, that would have addressed the problems (HB 1759), but it was pulled after 2nd reading so that a long debate would not kill other bills at the midnight deadline.

A few bills addressed vouchers, this time called Education Tuition Grants, which would have allowed businesses to donate part of their taxes to "educational assistance organizations." They would then award the money to students to attend private schools. Only one of these passed the Senate (SB 4), opposed by the LWVTX, but died in the House Ways and Means Committee.

2017. The Senate and House had very different legislative priorities when it came to public education. The most critical difference was evident in the way the two bodies approached the need to revise our public school finance system. Two of the most obvious differences included the Senate's determination to use public funds for private and religious school vouchers, which the House steadfastly opposed, and the Senate's efforts to invest sweeping powers in the education commissioner, which the House was only partially successful in curbing.

An equitable, fully funded school finance system is essential. Chairman Huberty and the House Committee for Public Education used a collaborative approach, listened to many experts on public education finance and needs, and crafted HB 21 (Huberty) that was a much-needed first step to address persistent flaws in the current system. It would have raised the basic allotment by $210 per student, provided additional assistance to certain groups of students, simplified and updated transportation funding and the high school allotment, reduced recapture, and created a hardship grant for certain districts. While this commendable effort passed the House, the Senate gutted the funding and tacked on an Education Savings Account voucher amendment before passing it. The House, led by Chairman Huberty, refused to accept the voucher amendment and called for a conference committee. Senators Patrick and Taylor refused to name Senate members to the conference committee and the bill died. It was revived, in part, during the special session, as described below.

Vouchers are unacceptable. Several other voucher bills were proposed. Given the LWVTX strong opposition to vouchers, we testified against two (three including the Senate version of HB 21), HB 1335 (Simmons) and SB 3 (L. Taylor) that had traction in committee. We registered against others. Fortunately, none made it through the House. We owe thanks to the strong stand that House Public Education Committee Chair Huberty, Vice Chair Bernal, and committee members took against vouchers with Speaker Straus's backing.

Accountability measures should be diagnostic and nonpunitive. Because we support a nonpunitive accountability system, we followed with concern several bills relating to the new A-F ratings schools and districts will be receiving. HB 22 (Huberty)—which in its original form would have delayed implementation of A-F, clarified the ratings methods, and mitigated some of the effects—passed the House, but did not pass the Senate intact. The bill, as ultimately passed by both houses, does delay implementation for schools (to 2019) but not for districts. It does clarify some elements, but it remains largely punitive and, under the Senate's changes, gives the commissioner of education broad authority to make rules and set implementation methods and standards. Those powers were augmented during the Special Session, as described below. Governor Abbott signed HB 22 that took effect September 1, 2017.

An example of other bills related to the A-F rating system is HB 2782 (T. M. Wilson), which would have prevented a bell curve approach to the ratings. It passed in the House and the Senate Committee on Education, but was not heard by the Senate. As it stands, the A-F accountability system oversimplifies the complexity of teaching and learning and has limited usefulness to serious efforts to improve our public schools.

Students should be well prepared for graduation and success in college and careers. Our positions on academic standards led us to follow several bills relating to teacher and instructional quality. HB 3759 (Beidermann) would have temporarily allowed districts to ignore a long list of instructional mandates relating to nearly every academic subject. These exemptions had the potential to adversely affect students' performance on examinations required to graduate, and we testified against them. Fortunately, HB 3759 did not make it out of committee.

SB 1278 (L. Taylor) would have allowed field supervisors of teachers-in-training to reduce on-site observations and would allow those same aspiring teachers to be certified even after twice failing the required content examinations, leaving a generation of students with underprepared and unqualified teachers. As we noted, if students who do not pass the end-of-course examinations do not graduate, then their teachers should have passed their content exams to certify their competency to teach their subjects. We testified in opposition and, although SB 1278 passed the Senate, it failed in the House Public Education Committee.

HB 1485 (Swanson) would have allowed science teachers to instruct students on their personal beliefs regarding the origins of life, evolution, and climate change under the guise of academic freedom. We argued that teachers are charged with preparing students for graduation under the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS) and for academic and career success, which require them to know and use the scientific method and understand evidence-based science. HB 1485 was left pending in committee.

SB 463 (Seliger) would extend Individual Graduation Committees (ICGs) through the 2018-19 school year. These committees meet when high school students are in danger of not graduating solely because they have not been able to pass one of the end-of-course exams. We urged support for this bill that would require that the students' teachers, administrators, and parents agree that the student should be allowed to graduate. We had hoped the bill would make Individual Graduation Committees permanent; however, we'll take SB 463 as a step toward that goal. The governor signed the bill June 9, 2017.

HB 1237 (West) creates a dual-credit type arrangement for students taking postsecondary approved technology courses in high school. We testified on this bill, lauding most of its provisions, but questioning elements allowing the commissioner to accept and use private funds to implement the program. The bill passed and took effect September 1, 2017.

HB 515 (VanDeaver) would have simply reduced the number of mandatory state tests–State of Texas Assessments of Academic Readiness (STAAR) and end-of-course–to those federally required by the Every Student Succeeds Act and the No Child Left Behind Act. The bill was widely supported by parents, teachers, and others. However, by the time the Senate approved it (without public comment on the many changes made), only the eighth grade social studies test was eliminated. Among many other changes the Senate made to the bill, the U.S. history test was replaced with a citizenship examination; it would end retesting for those students who fail the fifth and eighth grade reading and math STAAR examinations, instead requiring individual accelerated learning plans to support them in the following year; and it empowers the commissioner to create a high stakes writing portfolio assessment by 2021 to replace the current essay requirement. While we supported the original test reduction bill, we were studying the changes made when the bill died in committee.

Summary of the 85th Texas Legislative Special Session. Public education bills were again dominated by HB 21 (Huberty). However, much of its potential to begin to improve public school funding was diminished by Senate changes. Senate attempts at including funding for private and religious schools (vouchers) were again defeated in the House.

HB 21, as signed by the governor, transfers $351 million from the Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC) to the Texas Education Agency (TEA) for the 2018-19 biennium to implement certain provisions, including:

- Additional state funding for charter schools in the amount of $60 million per year as an entitlement beginning in 2019.
- Increasing the small district (less than 300 square miles) adjustment in increments through 2024 to bring that funding up to that of small districts of 300 or more square miles. This is expected to increase state costs for the Foundation School Program (FSP) by $41.3 million in 2019 to $124.9 million by 2022.
- Grants for innovative services to students of autism and dyslexia of up to $20 million each over the biennium.
- Creating a 2-year grant program providing transition aid for school districts experiencing financial hardship, including the loss of maintenance and operations (M&O) revenue, capped at $100 million in 2018 and $50 million in 2019.
- Transferring an additional $212 million from Health and Human Services Commission to the Teacher Retirement System of Texas (TRS) to reduce the expected increase of $3,000/year per participant to $1,500/year in premiums, deductibles and prescription drugs.
- Creating the Texas Commission on Public School Finance with the responsibility to develop and make recommendations for improving the current public school finance system.

SB 7 (Bettencourt) addressed inappropriate relations between school employees and students, increasing criminal penalties and sanctions and adding the possibility of pension revocation. SB 1709 (Menendez) makes cyber bullying of minors a crime. SB 1566 (Kolkhorst) empowers the commissioner of education to dictate policy to locally elected boards that are subject to interventions or sanctions due to accreditation status, unsatisfactory academic performance, or financial accountability. HB 2087 (Van Deaver) establishes rules governing the use of student data collection and protection and prohibits the sale of student data or use of student data for advertising purposes.

Issues not addressed. (a) Funding increases to teacher pay. (b) Funding for fast-growing districts that have reached their tax cap and cannot adequately accommodate their increasing student populations.

2019. The drive by state leaders to reduce or control local property taxes (currently funding 62% of public education), to increase teacher pay, to increase or decrease state testing, and several other issues caused serious differences in the House and Senate and sent the most impactful public education refinancing and restructuring bill, HB 3, in decades to a conference committee. The HB 3 conference committee added a few completely new provisions to the bill at the last possible minute, forcing lawmakers to acquiesce due to the overwhelming good the bill could do.

LWVTX Public Education Actions Summary Stats:

- Out of 7,324 bills filed, 923 related to public education (including open-enrollment charter schools).
- We registered positions For, Against or On 179 bills, not including those we registered on more than once
- We wrote and delivered testimony on 10 bills and wrote letters and emails to 18 Senators and Representatives.
- Of the 179 bills we took action on, 35 bills passed both houses. Of those, we opposed just two.
- All but one of the 35 bills passing both the House and the Senate have been signed into law by the Governor; he vetoed HB 455.

The bills that concerned us most were those on public education funding.

In its 308 pages, HB 3 restructures how we fund public education, including funding priorities. Some significant actions address:

All Students:

- Increases the basic allotment to $6,160 per student.
- Changes the weighting and designation of economically disadvantaged students to account for five tiers of census blocks, including data on: median household income, educational attainment, home ownership, single parent households.
- Establishes a grant for schools and charters implementing blended learning (using technology) programs.
- Repeals the G/T (gifted and talented) allotment, but requires districts to offer a G/T program.

Elementary Students:

- Funds and requires districts to offer full-day pre-K to economically disadvantaged, military dependents, homeless and limited English four-year olds
- Funds 30 half-days of extended (summer) learning for K-5 students.
- Creates reading standards and assessments for K-3.
- Requires the use of a phonics curriculum.
- Requires K-3 teachers and principals to attend literacy training.
- Allows the Commissioner to approve an alternative reading assessment for kindergarten students.

Secondary Students:

- Creates a student bonus for achieving certain standards on the SAT, ACT, TSIA or Armed Services exams.
- Requires graduating students to complete the FAFSA (a financial aid form).
- Reimburses college entrance exam costs.

Teachers and Staff:

- Requires districts to use 30% of the new revenue to increase salaries for full-time (non-administrative) employees, with 75% of that going to teachers, counselors, librarians and nurses.
- Increases the minimum salary schedule for teachers and full-time librarians and counselors.
- Creates: incentives for highly effective teachers at high-needs campuses, an optional designation of teachers as exemplary, master, or recognized, and a mentor-teacher program allotment.

Taxes:

- Reduces school property taxes from $1/$100 valuation to $0.93/$100.
- Imposes an automatic tax increase cap beginning in 2021 of 2.5% (from the previous 8%). This was justified by the increase in state funding. Opponents are concerned because: increased state funding is not guaranteed from year to year, this removes an important local control element, it restricts district flexibility in responding to student growth and cost increases.
- Reduces recapture (Robin Hood) through various means.

Students in Need:

- Increases the compensatory funding weights for various needy student groups (dyslexia, dual language, special ed, etc.).
- Requires that 55% of the increase be spent on supplemental services for at-risk, economically disadvantaged and bilingual/LEP students.

Assessment/Accountability:

- Eliminates the 4th and 7th grade writing tests.
- Requires school boards to develop plans and set performance goals for: early childhood literacy, math proficiencies, CCR (college, career and military readiness).
- Requires district efficiency audits.

The Commissioner:

Increases the Commissioner's responsibilities (some new, others formerly the SBOE's), including: administering the FSP (Foundation School Program), resolving school finance formula issues, certifying census blocks to determine funding levels, rulemaking and funding authority for Special Education, working with a higher ed institution to assess STAAR readability levels.

Other Funding:

- Increases the NIFA (New Instructional Facility Allotment).
- Creates allotments for: fast-growth districts, P-Tech and New-Tech programs, 7th grade CTE, small and mid-sized districts.

SB 2, the "no new revenue" bill, which we opposed, was signed June 12.

- This bill sets new, lower limits on property tax increases, affecting city and county governments, water and other special districts, to 3.5%. Opponents are concerned that this bill restricts local control and reduces local governments' ability to respond as needed to growing populations and increasing costs for safety and emergency services, transportation, libraries, etc.
- School districts' tax increases will be limited to 2.5%. School districts noted that, although the state has increased its funding for education this biennium, there is no guarantee that the state's funding will be sufficient nor that it will be renewed.
- The bill does address some tax transparency concerns.

HJR 3 (and its enabler HB 4621) proposed offsetting lower school district property taxes with increased sales & use taxes. We opposed this because sales taxes are regressive, hurting the least able to pay the most. Fortunately, HJR 3 (and others like it) died in the House.

HJR 151 - a Constitutional Amendment that will allow the School Land Board (SLB) to double the funding it contributes directly to the Available School Fund (ASF), bypassing the State Board of Education (SBOE). It passed in the November 2019 Constitutional Amendment election.

I. Public School Testing and Accountability

2008, 2020 (See also LWVUS Positions "Education" and "Federal Role in Education" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports state-mandated standardized achievement tests that are used with a state-mandated curriculum as a method to measure individual mastery and proficiency in a subject, and as a diagnostic tool to measure student growth in progress from one year to the next. In addition, the League supports state- mandated tests that are:

- Developed and reviewed by a broad spectrum of Texas educators who are acknowledged experts in their fields.
- Written with sensitivity to the diversity of the state's population.
- Not used as the sole determination for grade-level advancement or graduation from high school.
- Used to measure end-of-course proficiency for graduation from high school.
- Developed to measure higher-level thinking skills.
- Limited in frequency of test administration, which would also apply to benchmark tests, practice tests, and field tests.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports a state-mandated, standardized curriculum that is developed with broad input from Texas educators, the public, business groups, and elected and appointed officials. In addition, the League supports a state-mandated curriculum that:

- Reflects the diversity of the state's population.
- Covers subjects that are included on the standardized tests, as well as those that are not included, to ensure richness and variety.
- Provides the academic rigor necessary for success in postsecondary education and careers.
- Provides students with an education that prepares them to be responsible members in a participatory democracy.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports a state-mandated accountability system to ensure that districts are teaching the standardized curriculum. In addition, the League supports an accountability system that:

- Aligns with any federal accountability system to avoid conflicting results.
- Identifies academic achievement and gaps in performance among subgroups of students, based on standardized tests and other indicators (e.g., dropout, attendance, and high school completion rates).
- Is used as a diagnostic method to evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of schools and school districts, but not to establish school or school district ratings; not to sanction, reconstitute, or close schools; and not as a primary factor to appraise and terminate educators.
- Measures a school's growth in academic achievement from one year to the next, rather than as a single-year assessment.
- Places less emphasis on the standardized test and includes additional measurements, such as other types of tests, performance in coursework, and portfolios.
- Directs resources to improve performance but not to reward schools.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports equitable opportunity for academic achievement for all students. Specifically, the League supports:

- Universal but not mandatory prekindergarten programs.
- Universal but not mandatory full-day kindergarten programs.
- Early intervention for academically at-risk students.
- Research-based instruction for English learners and other targeted subgroups of students.
- Tutoring and/or remedial classes for students who fail a section or sections of the standardized test.

 Availability of extended school day, Saturday classes, summer school, extended school year, and night courses at various school levels.

The League of Women Voters of Texas endorses support for teachers in the mandated testing environment. Specifically, the League supports:

- Adequate planning time or class-release time for improving student performance.
- Professional development that is relevant and is supported by research demonstrating improvement in student achievement.
- Reduction in class size, especially for low-performing students, at all grade levels.
- Qualified teacher aides for low-performing campuses.
- Incentives to attract experienced and qualified teachers to low-performing campuses and to subject areas where shortages exist, but not to reward teachers or campuses for improvement in the performance of their students on the standardized test.
- Mentoring for new teachers, with compensation for mentors.

Explanation: Public School Testing and Accountability

This study was adopted as a not-recommended item at Convention 2006. Titled "Testing K-12 in the Public Schools of Texas," it was intended to educate members on the current uses and demands of the state mandated achievement testing system in Texas. The scope was expanded to include how the testing system and the accountability system are interrelated. A Facts and Issues: Mandated Achievement Testing in the Public Schools of Texas was published in the fall of 2007, and the board approved the new position in January 2008. The section concerning "standardized curriculum" was amended by Convention 2020 to include the statement concerning citizenship education.

History: Public School Testing and Accountability

2007. The legislature addressed testing and accountability issues in SB 1031. It replaced the state-mandated standardized test—the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills (TAKS)— with end-of-course testing as a requirement for graduation from high school. The change starts with students entering Grade 9 in the 2011-12 school year. The TAKS is still to be used in Grades 3 to 8. In addition to other changes that were designed to relieve the pressure from testing and provide better preparation for college, the bill created a Joint Select Committee on Public School Accountability. This committee was directed to consider changes in the test-driven accountability system before the 2009 Session, with implementation of any proposed changes scheduled for 2011-12.

2008. The League filed testimony in March and May with the State Board of Education (SBOE) concerning revisions to the state curriculum in English/Language Arts and Reading (ELAR) for kindergarten through 12th grade. The League urged support of a state standardized curriculum that is developed with broad input from Texas educators and that addresses the needs of the state's diverse student population. The League supported the draft curriculum from teacher writing teams, but the SBOE voted 9-6 to approve their own revisions to a late-hour version.

The State Board of Education began considering revisions to the K-12 science curriculum in the fall of 2008. The League filed testimony in November urging support for the draft from the teacher writing teams which embraced the scientific concept of evolution that is widely endorsed by scientists throughout the world and a standardized curriculum that provides the academic rigor students need to succeed in college and careers throughout the nation and the world.

In June the League filed testimony before the Joint Select Committee on Public School Accountability, one of many such hearings held throughout the state. The League called for a fairer and more just system, free of punitive ratings and sanctions, citing positions the League had adopted in the spring of 2008.

2009. The League filed testimony with the State Board of Education in January and March concerning proposed revisions to the K-12 science curriculum. Once again, the League supported drafts prepared by educator writing teams. The League opposed language that would weaken instruction in the scientific concept of evolution and the ability of Texas students to compete in a global market. A March 2009 Action Alert urged members to support these positions in individual contacts with the State Board of Education. While the State Board of Education did not adopt "strengths and weaknesses" language concerning the study of evolution, the board approved amendments to require high school students in biology to "analyze and evaluate the sufficiency and insufficiency of common ancestry;" and in earth and space science, to "assess the arguments for and against universal common descent." As the State Board of Education takes up revisions to the social studies curriculum in the fall of 2009, the League is continuing advocacy supported by previously invoked positions.

The 81st Legislature enacted broad changes to the state accountability system in HB 3. Some of the modifications are consistent with League positions: allowing the use of growth models, rather than a single-year assessment, to measure a school's achievement; improving preparation for college and careers; reducing the focus on student achievement as the prime criterion for promotion in grade 3; providing some relief on the definition of dropouts, which affects ratings; and giving the commissioner of education the option to grant improving schools to be rated as Unacceptable an additional fifth year before they are closed or put under alternative management. However, the League believes that HB 3 did not do enough to relieve punitive sanctions, ratings, personnel changes, and closures, which disproportionately affect urban schools with high populations of low- income students and English learners. The League prefers an accountability system that is used for diagnostic, rather than punitive purposes. Another concern is that the test-driven accountability system has become even more complex and reliant on achievement ratings since HB 3 added 10 new indicators on college readiness.

2011. Education issues associated with testing, accountability, and achievement took a back seat to school finance this session. Many changes concerning these issues resulted from HB 3 last session, with some scheduled to be phased in through 2013. The consensus this session seemed to be that the new system should be allowed to become fully operational before other changes should be made.

HB 2135 is one change that will cut back on assessments for students in Grades 3 and 5 who meet certain requirements. Another change, which was requested by some legislators in the 2011 Session, involves the way accountability ratings are determined by the Texas Education Agency.

Based on a 2006 legislative directive, the agency had developed and adopted in 2009 the Texas Projection Measure (TPM). It estimates whether a student who failed the standardized test during the current school year is likely to pass the test in the next grade level. If so, the student is counted as passing for purposes of the current year's accountability rating.

This session, legislators argued that the Texas Projection Measure artificially increased ratings and gave the public a misleading message about the performance of their school and district. In response, the commissioner of education reverted to the actual passing rates for calculation of the 2010-11 accountability ratings. This system will remain in effect while the state transitions from the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills (TAKS) to new, more rigorous assessments: the State of Texas Assessments of Academic Readiness (STAAR) and end-of-course tests in high school. 2013. HB 5 (Aycock), supported by the League, was the major piece of legislation to deal with testing at the high school level. Both the House and the Senate passed it unanimously. It reduces the end-of-course tests from 15 to five, including English I and II (reading and writing combined), Algebra I, Biology and U.S. History. English III and Algebra II may be used by districts for diagnostic purposes but will not be required for graduation. The new testing regimen will begin in 2013. Schools will also be prohibited from administering more than two benchmark tests per student per subject. We supported this bill based on our position that tests should be limited in frequency of test administration, including benchmark tests, practice tests and field tests.

2017. HB 515 (Van Deaver) would have simply reduced the number of mandatory state tests–State of Texas Assessments of Academic Readiness (STAAR) and end-of-course–to those federally required by the Every Student Succeeds Act and the No Child Left Behind Act. The bill was widely supported by parents, teachers, and others. However, by the time the Senate approved it (without public comment on the many changes made), only the eighth grade social studies test was eliminated. Among many other changes the Senate made to the bill, the U.S. history test was replaced with a citizenship examination; it would end retesting for those students who fail the fifth and eighth grade reading and math STAAR examinations, instead requiring individual accelerated learning plans to support them in the following year; and it empowers the commissioner to create a high stakes writing portfolio assessment by 2021 to replace the current essay requirement. While we supported the original test reduction bill, we were studying the changes made when the bill died in committee.

J. Redistricting

1984, 1999, 2017 (See also LWVUS Position "Redistricting" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports action to achieve an effective method for drawing nonpartisan boundaries for congressional and state legislative districts through legislative action and constitutional revision.

The League supports the formation of an autonomous, independent citizens redistricting commission following the decennial census with the initial responsibility of formulating a redistricting plan, designating boundaries for the U.S. congressional districts and the state House and Senate districts, with the following provisions:

- Criteria for drawing district boundaries include the following:
 - Districts must be apportioned on the basis of equal population.
 - Districts must be single-member and contiguous.
 - Consideration must be given to ensuring that the districts be compact, that district lines coincide with boundaries of local political subdivisions, and that districts not be drawn to dilute the voting strength of minority populations or drawn with the intent to favor or disfavor a political party or incumbent.
 - Efforts should be made to avoid splitting residential subdivisions and large residential complexes into more than one district.
 - Districts must not be apportioned on the basis of numbers of electors, but on total population (a qualified elector is any person eligible to vote in a state election in Texas; federal apportionment law is based on total population).
- The redistricting process must include:
 - Specific timelines for the steps leading to adoption of the redistricting plan.
 - Public hearings on the plan proposed for adoption.

Explanation: Redistricting

In 1983 the League adopted a "Study of the Congressional and Legislative Redistricting Process in Texas," including assessment of current criteria and evaluation of possible alternatives. The study grew out of a concern for the way redistricting had been accomplished during the 1970s and 1980s when legislative redistricting problems had resulted in prolonged wrangling over district lines. League members asked for the study in order to have a position from which to work before the 1990 census and the next round of redistricting. The position was adopted in the fall of 1984.

League members strongly support the initial use of a commission. But members also provided for an alternative method in the event that the legislature is not willing to use a commission. If a commission is not initially responsible, the legislature should conduct the work of redistricting during a special session of the legislature called for the sole purpose of redistricting. The special session should operate within a short, strict time frame.

During 1997-98 Periodic Program Review, the committee clarified the League position opposing consideration of "communities of interest" as criteria for drawing district boundaries. Communities of interest can include common occupations, industries, and ethnic or religious cultures. Most redistricting authorities agree that this criterion is so broad that it invites problems. Communities of interest are difficult to define and often extend beyond political subdivisions and geographical boundaries. Racial and language minorities can constitute a community of interest that is already protected under the Voting Rights Act. At Convention 2013 delegates voted to remove the term communities of interest from the position. At the LWVTX Statewide Conference 2017 delegates passed an updated position that emphasizes an independent citizens commission to draw district boundaries.

The Redistricting position was amended by delegates to Convention 2020 to add the statement concerning the splitting of residential areas, and to emphasize the concern with nonpartisanship in drawing boundaries.

History: Redistricting

Action on this study has focused on trying to get legislators interested in reforming the redistricting system during a session in which redistricting is not being done. Efforts thus far have been futile. Reform measures have been introduced in each regular session since 1985 but have not been reported out of committee.

1990s. The League testified at redistricting hearings about the criteria we consider essential to a good redistricting plan. The LWVTX monitored redistricting legislation in the 1991 Legislative Session that redrew boundaries based on the new census. Forty-three bills on redistricting were introduced in the 73rd Legislature (1993). The League testified in favor of a measure that would have established a commission with initial authority over redistricting. Although none of the bills passed, the number introduced and the interest generated gave hope for progress in the future.

2001. None of the redistricting bills passed in the 77th Session. The redistricting process remained unchanged. The Legislative Redistricting Board drew up the Senate and House districts, and congressional redistricting was assigned to the courts when the governor did not call a special session. A large number of court suits resulted from redistricting plans after the 1990 census. Districts were not completely finalized until 1997. At this time it is not known whether or not the new plans drawn following the 2000 census will be in place in time for the 2002 election.

The League's major redistricting efforts in the 77th Session were directed toward changing the redistricting process. After bills to establish a citizen's commission to draw the initial redistricting plan failed, the League lobbied in favor of SJR 35 (Wentworth et al) to establish a special session devoted exclusively to redistricting. The "League bill" passed the Senate Redistricting Committee unanimously, passed the full senate with 29 coauthors, but was not successful in the House. Grassroots support provided by local Leagues and League members was a factor in getting the issue of redistricting process reform before the legislators and raising the interest in, and profile of, this important issue.

The League worked to educate members of the legislature on the use of the most accurate census figures available and endorsed the use of statistical sampling as a proven scientific technique that, when properly used, can improve the accuracy and lower the costs of ascertaining the population count. However the legislature chose not to use this method.

2003. The League-supported bill establishing a commission with initial authority over redistricting did not receive a committee hearing in the regular session. The League opposed, on the grounds that a valid plan was in place, a House bill that would have redrawn the congressional districts. Over 50 representatives left the state to deny a House quorum and the bill died.

The governor called a special session for the purpose of redrawing congressional districts. Again, the League opposed redrawing the districts and called for a change in the process to establish a commission with initial authority over redistricting. The LWVTX testified at House hearings in Houston, Lubbock, and Dallas, and at Senate hearings in Houston and Dallas. Local Leagues testified in San Antonio and Waco.

A 2^{nd} special session was called in July with 11 of the 12 Democratic senators leaving the state just before the session was convened. The new redistricting plan was adopted in the second session and withstood court challenges. The new plan was in effect for the March primary and for the General Election in the fall of 2004.

2005. Senator Wentworth again introduced a bill, SB 1404 that would establish a commission with initial authority over redistricting, but this time addressing only congressional districts. While supporting a commission with authority over legislative as well as congressional districts, the League chose to support this bill with testimony, Action Alerts, and other advocacy. The bill passed the Senate 30 to 1, but died in the House without a committee hearing.

2006. What follows is from a LWVUS press release: League Takes Aim at Partisan Redistricting

As a part of its Democracy Agenda, the League of Women Voters has called on the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn the partisan gerrymander imposed on the citizens of Texas in 2003. In an amicus curiae, or "friend of the court" brief, the League of Women Voters of the United States and the League of Women Voters of Texas argue that the Texas legislature's mid census redistricting was unconstitutional because it was carried out solely to achieve partisan advantage. The law firm of Wilmer, Cutler, Pickering, Hale and Dorr LLP prepared the brief on behalf of the League. The Court will hear arguments in the case, LULAC v. Perry, on March 1, 2006.

"Partisan gerrymandering undermines the basic principles of representative government," according to Kay J. Maxwell, president of the national League. "The Texas League fought this plan when it was presented, and we are proud to join with them in asking the Court to overturn it. Partisan gerrymandering subverts the democratic system because it allows politicians to choose their voters, rather than vice versa. This turns representative government upside-down," Maxwell said.

The Texas mid census redistricting case involves the threshold decision of whether to redistrict at all and not just a decision about how to draw the lines in a redistricting plan. While acknowledging that redistricting policy necessarily has an effect on election outcomes, the League in its brief urges the Court to decide that "there is a stark difference in kind between, on the one hand, relying on neutral considerations that incidentally affect partisan outcomes and, on the other, adopting exclusively partisan criteria for which specific partisan outcomes are the goal." By filing this brief the League of Women Voters continues its long history of fighting against attacks on the basic constitutional right to fair and equal representation guaranteed to all citizens by the Constitution. Leagues have worked vigorously across the country to secure representative redistricting plans in their states after each census and are seeking reforms to assure that the redistricting process is nonpartisan, equitable and open. These are core rights for citizens of a free and democratic nation.

The League's Democracy Agenda is an advocacy and public education program to strengthen and renew the basic tenets of American democracy. This effort seeks to protect our electoral processes through election reform and campaign finance reform, to advance our representative government through nonpartisan redistricting, and preserve our constitutional rights by safeguarding civil liberty.

The Court did not decide in favor of the League position, which was to overturn the plan. It did, however, decide that the plan had a deleterious effect on Hispanic minority districts, and these had to be redrawn. The new districts were in place for the November election.

2007. At the beginning of the session Senator Wentworth, a longtime champion of fair redistricting and author of numerous bills supporting the formation of a redistricting committee, spoke. For over three decades the LWVTX has worked in support of an independent redistricting commission to formulate a redistricting plan to draw boundaries for congressional and Texas House and Senate districts. A major hurdle in getting redistricting legislation passed in the 80th Session was to get the House Committee on Redistricting to schedule hearings on the redistricting bills and pass them out of committee. Action Alerts were sent to League members to urge early hearings and voting on the bills. The League did receive one of the rare invitations to present testimony to the House Committee on Redistricting. The League expects to continue to support efforts to change the redistricting process. The issue needs to be addressed at a time when redistricting is not being done.

2009. The LWVTX board voted to authorize a Redistricting Advocacy Campaign in advance of the Legislative Session, mobilizing local Leagues to work for grassroots support of Senator Wentworth's bill. However the bill did not reach the floor for a vote.

2011. The Texas Legislature passed redistricting bills for the U.S. Congress, Texas Senate, Texas House, and the State Board of Education. While these bills have become Texas law, federal law still requires that either the Department of Justice or the D.C. Federal Court preclear them. The State Board of Education map was pre-cleared but the other maps are now before the Federal Courts. Temporary maps were put in place for 2012 while the courts hear the cases before making a final determination. These maps were drawn to maximize the number of seats held by the majority party while skirting the Voting Rights Act. Competitiveness has been significantly reduced in these maps, but of course there is no legal requirement for districts to be competitive. The opportunity for minorities to elect the candidate of their choice even in previously majority- minority districts has been reduced. Bills, including one by Senator Wentworth to improve the way redistricting is done were once again considered but not passed.

2013. As the League's 2012-14 biennium began, the federal court in San Antonio hearing challenges to redistricting plans passed by the 2011 Texas Legislature had drawn interim maps so 2012 elections could proceed and was awaiting the D.C. court decision on whether to preclear the legislature's maps. In late August 2012, the D.C. court declined to preclear the maps. The State of Texas appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court was put on hold until the Court decided the Shelby County, Alabama, challenge to the preclearance requirement.

During the regular 2013 Legislative Session, a handful of redistricting bills were filed. Bills filed in both chambers, HB 145 (Strama) and SB 104 (West), would have established a redistricting commission, which the LWVTX has long supported, but were never heard in committee. Senate State Affairs Committee hearings on SB 1524 (Seliger) to adopt as permanent the interim maps drawn by the San Antonio court for 2012 elections revealed strong Democratic opposition, and the bill was left pending in committee. The regular session ended without significant action on redistricting.

Immediately on adjournment of the regular session, Governor Perry called a special session to adopt the court-drawn interim maps as permanent. The Senate's traditional rule requiring two-thirds support for bills to be brought to the floor was not followed during this and subsequent special sessions, which meant bipartisan support was not needed for bills to reach the floor. Both chambers established select redistricting committees to consider adoption of the court's interim maps for both state Senate and House as well as congressional districts.

House and Senate select committees held hearing on the bills in Austin and several field locations. The LWVTX testified in Austin, and local Leagues testified at hearings in Corpus Christi, Dallas, Houston, and San Antonio, emphasizing the importance of redistricting that is responsive to constituent concerns, reflects diversity, and grants all voters the opportunity for meaningful participation in their democracy.

Both chambers passed bills adopting as permanent the interim maps for congressional and Texas Senate districts as drawn by the court and the interim map for Texas House districts with minor changes to the court-drawn maps (SB 2 (Seliger), SB 4 (Seliger), and SB 3 (Seliger), respectively). Before Governor Perry acted on this legislation, the U.S. Supreme Court announced the Shelby County decision striking down criteria for determining jurisdictions subject to preclearance. With the U.S. Supreme Court decision, Texas could have gone back to the Legislature's 2011 maps, but instead Governor Perry signed the three bills passed by the 2013 1st Special Session, permanently adopting the 2012 interim maps drawn by the San Antonio court with minor modifications to the state House map.

Adopting the court-drawn map for state Senate districts resolved the legal challenges to redistricting for that chamber in the San Antonio court. However, challenges under the Constitution and Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act to the state House and congressional maps continue in San Antonio, and the U.S. Department of Justice has joined the proceedings. Plaintiffs have asked that Texas be bailed-in to preclearance under Section 3. Parties are preparing for a trial scheduled for summer 2014 on issues regarding the 2011 maps drawn by the legislature, the court-drawn interim maps for 2012 now adopted by the State of Texas, and the tweaks to the court-drawn House map made by the 2013 special session. A new challenge to state Senate redistricting was filed April 21, 2014, in Austin arguing that districts should be drawn based on eligible voters, not on overall population, and a three-judge panel has been appointed to hear that case.

2017. The House Committee on Redistricting never met during the 85th Legislative Session.

2019. For the first time in 6 years, the House Redistricting Committee met and held organizational hearings on 2/28 and 3/7. The purpose of these hearings was to hear invited testimony from experts in the field, to prepare the committee members for the next round of redistricting. The committee held a hearing on bills on April 4. The Fair Maps Texas Coalition, of which we are a part, worked very hard to get new legislation filed this session. Bills that we helped draft:

HB 3421- A bill to create an independent redistricting commission for our US Congressional districts. (M. Gonzalez). HJR 123- A constitutional amendment that would create an independent redistricting commission for both our state legislative and our US Congressional districts. (Naeve). HJR 124- Redistricting Transparency Act. A constitutional amendment that would require the state to hold public hearings around the state AFTER the census data is handed down. It would also require the state to provide online software and data for the public to use to create and submit their own redistricting plans. (Gonzalez). HB 2429- The Texas Voting Rights Act. A bill that expands on the existing Voting Rights Act by making it easier for a protected class of citizens to challenge "at-large" election systems in the courts. (Reynolds).

Other bills that we support:

SJR 52- A constitutional amendment that would create an independent redistricting commission for both our state legislative and our US Congressional districts. (Menendez).

HB 4564- A bill that would modify the criteria used by the Legislature to draw districts. Includes respecting political subdivisions and prohibiting the use of partisan data when drawing new plans. (Y. Davis).

Three of these bills were given a hearing in the House Redistricting Committee. We testified but all were left pending with no vote by the committee. (HB 3421, 4564, and HJR 123). The rest received no committee hearing. However beginning in April, the League of Women Voters of Texas along with partnering organizations, communicated with the House Redistricting Committee regarding the location and organization of public input hearings, to be held before the next round of redistricting in 2021. The League was actively involved with these hearings, holding training sessions for citizens in the cities planned for hearings.

K. State-Local Relations

1963, 1965, 1971, 1999

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports more flexible structures and adequate powers at the local level; comprehensive regional state planning, including regional planning councils with the following provisions:

- State financial and technical assistance to regional councils.
- Flexible government structures for counties and municipalities, together with legislative and financial powers adequate to provide local services.
- Authorization for cities and counties to combine efforts on regional problems enabling performance of services without overlapping costs and taxation, in preference to single- purpose districts (i.e., transportation districts, municipal utility districts, etc.).
- Regulation of single-purpose districts by the state with provisions for greater accountability.

Explanation: State-Local Relations

The study of state-local relations, which was begun in 1962, was a logical continuation of the League's study of the Texas Constitution. League members had found many governmental problems that did not conform to an established political jurisdiction. This study included research into constitutional and statutory provisions governing general law cities, home rule cities, and other forms of city government. The League learned in detail about county governments; special districts; how the state administered its services in public education, public health, and water resources; and sources of revenue.

In 1964, comprehensive and regional planning was studied in depth, and the League became interested in councils of government and regional planning councils. In 1971, a reevaluation of councils of government was made with one League from each area doing an evaluation of its own council. The result being that the League continued to support councils of government.

History: State-Local Relations

During the 1974 Constitutional Convention, the League worked for constitutional revisions that would allow more flexible structures for county and municipal governments.

The League continues to support expanding the authority of county government to carry out urban activities and giving it the option to assume a larger role in meeting countywide needs and problems. Legislation granting counties some form of ordinance-making power has been introduced in several sessions, and the League has supported efforts that meet our positions. At Convention 1985 delegates asked for an explanation of the part of this position dealing with single-purpose districts. Though the recommendation resulted from an interest in municipal utility districts, preliminary research showed that there has been a proliferation of both single and multipurpose districts since the position was adopted.

The Periodic Program Review Committee recommended to Convention 1989 delegates that the State/Local Relations position be dropped. Delegates voted to retain the position. Some local Leagues have used the position extensively in lobbying for combining certain city and county governmental functions and against overlapping services.

In 1999, the Periodic Program Review Committee recommended retention of this position, and added an explanation of "single-purpose districts."

2009. The primary focus of the 81st Session related to county authority, often referred to as ordinance authority or land-use management. The LWVTX concurred with county officials and with many property owners that common-sense regulation is overdue. Because Texas counties have no authority to manage growth and development in unincorporated areas, scarce water supplies are endangered and homeowners sometimes discover that a rock crushing plant is planned just over the property line. The League supported bills which called for one or more of the following: buffer zones between designated areas for residential, commercial, industrial, and agricultural use; density limits which take into account the available natural resources and local infrastructure; and impact fees to be paid by developers to offset the increased cost of building additional infrastructure and providing services. At the beginning of the session, the LWVTX published an advocacy paper setting forth and explaining its support for these measures.

In the Hill Country, officials of 15 county governments (Bandera, Blanco, Burnett, Comal, Edwards, Gillespie, Hays, Kendall, Kerr, Kimble, Llano, Mason, Medina, Real, and Uvalde) began working with other interested local groups (including the LWVTX) and Representative Patrick Rose far in advance of the session to gain consensus regarding the need for more authority in these fast-growing, but ecologically fragile areas. HB 3265 provided for a local option vote before authorizing county authority regulations, including setting density limits, establishing set-back lines, and assessing impact fees. A large contingent of county officials from many of these counties came to the Capitol to sign in and/or testify when the bill was presented to the County Affairs Committee, as did the LWVTX and other interested groups and individuals. Representative Rose's bill was approved by the committee, other Hill Country legislators signed on; it was sent to Calendars Committee, where it died.

The Land and Resource Management Committee heard Representative Valinda Bolton's bill, HB 4175, which would have allowed counties with population between 800,000 and 1.3 million to adopt comprehensive land development plans including buffer zones. The bill had broad support from Travis County officials, the LWVTX, and even the local builders association. Because it would apply to unincorporated areas of the most populous counties, it also had the support of several other legislators representing those areas. After stalling for some time in committee, it was sent to Calendars Committee, where it died.

In the Senate, Senator Jeff Wentworth submitted several bills, but didn't present them to committee. Although most activity on this issue addressed regulating growth in the Hill Country and Travis County, some legislation included other areas and issues as well. The only bill that was passed and signed this session was HB 2275 (Raymond) which tweaked the existing regulations in the international border areas.

A bill to regulate billboards along SH 71 by Representative Bolton made it to the governor's desk, but was vetoed there. Several other bills by other legislators that would have expanded county government authority, especially in Central Texas, died in committee. Bills that would have regulated noise in unincorporated county areas, bills relating to county authority in specific geographic areas, and bills which related to county authority near military facilities all died in committee.

The ingrained attitude in Texas toward property rights continues to be defined by developers. The realities of water shortages, a county's need to plan for growth, and the rights of the individual homeowner to be protected from incompatible developments continue to be subordinate to business interests and growth. It is difficult to see that changing in the near future.

2011. County land use authority saw no bills voted out of committee. After last session, when a bill made it to the Calendars Committee, the two representatives who most actively supported giving counties the rights to regulate growth in unincorporated areas were defeated. Also failing to garner support were bills regulating new signs and noise in unincorporated areas. (See IV-B. Land Use.)

2017. See Section IV-B. Land Use.

2019. Our major activity this session began with our opposition to SB 15 (Creighton). This bill would prohibit cities and counties from requiring certain benefits and protections for employees. This relates to any form of employment leave (such as paid sick leave), hiring practices, employment benefits or other terms of employment. This bill would also gut non-discrimination ordinances that now protect more than six million Texans in most major Texas cities. Currently Austin, Dallas, El Paso, Ft. Worth, Plano, and San Antonio have municipal non-discrimination ordinances, and several other cities and counties have such policies for city workers and contractors. We issued an Action Alert (245 responses) and testified against the bill and the bill died in the Senate.

Then the author resubmitted it as four bills, SB 2485, 2486, 2487, and 2488, hoping parts of the bill would pass. Again we issued an Action Alert, "Fight Anti-Local Control Bills," and got 491 responses. All four bills passed the Senate but died in House Calendars. (This issue was covered by Equal Opportunity Issue Chair in this session.)

II. Administration of Justice

1960s, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980,1987, 2003, 2010, 2019 (See also LWVUS Position "Sentencing Policy" in Impact On Issues)

A. Criminal Justice

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports an equitable system of criminal justice in Texas with the following provisions: Improvements in pretrial justice programs and an adequately state funded public defender system including:

- Availability of night and weekend magistrates.
- Improvements in the training and requirements of law enforcement personnel.
- Revision of the bail bond system to permit counties to serve as bonding agencies and to provide regulation of all commercial bail bond agencies and guidelines for more uniform bail amounts.
- Reform of the bail bond system to require state funded-risk assessment for defendants who are arrested for economic non-violent crimes, and who are unable to pay bail cost, so that they can be released on their own recognizance, subject to monitoring while awaiting pretrial.
- Reinforcement of the requirements for open hearings and the presence of a public defender at the time of a pretrial hearing.
- Elimination of jury sentencing, and revision of the penal code to reduce the disparity of sentences.
- State laws to prohibit wiretapping.
- A state correctional system which would assign highest priority to provision of a broad range of community-based programs and facilities as well as provide technical assistance and funding for locally administered programs.
- Improvements in the parole system.
- A prison system which would provide humane care for all inmates in a secure environment with maximum educational opportunities, adequate health care services, adequate programs to assist all inmates in making the transition from prison to the free world, and compensation to inmates for their labor.

Explanation: Criminal Justice

League concern with aspects of the justice system in Texas began in 1923 when the League joined other organizations to tackle conditions in the primitive prison system. Results of the committee's work have been lost in the mists of time. During the 1940s and 1950s the League studied and lobbied for the establishment of a family court system for Texas, which was established in 1959. In the early 1960s, several positions supporting an effective judicial structure were included in the League's Texas Constitutional Revision position. These can now be found in the Government section of Program Perspectives.

The Convention 1975 adopted a study of both the adult and juvenile justice systems. Divided into five parts, the study took 5 years. Each of these studies resulted in numerous positions from which action at both the state and local levels occurred. Many of our goals have been achieved.

In 1986 Administration of Justice positions underwent periodic program review. Proposals to drop positions that had been achieved and to consolidate others were approved by Convention 1987.

Under the position "Improvements in Pretrial Justice Programs" local Leagues can continue to support a wide variety of specific programs such as pretrial release and pretrial diversion. The bail bond position allows counties to serve as bonding agencies, to regulate commercial bonding agencies, and to establish guidelines for more uniform bail amounts.

Holding county jails to standards set by the State Commission on Jail Standards in the face of potential opposition by county officials or voters is still permissible even though specific support for the state commission has been removed from our position because the commission has been in existence long enough and with adequate funding to operate successfully.

The LWVTX can also take state and local action on further law enforcement personnel training should the need arise in a specific area (see the Domestic Violence position). Convention delegates also agreed to consolidation of the language relating to community corrections programs and probation. The final settlement of the lawsuit against the Texas Department of Corrections (Ruiz vs. Estelle) will continue to have an impact on the criminal justice system in Texas for many years to come. We maintain our position in opposition to wiretapping that is still allowed in Texas. The next legislative review will be in 2005.

At the LWVTX 2018 statewide convention a review of the current bail bond system with respect to fairness of practices and the defendant's ability to pay and risk to public safety was passed. The Criminal Justice position was reviewed by the Program Review Committee, and updated by concurrence at a 2019 statewide conference. Two bullets were added under "Improvements in Pretrial Justice Programs."

History: Criminal Justice

1991-93. The 1991 Legislature prepared for a massive revision of the Texas Penal Code by establishing a Punishment Standards Commission. The commission report was issued just before the 1993 Legislature convened. League testimony before the commission related to our position on reducing disparity of sentences. The commission's recommendations addressed this concern by reducing somewhat the range of punishments for first-, second-, and third degree felonies, but the legislature chose to retain the existing ranges.

One recommendation of the commission—the creation of a fourth-degree felony for certain non-violent offenses including possession of small amounts of drugs—was adopted by the legislature. These felonies, now called "state jail" felonies, are to be served in new incarceration facilities called state jails. This new felony category is in accord with the League position advocating less disparity in sentences. A two-year limit was placed on incarceration in a state jail, with the remainder of the sentence, if any, to be served under community supervision. Although recommended for deletion by the Punishment Standards Commission, the section of the Penal Code making homosexual conduct a Class C misdemeanor was retained in the new code.

Because the state had spent nearly $2 billion of bond funds approved by voters since 1987, primarily for more prisons, the November 1993 ballot asked voters for another $1 billion, mostly to construct state jails and transfer facilities for relief of the backlog of state prisoners still awaiting transfer in county jails. Small amounts of these bonds are allocated for state juvenile and mental health/mental retardation facilities. The ballot issue passed. Appropriations for community-based corrections increased dramatically between 1989 and 1993 but only modestly for 1994-95. The 1993 Legislature made permanent the treatment of batterers on probation and substantially increased funding for these treatment programs.

1995. The legislature lengthened the time that nonviolent state jail felons can be incarcerated.

2001. The governor signed the Fair Defense Act. The act, a result of the findings of two studies released during the past year, including one by the Appleseed Project, established the Texas Indigent Defense Council and authorized the development of standards governing the provision of services at trial, on appeal, and in the post-conviction process. The bill also set deadlines for appointment of counsel following arrest. This balanced set of reforms should help bring order and change to the Texas system that has more than 800 different indigent defense systems in more than 800 different criminal courts in its 254 counties. The League presented testimony in support and worked as a member of a fair justice coalition in support of this bill.

2003. The Texas Indigent Defense Reform Act (2001) managed to survive the session intact. Serious threats to roll back the progress made in 2001 did not materialize, and there was a significant boost in state funding or indigent defense. One such effort to repeal certain reforms would have delayed the appointment of counsel. This was turned aside. Another challenge, a bill that would have restored to judges the power to conscript attorneys, was also defeated. One disappointment was the failure of a bill directed at improving the competence of attorneys to represent death penalty defendants in habeas corpus proceedings.

2011. There are numerous programs in the Criminal Justice system that provide cost-effective mental health and substance abuse treatment services that avoid the significantly higher costs of incarceration and recidivism. While there were some gains in specific programs, there were also cuts in Basic Supervision, Prison Diversion Programs, Community Corrections, Treatment Alternatives to Incarceration, and Special Needs Offenders.

2019. Advocacy by LWVTX during the 86th Legislature was to support bills relating to bail bond reform, which was supported by some legislators and the governor. There was also extensive media attention and support on this issue. The only bill that gained traction was HB 2020 (Kacal et al). The bill had provisions for a Bail Advisory Committee to make recommendations to the Texas Judicial Council regarding a validated pretrial risk assessment tool which would consider the nature of the offense and ability to pay a bond. The bill passed the House, but missed the deadline for a vote by the Senate as the session ended.

Other bills relating to bail bond reform that failed were HB 465 (White) and companion bills HB 1323 (Murr) and SB 628 (Whitmire). Both HB 465 and HB 1323 were voted favorably out of committee, but did not come up for a vote by the House. LWVTX provided testimony for HB 465.

2021. During the 87th legislative session, LWVTX supported bills for police reform, prison reform, and community supervision reform.

Police reform received nationwide media attention after the death of George Floyd in 2020. HB 54, (Javier Ambler Act), prohibits police departments from contracting with reality TV shows. HB 929, (Botham Jean Act), requires police officers to keep body cameras activated the entire time in an investigation. HB 3712 and SB 69 prohibit the use of chokeholds by law enforcement. HB 3712 also requires officers to intervene if a fellow officer's use of force is endangering a life, and it requires them to administer first aid when needed. SB 24 requires police departments to review files of people before they hire them to keep officers with a history of misconduct from being passed to other departments. All bills passed and take effect 9/1/21, although HB 54 takes effect immediately.

Prison reform: We supported changes to enhance the rehabilitation of prisoners, their humane treatment, and the fairness of the prison system to reflect current research. HB 30 requires that all TDCJ inmates less than 18 years of age (22 if special education) be given a chance to complete their high school education. HB 3606 allows vocational training to be provided to inmates housed in Transfer Units where they may remain for up to two years before being sent to other units. These bills take effect 9/1/21.

However, HB 686, which would require the parole board to take a "second look" at inmates who committed crimes when they were younger than age 17, was vetoed by the governor. It would have required them to consider the young age of the person, the results of a comprehensive mental health evaluation, and statements from people who knew the person before the crime as well as from people who would attest to the growth and maturity of the person. The governor stated this bill would conflict with jury instructions.

Community supervision: Four times as many people are on community supervision as the number of people in prison, highlighting the need for improvements. HB 385 allows courts to waive, partially waive, or substitute community service for supervision fees if a person lacks the resources to pay them. HB 569 seeks to remove financial barriers to re-entry for people who are released from jail or prison. It allows credit toward fines people owe if they are in jail/prison after the commission of the offense. These bills passed and take effect 9/1/21.

B. Capital Punishment Reform

2003, 2010, 2013 (See also LWVUS Position "Death Penalty" in Impact On Issues)

For as long as the death penalty is an applicable punishment in Texas, the League of Women Voters of Texas supports reform of the capital punishment system in Texas with the following measures:

- Establish a moratorium on all executions in Texas while an official study of the capital punishment system is conducted.
- Prohibit the execution of persons with intellectual/developmental disability, the mentally ill, and juveniles under the age of 18 at the time the crime was committed, establishing clear, uniform and clinical standards consistent with accepted professional practice to determine intellectual/developmental disability and mental illness.
- Observe the provisions of the Vienna Convention of 1848 by providing foreign nationals access to consular officials from their native country.
- Provide the options of life imprisonment and life without parole to juries in capital cases.
- Require the Board of Pardons and Paroles to adopt guidelines and substantive criteria upon which to base its clemency recommendations, to hold open meetings and to give explanations for its decisions.

Explanation: Capital Punishment

The issue of capital punishment has been in the foreground of debate in Texas for many years. The availability of DNA testing, the rising number of inmates found innocent and released from other states' death rows, as well as an increasing number of Texas executions, have made many in Texas question the death penalty and its effectiveness.

A study of Capital Punishment Reform was adopted at Convention 2001. The study compared (a) Outcomes for defendants with court-appointed lawyers to those who hire their own attorneys, (b) costs of execution to the costs of life imprisonment, (c) the potential of wrongful executions and the impact of new technology, and (d) possible sentencing alternatives. A study committee produced Facts & Issues: Criminal Justice: Capital Punishment in 2002 that was distributed to League members, public officials, agencies, and other interested groups and individuals. A limited consensus was reached in the fall of 2002 and the state board approved the new position in January 2003.

At the LWVUS Convention 2006, delegates voted to include support for the abolition of the death penalty in their positions. The LWVTX Convention 2010 voted to remove references to capital punishment sentencing from our position in order to bring our position in line with LWVUS.

A program review committee formed in 2012 recommended that several changes be made to the Capital Punishment Reform position. The committee produced a background paper supporting the changes that was distributed to local Leagues, and the changes were approved by concurrence at Convention 2013. The changes included wording changes and reordering of bullet items to clarify that the LWVTX position to support reforms to the capital punishment system does not conflict with the LWVUS position to support abolition of the death penalty, to change the term "mental retardation" to "intellectual/developmental disability" and include a statutory of intellectual/developmental disability for purposes of screening accused murderers, to include both life imprisonment and life without parole as sentencing options, and to require the Board of Pardons and Paroles to adopt guidelines and criteria for its recommendations.

History: Capital Punishment

2003. The beginning of the 78th Legislative Session looked very promising as legislators introduced bills that would reform the capital punishment system. The LWVTX supported many of the bills, including those that called for an official study and moratorium, prohibited the execution of the mentally retarded and juveniles, and required foreign nationals to be informed of their consular rights. As the session progressed, it soon became evident that most of these bills would not make it out of committee and none made it to the floor for a vote. The promising beginning of the session proved to be disappointing, even leaving Texas law in noncompliance with the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that prohibits the execution of the mentally retarded.

2005. The 79th Session of the Texas Legislature ended without achieving any real reform to the criminal justice-death penalty system. While bills were introduced that would have achieved reform, most sat out the session in committee. The Life Without Parole bill signed by the governor had changed so dramatically from the original bill that its whole intent changed. The substituted bill added the sentencing option of Life Without Parole, but removed life imprisonment as another option for capital cases, leaving juries with still only two sentencing options. Bills that would have brought Texas into compliance with the Supreme Court ruling that prohibits the execution of the mentally retard were shelved. Another bill, which sought to protect the consular rights of foreign nationals, was also shelved. All in all the session was a disappointing one.

2007. HJR 23 (Naishat), supported by the LWVTX, calling for moratorium on the execution of persons convicted of capital offenses. The bill would grant the governor the power to issue an order to prohibit the Department of Criminal Justice from performing executions on or after the effective date until the order is revoked. The bill did not pass.

2011. Capital punishment has a mix of wins and losses. With the loss of a life, it is important for the criminal justice system to get it right. For the first time ever, the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee had a hearing on capital punishment issues. The LWVTX gave testimony in support of a moratorium. The Legislature did well in adopting safeguards against wrongful convictions. HB 215, (Ellis, Gallego) sets standards for police agencies in conducting eyewitness lineups. SB 122 (Ellis) allows defendants new post conviction access to DNA evidence. HB 417 (Anchia, Ellis) extends compensation eligibility to Anthony Graves, a death-row inmate who was exonerated, but denied his compensation for wrongful conviction.

Lawmakers left important unfinished business, including reforms to record confessions of felony suspects and to ban the offer of leniency in exchange for accomplice testimony in a death penalty case. Lawmakers did not create a special commission to study wrongful convictions and capital punishment.

2015. The League of Women Voters of Texas called for a moratorium on all Texas executions while the U.S. Supreme Court considered Glossip v. Gross, a case involving Oklahoma's lethal injection procedure. In addition, the League called for an interim study committee of Representatives and Senators to study the issues involving the death penalty, such as: state secrecy in lethal injections, execution of the innocent, the cost of executions, the different standards being applied from one county to another resulting in the death penalty in some cases and not others for the same offense, unfair application of the death penalty to minorities, guarantees to avoid racial prejudice and economically disadvantaged as compared to other people in the population, prosecutors' roll in representing society, victims' family members' assistance, qualified defense attorneys, systems to prevent murders by mentally ill persons and those with intellectual and developmental differences, and other solutions to keep society safe and that reflect the magnificence of the State of Texas.

The proposed interim committee could have brought recommendations for potential reforms to fix the death penalty system before the 2017 legislative session and encourage all Texans to engage in a long overdue debate that the Texas death penalty deserves and to ensure that Texas has the best judicial system in the world. The study committee would move closer to ensuring that mistakes will not be made. There is no ability to correct a mistake when somebody has, in fact, been executed while being innocent, the ultimate injustice. In addition, U.S. Department of Justice review of the death penalty, ordered after the botched Oklahoma execution of Clayton Lockett, was still underway. However, SB 1697 (Huffman) that relates to the confidentiality of certain information regarding procedures and substances used in executions passed into law and was signed by the governor. The League opposed this bill.

No matter what one thinks of the death penalty, League members care about open and transparent government and accountability of government to the citizens of Texas. Legislation should not promote government actions to be hidden, but because of SB 1697 now Texas executions can be without the public being fully informed.

Removing death penalty information about chemicals used in the execution process and procedures from public view undermines open government and creates secrecy in executions. The public has a right to obtain public information and a responsibility to oversee government actions. Transactions affecting the death penalty involve Texas paying a private entity for an item or service using taxpayer money to perform executions; yet the legislature approved withholding the procedure and substances names and provider from the taxpayers. This law allows confidentiality of any person who participates in an execution procedure, including a person who uses supplies or administers a substance during the execution and any person or entity that manufactures, compounds, prescribes, dispenses, or provides a substance or supplies used in an execution.

Transparency is a basic principle of democracy, but the law restricts transparency and access to public information. Since the State of Texas is going to continue to administer the death penalty, it is essential that the public have confidence that the state is performing state killing openly. The League position is abolition of the death penalty. Cutting public access to information will only inhibit public confidence as state killings are carried out.

There is an ongoing lawsuit on "credible threats to the supplier," but several sources and one court have questioned the existence of these threats. In addition, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled on June 29 against three death row inmates who had sought to bar the use of an execution drug they said risked causing excruciating pain. The majority of the justices, in a 5-4 vote, concluded that a disputed drug used to render condemned prisoners unconscious as the first stage in the lethal injection process works sufficiently well that it does not violate the Eighth Amendment prohibition on cruel and unusual punishment. The court challenge failed because the plaintiffs did not identify an alternative means of execution.

The U.S. has seen a number of botched executions lasting between 20 minutes to 1 hour and 57 minutes with prisoners being seen gasping for air, grimacing and convulsing during executions.

Justice Sonia Sotomayor argued that the lethal injection protocol cannot "be trusted to render and keep a condemned inmate unconscious, leaving him open to pain at the later stages." With the passage of SB 1697, the public may not be informed of the drug and the procedure used in Texas executions.

Public oversight is a part of the checks and balances to ensure good government. A 2012 study published by the British Journal of American Legal Studies examined 9,000 executions that had taken place in the United States from 1900 to 2010 and found that 270 executions had involved "departures from the protocol of killing someone sentenced to death" and were therefore botched. The researchers found that the lethal injection method of executing Clayton Lockett had a higher botched rate than any other method.

Numerous other bills were filed related to the death penalty that included abolition, but they did not get out of committee. HB 1527 did have a hearing. The League supported HB 53 (McClendon) that relates to the age of criminal responsibility and to certain substantive and procedural matters related to that age. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that children under the age of 18 cannot be executed. This bill would have codified that ruling in Texas. The bill was left in Juvenile Justice and Family Issues Committee.

The League supported HB 267 (Miles) which relates to the joint or separate prosecution of a capital felony charged against two or more defendants for a capital felony for which the state seeks the death penalty, and the court shall order severance as to any two or more defendants who are jointly indicted or complained against for a capital felony if the state seeks the death penalty for any one of those defendants. HB 267 addresses the law of parties in criminal cases. The law of parties is a variation of the common law felony murder rule and states that a person can be criminally responsible for the actions of another if he or she aids and abets or conspires with the principal. The bill was left in Criminal Jurisprudence Committee.

The "law of parties" is clearly about conspiracy and organized crime. Four states other than Texas have law of parties statutes, but Texas is the only state that applies it in capital cases, making it the only place in the country where people can face the death penalty even though they did not actually kill the victim.

2019. This term three bills were filed to abolish the death penalty (by Reps. Ferrar and Dutton and Senator Lucio). All were never given a hearing in committee. Two bills were filed to make a person ineligible for the death penalty if a pretrial procedure determined the defendant is intellectually disabled. HB 1139 (Thompson et al) actually passed the House and Senate, but died in conference committee. No other bills relating to capital punishment procedures were given a committee hearing, except for HB 3938, relating to considering the views of a close relative in a death penalty case. We testified against this bill on the grounds that it could be abused, and it was left pending in committee.

Facts about the death penalty: Texas has the highest number of executions in the country and ranks fifth highest in the world after China, Iran, Saudi Arabia, and Iraq. Yet death penalty cases and executions have been declining in the U.S. for many years.

Death row exonerations have reached a total of 164 in the U.S. Florida has the most exonerations, and Texas is third in the U.S. with 13. Texas has 232 prisoners on death row, the third highest in the country. Texas has the highest number of executions compared to other states. The South has had the most executions compared to other regions of the country with 1219. Texas and Oklahoma have had 671 executions while the Northeast has had 4 executions. One could argue that being executed depends upon where one lives.

The number of death penalty cases is declining currently throughout the country. The trend started in 1976 with no executions in the U.S. when executions were reinstated. The number of executions rose to 98 in 1999 and has declined to 25 in 2018. The race of the defendants executed is 55.6% for White people, 34.2% for Black people, 8.5% for Hispanic people, and 1.6% for other races. The race of the victims is 76% White, 15% Black, 7% Hispanic, and 2% other races.

C. Drug Laws and Policies

2006, 2020 (See also LWVUS Position "Sentencing Policy" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas considers substance abuse and drug addiction public health issues. The League supports:

- Funding of preventive measures by all levels of government, as well as the private sector.
- Education for drug abuse prevention, including:
 - Educational programs aimed at keeping children from using drugs.
 - Public education programs directed to adults.
- Sterile needle and syringe programs to prevent blood-borne diseases.
- No criminal penalties for cannabis possession when recommended by a physician.
- Laws that include drug education and drug treatment programs as alternatives to incarceration.
- Laws that call for no penalties for possession of small amounts of cannabis.

Explanation: Drug Laws and Policies

This study was adopted at Convention 2004 as a not-recommended item. The focus was to research the history of drug laws in Texas, and to evaluate current laws and policies governing the sale and use of illegal drugs, including their effects on young people, communities of color, and medical care and public health. Additionally, the League evaluated the social and economic costs of relying on prohibition, law enforcement, and imprisonment to solve problems related to drugs, and considered possible alternatives to current policies. Consensus was completed and adopted by the board in January 2006.

Our position was reworded to include no criminal penalties for drugs when prescribed by a physician or possession of small amounts of cannabis. The amendments were passed by LWVTX Convention 2020.

History: Drug Laws and Policies

2011. Changes in policies related to substance abuse and drug addiction were not a priority during the 82^{nd} legislative session. Although bills were supported by the LWVTX and other advocates, the proposed legislation never made it out of committee. HB 117 (Jones-McClendon) contained provisions for prevention and treatment of drug addiction as a public health issue. The bill would have allowed certified community health clinics to offer, along with treatment, needle exchange programs for intravenous drug users to prevent blood-borne diseases. HB 1491 (Naishtat) offered a bill to decriminalize the possession and use of marihuana for medical use when prescribed by a licensed physician.

2013. Changes in policies related to possession and use of illegal drugs continue to be a low priority for the state legislature, as proposed bills never made it out of committee. HB 184 (Dutton) would have changed possession of one ounce or less of marihuana or synthetic cannabinoid to a class C misdemeanor. This would have allowed a judge to defer penalties for the defendant who successfully completed a drug awareness and education program approved by the Department of State Health Services. The bill was voted favorably by the Criminal Jurisprudence Committee, but was left pending at the close of the legislative session. SB 90 (Ellis) would have allowed for suspension of the defendant not convicted of a previous similar felony or other felonies to be placed under community supervision that included education and drug treatment. HB 117 (McClendon) is similar to a bill filed as far back as 2007. The bill did make it out of committee and was sent to Calendars Committee April 13, 2013. The aim of the bill was to prevent and reduce the risk of blood-borne disease. The bill would have allowed for a pilot program for anonymous exchange of needles and syringes and offer education on transmission of blood-borne diseases, assist in obtaining substance treatment services, and blood-borne testing services.

2015. There was more support by the 84th Legislature for medical use of marihuana when prescribed by a licensed physician than in previous legislative sessions. SB 339 (Eltife) passed and was signed by the governor, allowing for the dispensing of low-THC cannabis by a licensed organization. Though this is a limited victory for allowing the use of marihuana for medical purposes, it will benefit children with intractable epilepsy. Three other bills supported by the LWVTX introduced failed relating to the use of marihuana for medical purposes when prescribed by a licensed physician. One bill HB 892 (Klick/Zerwas/Zedler) was voted favorably out of committee and made it to the general calendar, but did not come up for a floor vote. Bills HB 3785 (Marquez), HB 837 (Naishtat), and SB 1839 (Menendez) were left pending in committee. Testimony supporting HB 837 and HB 3785 was given in a House Public Health Committee hearing by the LWVTX.

Two bill introduced did address lowering the civil penalty for certain amounts of marihuana. Bill HB 507 (Moody) related to reducing the civil penalty for possession of certain amounts of marihuana and gained some traction as it was voted favorably out of committee. The bill allowed the court to waive or reduce civil penalty if the person attends a program that provides education for substance abuse. The LWVTX gave testimony at a hearing by the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee supporting HB 507. The bill was placed on the general calendar, but did not come up for a vote. A companion bill SB 1417 (Ellis) failed to make out of committee for consideration.

2017. The Texas 85th Legislative Session started out with a note of optimism and support favoring bills related to drug laws and policies. Two of the four bills tracked by the League did receive hearings and came close to a vote out of the House. Despite the failure for passage of the bills related to drug laws and policies, the show of support is encouraging for passage of similar bills in future legislative sessions.

HB 81 (Moody/Issac/Dutton), supported by the League, was to reduce civil penalties for possession of small amounts of marijuana. The bill was voted favorably out of the committee. The LWVTX provided testimony in favor other the bill. HB 81 received strong support, but missed the deadline for a vote to be sent to the Senate.

HB 2107 (Lucio/White/Simmons/Sheffield), supported by the League, allowed use of medical cannabis when recommended by a licensed medical provider. In late April the bill gained traction when constituents went to the Capitol to meet with legislators, taking personal stories urging support of using cannabis for certain medical conditions. The committee held a hearing, and the LWVTX provided testimony in support. The bill was voted favorably out of committee and coauthored by almost half of the House of Representatives, but failed to be placed on the calendar for a vote.

Companion bills SB 170 and SB 269 languished in their respective committees. The Marijuana Project of Texas, an affiliate of the League, served as a reference and provided information on the status on the bills related to use of medical marijuana and a reduction of penalties for small amounts of marijuana.

2019. There was increased support among state legislators for access and use of marihuana for medical use and to reduce the penalties for possession of small amounts of marihuana.

HB 3703 (Klick et al) passed, was signed by the governor and will become law. The bill allows for medical use of low THC cannabis, 0.5 percent, when prescribed by any qualified physician. Use is limited to patients with a diagnosis of epilepsy, multiple sclerosis, spasticity, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, incurable neurodegenerative disease, terminal cancer and autism. Despite the disappointment in limiting the medical use of cannabis, this bill may benefit individuals by having access to an alternative treatment.

Other bills relating to medical use of marihuana, supported by LWVTX, were HB 209 (Reynolds), and SB 90 (Menendez). Neither got out of committee.

HB 63 (Moody), to reduce penalties for possession of a small amount marihuana, failed. The bill passed the House, but although there was support by most members of the Senate for passage, the bill was blocked by the leadership to bring the bill forward for a vote. Passage of this bill would have reduced the penalty for possession of one ounce of marihuana to a class C misdemeanor, same as a traffic ticket.

Other bills reducing penalties, supported by LWVTX, were HB 335 (Dutton), HB 371 (Allen) HB 753 (Wu), HB 1206 (Cole), and HB 2518 (Toth). All these bills received hearings in the Criminal Jurisprudence Committee, but only HB 335 was voted favorably out of committee. It missed the deadline for a vote by the House.

D. Immigration

1996, 2021 (See also LWVUS Position "Immigration" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas recognizes that immigrants bring diversity and enrichment to our state. The humane and ethical treatment of immigrants at our borders is an essential part of our country's rule of law and the development of new residents and citizens.

The League supports the following:

- If children and adults are detained pending an immigration hearing, families are not separated, and children should remain with parents or guardians.
- The facility should provide medical care, a healthy diet, and sanitary living conditions.
- All immigrants, whether they are children or adults, should be provided with an attorney prior to appearing in Immigration court. Legal representation is vital to ensure due process of the law.
- Racial profiling should not be used to stop or hold immigrants or residents due to their appearance, speaking a language other than English, nor should there be an assumption of criminality concerning these issues.

The League of Women Voters of Texas recognizes that cultural diversity is a source of strength.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports economic assistance to those areas of the state disproportionately impacted by immigration. This funding should come primarily from federal, state, and private sources such as corporations, churches, businesses, and foundations. Local assistance is also appropriate.

The League believes that the state should:

- Encourage and fund English as a second language and other assimilation subjects for adult immigrants.
- Encourage bilingual information signs in public places where needed.
- Require and fund international symbols for all traffic signs.

The League believes the state should support local agencies and groups working with the immigrant population. State support is absolutely necessary for:

- Language fluency for children.
- Emergency health care (including obstetrical delivery).

Additionally, the state should support:

- Language fluency education for adults.
- Administration of criminal justice programs.
- Assimilation programs.
- Housing programs.
- Job training and placement for immigrants.

The League believes that the state should provide additional assistance to school districts heavily impacted by immigration for:

- Staff training.
- Instructional materials.
- Salaries for special skills teachers and aides.
- Facility construction.
- Curriculum development.

The League supports the establishment and utilization of an electronic system to verify immigration status. This system should include measures that will protect privacy and ensure accuracy. The system should be made available to:

- Employers.
- Social service providers.
- Housing agencies.
- Criminal justice system.

The League supports the mandated compilation of statistics regarding immigrants' use of state services.

Explanation: Immigration

Reflecting a widespread interest in the subject, the LWVTX board recommended and delegates to Convention 1995 voted to study immigration issues in Texas. A study committee produced Facts & Issues: Immigration, An American Paradox, which was distributed to League members, government officials and agencies, and other interested groups and individuals. Consensus was reached in the fall of 1996, and the state board approved the new position in November of that year. See the LWVUS Immigration Update 2008 at the end of this publication.

History: Immigration

1997. Because immigration is largely regulated by federal law, few bills relating to immigration were introduced during the 75th Legislature, and no League action was taken. However, one of the League's legislative priorities in 1997, fair and adequate funding and delivery of vital state services in the era of block grants, encompassed the needs of all low-income persons, immigrants as well as nonimmigrants.

2001. Changes in federal law in 1996 and partial restoration of federal food stamps in 1998 still left many legal immigrants in Texas ineligible for food assistance. The League supported legislation to alleviate these hardships by requiring the Texas Department of Human Services to develop and implement a food assistance program.

2007. The immigration issue generated much sound and fury during the 80th Legislative session, but none of three bills supported by the LWVTX passed. HB 28 (Berman) would have excluded state services to children born in this state to parents who are not citizens or nationals of the U.S., and who have entered the U.S. without inspection and authorization of an immigration officer. The bill died in committee. HRC 11 (Solomon) would have directed the office of the Attorney General of Texas to pursue all available remedies to demand the enforcement of all existing federal immigration laws and to recover any money owed Texas by the federal government for costs incurred by the state in dealing with illegal immigration. SB 151 (Shapleigh) would have prohibited discrimination relating to immigration status or nationality of a person needing or receiving emergency medical care.

2009. The 81st Texas Legislature did provide a few minor affirmative measures such as allowing children to be absent from school if they are involved in an immigration court hearing and providing services and protection to victims of human trafficking. However, of the more than 100 immigration bills filed, more than 60 were anti-immigrant. One questionable bill that did pass was a measure that would provide deportation for those convicted of a misdemeanor involving family violence. According to the Progressive States Network, the anti-immigration movement failed in most states, and Texas was rated as a somewhat integrated state.

2011. The 82nd Session saw several proposed bills regarding immigration. The main thrust behind each was to implement the governor's objective to enable all law enforcement agencies across the state to verify the legal status of anyone legally detained. This included increased use of the federal electronic verification system. The LWVTX opposed all of the proposed immigration bills, basically because immigration is a federal issue. The LWVTX supports federal laws providing an efficient, expeditious system for legal entry into the U.S. None of the proposed bills were successful in the regular session.

2017. The 85th Legislative Session has been the most divisive session in recent history for immigration with the passage of SB 4 overshadowing the issue. SB 4 aims to outlaw "sanctuary cities" by requiring local police to cooperate with federal immigration authorities and allowing police to inquire about the immigration status of people they lawfully detain. Law enforcement from across the state provided testimony arguing that the law would make our state unsafe and that cities and counties were unable to bear the additional cost of enforcing the law.

Witnesses testified that the law would bring fear into our communities, making people fearful of contacting police, the fear of police profiling in a state that has a large Hispanic community, and the fear that families would be torn apart. The Senate and House both passed this bill, which the governor signed.

The passage of this bill has spurred numerous lawsuits from municipalities across the state from El Cenito (a small border town) to San Antonio (a large metropolitan city) and civil rights organizations. The legislation has spurred many protests in the state and at the Capitol. It has created an environment of fear and contempt that culminated in a near fight in the House.

The only real immigration bright spot this session was that the House let SB 1018, dubbed the "Baby jail" bill die in committee. The Senate bill would have given the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services the ability to license detention centers as day care centers.

2019. Of all the bills we followed and supported, only three bills were given a hearing, and they all were left pending (State Affairs, April 17).

HB 35 (Romero, Jr.) would provide conditional driver's permits and conditional instruction permits to residents who are ineligible to have a Social Security number. The ability to be licensed to drive in the state would ensure that drivers met the requirements of taking and passing driver tests and be required to have insurance. This would ensure that our streets would be safer due to having licensed and insured drivers on our roadways.

HB 652 (Neave) would remove the requirement that officials cooperate with Federal immigration officers in the event of an incident occurring in a domestic violence shelter or a church. It would ensure those who are seeking help would not be threatened by the possibility of being deported.

HB 2266 (Anchia) would essentially do away with SB 4. SB 4 became law in 2017 after being hotly debated in the State Senate and was overwhelming opposed by law enforcement, local public officials and private citizens who feared that the new law would lead to police profiling, victims unwilling to call the police and public officials who did not want their law enforcement to become an arm of ICE.

It is disappointing that these important bills, dealing with how the state addresses children, domestic violence victims, the sanctuary of churches, hospitals and domestic violence centers, were left unaddressed. Other bills that dealt with the detention of children were not given a hearing (HB 3664, HB 4141, HB 1765). Two bills that would have repealed in-state tuition for undocumented students who arrived here as children, which we would have opposed, also were not given a hearing.

A review/update of the Immigration position was submitted during Program Planning and voted by the delegates to Convention 2020.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports an effective state juvenile justice system and programs and policies to prevent juvenile violence and crime. We support the following:

- An adequate level of state funding for the juvenile justice system and for addressing the problem of juvenile crime; in allocating state funds for these purposes, highest priority should be given to prevention, followed by intervention and then corrections; funding responsibility should be shared by city and county governments, school districts, and private sources.
- Juveniles are those under the age of 18 at the time of the offense.
- Rehabilitation as the main goal of the juvenile justice system, with every juvenile committed to the Texas Youth Commission having access to adequate and appropriate rehabilitation services and programs.
- Coordination of information and services between social service agencies and the juvenile justice system.
- Adequate access to juvenile records by law enforcement agencies.
- The minimum age for adult certification of juvenile offenders should not be lower than 15.
- Strict regulation of possession of firearms by juveniles; adults who furnish illegal firearms to juveniles should be held criminally liable.

If boot camps are used as a correctional measure, they should:

- Feature careful preplacement screening.
- Be limited to nonviolent offenders.
- Provide for parental involvement when appropriate.
- Include programs that build self-esteem.
- Be nonabusive.
- Emphasize rehabilitation.
- Provide meaningful tasks for the juveniles.
- Provide for follow-up.

Cultural bias in the juvenile justice system should be addressed through:

- Review and revision of juvenile justice system policies and practices that may have a discriminatory effect.
- Increased access to competent legal counsel.
- Early access to prevention/intervention programs.
- Cultural awareness training for juvenile justice professionals.

A comprehensive juvenile violence and delinquency prevention strategy should include, but not be limited to:

- Self-esteem enhancement/development.
- Classes in parenting skills/family relations.
- Quality childcare programs.
- Opportunities for healthy bonding with an individual or group.
- Classes in alternatives to violence as a means of resolving disputes.
- Drug education programs.
- Sexuality education.
- Gang prevention programs.

The state should require schools to provide alternative education programs for students with severe behavioral problems. The state should encourage schools to:

- Teach alternatives to violence.
- Provide alternative education programs for truants and other at-risk students.

Explanation: Juvenile Justice

Delegates to Convention 1993 voted to restudy the juvenile justice system in Texas and to look into the problem of juvenile violence as well. Facts & Issues: Juvenile Violence and the Juvenile Justice System in Texas, was produced by the study committee and circulated to all members, selected government officials and agencies, and other interested groups and individuals. Consensus was reached in the fall of 1994, and the state board approved the new position in November of that year. The current position replaces the former juvenile justice position that had been adopted in 1977. In January 2018 the LWVTX board voted to amend the position by adding a definition that "juveniles are those less than 18 years old at the time of the offense" (to align with the U.S. Supreme Court ruling Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 2005) and delete that "juvenile offenders under age 10 may be referred to the juvenile justice system."

History: Juvenile Justice

1995. During the 1995 Legislative Session, juvenile violence and the juvenile justice system was a priority issue for the LWVTX. An advocacy paper, "Juvenile Crime: Strategies to Stem the Rising Tide," was published and circulated to all legislators and other elected and appointed officials, as well as to interested members. The League's interest in juvenile crime proved most timely. Legislators and the governor, as well as many other citizens statewide, shared the conviction that this pervasive problem must be addressed with fresh initiatives.

League-supported portions of the enacted bill include: first offender program to allow nonfelony juvenile offenders to be processed outside the juvenile court; early intervention services for juveniles as young as seven; a progressive sanctions model (though not fully funded) that ensures juveniles face uniformly consistent consequences that correspond to the seriousness of their offenses; funds for additional probation officers and for construction of post adjudication intermediate sanction facilities. The League also lobbied successfully for a new law that limits children's access to readily dischargeable firearms. Although a League-supported measure geared to prevention programs in early childhood failed passage, several prevention programs were successfully attached to other bills.

2007. SB103, a comprehensive reform bill for the Texas Youth Commission (TYC) was signed by the governor and became law. Major points of the bill are:

- Only children committing felonies may be sentenced to a TYC facility.
- Establishes a feasibility study of a regional structure for TYC with smaller, local facilities conforming to needs of an area.
- Establishes the office of Executive Commissioner and Advisory Board for TYC.
- Establishes authority of a state auditor to review financial transactions of Commission an internal audit procedure, reporting to legislative committees.
- Provides for criminal background checks for potential TYC employees.
- Allows advocacy and support groups to provide on-site services at TYC facilities.
- Establishes the Office of Inspector General to investigate fraud.
- Establishes the Office of Ombudsman to evaluate services to youth and review complaints.
- Restrict placement of minors under 15 years to dorms for youths 16 years and younger.
- Develops and distributes a Parents Bill of Rights.
- Assigns a caseworker to each child committed to a TYC facility.
- Establishment of a zero-tolerance policy regarding of sexual abuse of inmates.
- Allows equal access to TYC facilities for female officers.
- Will offer rehabilitation programs recommended by the adjudicating judge.

F. Spousal Sexual Assault

1982, 1987, 2010

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports Texas laws that provide that sexual intercourse or deviant sexual intercourse with one's spouse without the consent of that spouse is a criminal offense punishable on the same basis as rape or sexual abuse of any other person.

Explanation: Spousal Sexual Assault

A study of spousal rape was adopted in 1981 and the position was adopted in 1982. The spousal rape position was studied by the 1995-97 Periodic Program Review Committee, which modified the original position to reflect a law passed in 1993 that eliminated marital rape exemptions. Although the original position has been achieved, it was retained to allow the League to advocate against possible future attempts to reinstate the old law. Retaining the position also allows local Leagues to support police department and district attorney efforts to prosecute accused rapists diligently, regardless of the marital status of the parties. Convention 2003 requested that the LWVTX develop a publication with updated information on this position. At Convention 2010 delegates voted to change the position name to Spousal Sexual Assault to conform to language in the current criminal code and statutes.

History: Spousal Sexual Assault

1980s. The LWVTX supported successful bills making sexual assault of a spouse illegal where the married persons lived apart or had filed for divorce. New laws were enacted, defining crimes of sexual assault committed by a spouse. These measures required a showing of bodily injury or threat of bodily injury for criminal prosecution against a spouse.

1994. The 73rd Session of the Texas Legislature passed a law mandating that all sexual assault victims be treated equally and eliminating all marital rape exemptions.

2004. Written information for members about the League position on spousal rape and the status of current law regarding the subject appeared in the Spring 2004 Texas Voter.

G. Trafficking of Persons

2014 (See also LWVUS Position "Human Trafficking" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas is opposed to all forms of domestic and international human trafficking of adults and children, including sex trafficking and labor trafficking. We consider human trafficking to be a form of modern-day slavery and support measures to prevent the use of force, fraud or coercion to exploit a person for sexual or labor purposes, to prosecute traffickers and to protect victims.

Federal, state and local governments should collaborate to fund and implement effective strategies for prosecution, including but not limited to:

- Enact and enforce effective laws against traffickers.
- Require human trafficking training for law enforcement officers and prosecutors.
- Maintain and share reliable trafficking data among all levels of government and with nongovernmental organizations (NGOs).
- Put convicted sex traffickers of children on the National Sex Offender Registry list.
- Enforce civil and criminal penalties against persons who knowingly buy services provided as a result of human trafficking, or buy services from a minor, including mandated awareness training.
- Enact and enforce laws at the appropriate level to shut down businesses that engage in or allow human trafficking.
- Divert victims of human trafficking into justice and rescue programs that provide access to services such as counseling and job training.
- Assume all minors are victims, no proof of coercion required.

Federal, state and local governments, in cooperation with nongovernmental agencies, should fund and provide essential services to and remedies for victims and survivors, including but not limited to:

- Legal aid, translations and other court-related services.
- Services to shelter victims from their traffickers and help them return to a normal life, such as housing, medical, counseling, job training.
- Ability to sue the trafficker for civil damages.
- Defined roles for child welfare system and juvenile justice system in assisting trafficked minors.
- Guardianship, protective custody and safe houses for trafficked minors when home situation would put the minor at risk.

Federal, state and local governments, in cooperation with nongovernmental agencies, should fund and provide education and awareness programs on human trafficking in our communities and schools, including but not limited to:

- Training to identify and assist victims or potential victims of human trafficking, for all persons who might come into contact with them, such as medical professionals, law enforcement and prosecution personnel, educators at all levels, mental health professionals, city health inspectors, hotel owners and others.
- Internet safety education for youth, parents and teachers.
- Services and outreach for homeless, throwaway youth and other at-risk populations.

Explanation: Trafficking of Persons

A study of Human Trafficking in Texas was adopted at Convention 2012. A study committee produced Facts & Issues: Human Trafficking in Texas, and local Leagues held consensus meetings in the fall of 2013. The LWVTX board adopted the new position in 2014 based on local League consensus. In 2020, the LWVTX board updated the name to Trafficking of Persons.

History: Trafficking of Persons

2017. In several ways we made progress in this Legislative Session for awareness of and laws to address human trafficking in Texas. We have three bills that passed both the House and Senate unanimously, thus bipartisan support.

Bills signed by the governor.

• A law that requires successful completing of a training course in recognition and prevention of human trafficking by applicants for a commercial drivers license.

- A law relating to the development of instructional material for public schools on the prevention of sexual abuse and sex trafficking.
- A law with recommendations to improve the Office of Attorney General Human Trafficking Taskforce.

Bills not passed.

- A bill to mandate signs required to be posted in the restrooms of sexually oriented businesses with the National Human Trafficking Hotline phone number and text number. (We will seek to have such warning and information signs in all public restrooms, particularly in restaurants, bars, airports, public sports facilities, etc.)
- A bill related to continuing education requirements regarding human trafficking for cosmetology license holders and establishments.
- A bill related to judicial proceedings on a petition to set aside a conviction or an order of expunction of criminal history record information for certain victims of trafficking of persons or compelling prostitution who are convicted of prostitution.
- A bill to require registration as a sex offender of certain defendants convicted of the offense of continuous trafficking of persons.

2019. At least three bills related to trafficking of persons passed the legislature and were sent to the Governor. One bill, HB 72 (Nelson), establishes the Human Trafficking Prevention Coordinating Council in the office of the Attorney General, to develop and implement a five-year plan for preventing human trafficking in the state, and to submit the plan to the legislature. Another bill, SB 1219 (Avarado), requires the of signs regarding services and assistance for victims in transportation hubs such as airports, train stations, bus stops, rest stops, etc. Both were signed by the governor. Senator Alvarado asked for our help on this bill, so I asked a trafficking survivor to testify at the House committee hearing.

A third bill passed but was vetoed. HB 3078 (Thompson) would have established a review panel under the Board of Pardons and Paroles, which would have considered clemency applications from persons who committed offenses under duress or coercion as a result of being a victim of human trafficking or family violence. The governor's veto statement said that this bill would "add a thick layer of bureaucracy...and is not the way to help victims of human trafficking."

One other bill, HB 467 (Hernandez), relating to sexual assault and domestic violence training for Cosmetology license holders, passed the House but did not get a hearing in the Senate.

In January 2020 the LWVTX board voted to change the name of the position to Trafficking of Persons, in response to a request by the Issue Chair.

H. Payday & Auto Title Loans in Texas

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports policies, legislation, and programs that enable a small dollar loan market that maintains access to affordable credit while safeguarding consumers. Payday and auto title loan businesses should be regulated so that they function both as a consumer service and a successful business.

The League believes that a loan is affordable if the borrower can repay the loan and cover basic expenses without borrowing again or obtaining money from another source. Local governments should be able to regulate payday and auto title lending within their jurisdictions in order to achieve a viable small dollar loan market that provides consumer access to affordable credit and safeguards against predatory lending. Criminal charges and penalties for payday and auto title loans in default should continue to be explicitly prohibited by Texas law. The League supports:

- Consumer credit regulations that increase restrictions on short-term loans and require lenders to offer affordable loans.
- Financial education measures that increase the ability of consumers to successfully use small dollar loan financial products, and
- State and private funding of measures to prevent long-term debt by borrowers in need of immediate cash.

Explanation: Payday & Auto Title Loans in Texas

Delegates to Convention 2014 adopted a study, "Payday and Auto Title Loans in Texas," reflecting intense scrutiny of payday and auto title loans at all levels of government and widespread discussion in the community and media that made it a compelling public policy issue. The study focused on current regulations of payday and auto tile lenders in Texas, the accessibility and impact of these loans in the community, and options for small dollar loans for persons in need of immediate cash. A committee comprised of six League members from across the state conducted the study and produced Facts & Issues: Payday & Auto Title Loans in Texas. The report was published on the state League website and distributed electronically to League members. Print copies were provided to Texas state office holders, major donor, and other interested groups and individuals. Following numerous public forums and League consensus meetings across the state during fall 2015, a consensus was reached based on analysis of individual League consensus reports. The LWVTX Board of Directors adopted the new position January 2016.

History: Payday & Auto Title Loans in Texas

2017. During the regular session of the 85th Texas Legislature, a few payday and auto title lending bills made it out of committee in both chambers, but none made it to the floor. However, Representative Craddick offered an amendment to SB 2065 what would enact the unified payday/auto title ordinance at the state level (a model local ordinance originated by the Texas Municipal League). However Representative Capriglione offered an amendment to the amendment that would preempt local payday/auto title lending ordinances. While we have heard that a few legislators were confused with the vote, the vote shows us the stance of most representatives on this issue. In the end, the bill failed, and the local ordinances stayed intact.

Note. As of January 2018, 41 cities have enacted "business regulations" over payday lenders that are similar to the example ordinance available from the Texas Municipal League. Also sixteen cities have enacted land use regulations related to payday and auto title lending.

2019. During the 86th legislative session, there were multiple efforts (through both filed bills and amendments proposed from the floor) to eliminate the uniform payday and auto-title lending ordinance which has been adopted by 44 Texas cities. SB 1209, HB 3899, and HB 2847 would have preempted the payday and auto-title lending ordinance, yet these bills either did not pass or advocates were able to work with the bill author to explicitly exclude the payday and auto-title loan ordinance.

Additionally, HB 1442, passed and renewed the Office of Consumer Credit Commissioner – which is the state agency that oversees the regulation of Credit Access Businesses (CAB or payday and auto-title lenders). This bill also extended the OCCC's authorization to include online lending, which is a win.

2021. Our top priority this session was to uphold current protections for consumers by supporting local payday and auto title loan ordinances (adopted in 46 Texas cities) and maintaining existing rate and fee caps for consumer loans. The House Pensions, Investments & Financial Services Committee gave a hearing to consumer loan bills, but unfortunately no meaningful bills were voted out of Committee. Throughout the session, advocates stopped bills and potential amendments which would have pre-empted local ordinances, and would have included payday and auto-title loan ordinances. Thankfully, none of these passed.

III. Social Policy/Human Resources

A. Child Abuse & Neglect

1990, 1995, 2009 (See also LWVUS position "Early Intervention for Children At Risk in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports the development and implementation of adequate legislation, policies, services, and programs to protect children from abuse and neglect. Measures the League supports include, but are not limited to the following:

- Adequate funding from governmental and private sources to provide appropriately trained staff and uniform statewide availability and accessibility of effective services and programs.
- Provision by the responsible state and local agencies for varied and sufficient services to ensure the protection of children.
- Development and implementation of programs to prevent child abuse and neglect.
- Mandatory, uniform, and ongoing training in recognizing and reporting physical and behavioral indicators of child abuse and neglect for persons responsible for the safety and welfare of children, such as law enforcement officers, judges and probation officers, educators, child-care givers, and medical personnel.
- Availability and enforcement of measures, including protective orders, for the removal of the abuser from home when appropriate.
- Stringent correctional measures for persons who abuse or neglect children, including mandatory specialized treatment and counseling as well as appropriate enhancements for repeated offenses.

Explanation: Child Abuse & Neglect

Delegates at Convention 1989 adopted a novel plan regarding this issue. After the LWV of the Houston Area completed a local study of child abuse and neglect and adopted its local position, the LWVTX board narrowed the scope of the position statement so that it was appropriate for a statewide concurrence process. The narrowed position statement and a publication (Focus) adapted and edited by the LWVTX board from LWV of the Houston Area Facts & Issues was subsequently made available to participating members statewide. After careful evaluation of resulting concurrence data, the LWVTX board adopted the state League position in June 1990.

During the Periodic Program Review process in 1993-95, wording changes that enhance format consistency and reflect changed circumstances were suggested by the Periodic Program Review Committee and received final approval at the 1995 Convention. A substantive addition to the position was also approved: support for stringent correctional measures for persons who abuse or neglect children, including mandatory specialized treatment and counseling, as well as enhancement for repeated offenses. The reworded position is set forth above. In Statewide Conference 2009 delegates voted to drop our position's limitation to abuse "in their families and homes" so that we could support bills that would reform the Texas Youth Commission.

History: Child Abuse & Neglect

1990-95. During this period, the League supported its child abuse and neglect positions through membership in the Texas Council on Family Violence. In 1995 we supported a measure that rededicated monies paid to the Children's Trust Fund of Texas directly into the agency's operating funds, thus establishing an improved, more direct method for the Children's Trust Fund of Texas to provide funds to communities for local abuse prevention programs.

1999. During the legislative session, funding to Child Protective Services (CPS) was increased significantly. Foster care received a 7% increase. Two hundred-twenty new CPS staff that had been authorized by was augmented by an additional 160 caseworkers in order to lower caseloads and to improve the effectiveness of child abuse investigations.

2003. During this legislative session Child Protective Services was reorganized and will continue to be impacted as the result of a huge human services reconsolidation law. Several prevention programs lost funding in the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, including Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Healthy Families, Family Outreach, and the Children's Trust Fund.

2005. Although the LWVTX did not set a priority for this issue, reform of Child Protective Services was an important aspect of this session for legislators. The omnibus bill relating to child abuse, as passed and signed by the governor, decreases worker case loads, strengthens ties between Child Protective Services and law enforcement, and provides other protections for children. A last minute attempt to ban gay foster parenting was ultimately unsuccessful. The bill does institute privatization of services for children over the next 6 years, beginning with one region. In the budget battles, Child Protective Services received a 12% increase in funding (state and federal), which will be used to reduce caseloads.

2009. Three bills supported by the League were passed and signed by Governor Perry. SB 1646 (Van de Putte) created a Council of Children and Families. SB 2080 (Uresti) created a Task Force whose task would be to form a strategy for reducing child abuse and neglect and improving child welfare, including providing assistance for adoptive parents and foster care parents. HB 1041 (Parker) related to school districts policies on addressing sexual abuse and established a state agency to reduce child abuse and neglect and to improve child welfare. In addition, the overall budget of CPS received a 8.1% increase over 2008-09 general revenue expenditures including funding for an additional 118.6 Family Based Safety Services Staff to increase face-to-face contact with children and their parents, therapy for abused children, treatment and other services for parents/families, an increase in foster care services, and funds to strengthen services to youth transitioning from foster care.

2011. There was some success in this area with the passage of six bills supported by the LWVTX. These included bills by Senators Nelson, Uresti, and West that related to the operation of child protective services and the foster care system, mental health services for children in foster care, and the establishment of a task force to study the relationship between domestic violence and child abuse. Also school districts are required to expand their policies to include all types of abuse and to require training of new staff.

2013. With the passage of two bills supported by the LWVTX, progress was made on recognition and reporting of child abuse and penalties for not reporting it: SB 939 (West) related to training to recognize child abuse in schools and reporting it. HB 1205 (Parker, Raymond, Zerwas, Fallon) related to the offense of failure to report abuse or neglect of a child in schools or institutes of higher learning.

Other bills also supported by the LWVTX passed: SB 44 (Zaffirini, West) provided mental health services in certain child abuse or neglect cases. SB 66 (Nelson) related to studying the causes of and made recommendations for reducing child fatalities, including those from abuse or neglect. SB 245 (West) related to eligibility of children's advocacy centers to provide services for children and family members in cases of child abuse and neglect. SB 1758 (Uresti) established a task force to examine hiring and management practices of the Department of Family and Protective Services. HB 1228 (Dukes) related to consideration by the court of sex abuse and conduct that constitutes sexual assault in certain suits affecting the parent-child relationship.

2017. Overall the 85th Texas Legislature has been a very productive session for child protection with significant investments made in the Child Protective Services workforce to reduce turnover, increases in foster care rates to address capacity, some prevention funding, and support for children who age out of foster care. Several major bills that the League supported made it through the process. A recap of some of the bills tracked follows.

2019. The 86th Texas Legislature lost the previous session's focus on the Texas Department of Family and Protective Service and child protection. Fortunately, a few bills were passed that continue to improve services provided to abused children.

Now schools, courts and colleges are required to consider the child's situation when disciplining or in the civil/criminal court system. The Texas Children's Commission must develop guidelines for judges for greater uniformity in handling CPS cases involving children with mental illness and the placement and termination of parental rights. Texas will provide additional services for foster youth who age out of the system to encourage success as a young adult. And lawmakers will have better data on foster youth in the juvenile justice system, with specific reporting requirements to enable development and implementation of programs to prevent foster youth from entering the criminal justice system.

Lawmakers recognized the importance of stability in a child's life by strengthening the possibility of kinship placement. Now, the Department and Courts may consider as a caregiver a person who has a longstanding and significant relationship with the child's family. Courts are required to ask the child and the parent(s) about the identity of someone who may be considered as a caregiver in lieu of placement in the foster system. Children will also be heard, as judges must ask them about relationships in their lives at each permanency hearing. And Courts are now required to educate kinship caregivers of ways to receive additional resources to help them provide for the placed children.

Pregnant and parenting foster youth were not forgotten and will receive information about ways to keep their own child(ren) safe and promote healthy attachment, child development, and maternal health if they cannot or do not participate in Project Helping through Intervention and Prevention (HIP) (a voluntary program). Schools will have more responsibilities as well to help abused children through mandatory training for public school employees to address prevention of sexual abuse, sex trafficking and other maltreatment of children. Additional trauma-informed approaches will be integrated into schools, but more needs to be done to prevent Adverse Childhood Experiences ("ACE") and develop services to assist children to heal. H.B. 4183, which did not pass, would have implemented a statewide collaborative effort for communities and resources to address ACE. Funding is always an issue for the state when providing protection for children. This lack of focus of lawmakers included feeble attempts to meet the upcoming federal Family First Prevention Act funding deadlines. Fortunately, S.B. 355 passed which calls for the Department to develop a strategic plan for implementing previous programs in order to comply with FFPA.

The League issued six Action Alerts on Medicaid expansion and additional months of Medicaid coverage for children. These alerts were among the most popular with our members and supporters, generating more then 13,500 emails to legislators. However only one of the bills, HB 744 giving 12 months of Medicaid coverage for new mothers, passed the House but was not voted on by the Senate.

2021. Two key issues—racial disparity and foster care reform—should have garnered more action from the 87th Texas Legislature. This session, while passing some good bills, left many opportunities in committee.

A prime example are SB 75 and HB 155 (identical bills) which LWVTX supported. These bills never received public hearings. Sponsors attempted to address the continuous need to collect information regarding the racial disparities in child welfare cases handled by the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services. The Department acknowledges racial disparities (unequal or different opportunities provided to a group in comparison to another group) and disproportionality continues in the system.

Prior to the start of the legislative session, federal court monitors found the Texas foster care system was still dangerous to children and a federal judge held lawmakers in contempt for repeated failure to protect children in foster care. The pandemic only increased the risk of neglect and abuse. After monitoring the bills that did pass during this session, it appears legislators are putting great faith in private residential programs which could be problematic in the future.

With the Family First Prevention Services Act (FFPSA) funding, Texas has the opportunity to prevent children from entering foster care. SB 1575, supported by LWVTX, becomes law on September 1, 2021. It not only codifies the judicial review of placements under FFPSA, the bill includes a required study of "best practice" for residential treatment center placements.

SB 1628, supported by LWVTX, would have created a Foster Care Ombudsman to hear complaints from foster care providers and be independent of DFPS. SB 1628 made it through the Senate and House committees but did not receive a vote in the House.

LWVTX supported HB 566 which will become law on September 1, 2021. Lawmakers recognized that the most prevalent inadequacy in the child welfare system is the lack of education for recognizing and distinguishing the behaviors that children exhibit due to trauma. Attorneys involved in DFPS cases will now be required to complete a training program on trauma-informed care and the effect of trauma on children in the conservatorship of the DFPS.

Unfortunately, the legislature once again failed to advance strategic plans regarding adverse childhood experiences ("ACE") so DFPS can improve the effectiveness and delivery of prevention and early intervention services. LWVTX continues to support this ongoing effort to acknowledge and learn about the effects of ACE on children and adults. HB 3493 was placed on the General State Calendar but failed to pass.

LWVTX also supported the vision of SB 1079. This bill required DPS to publish monthly reports regarding the child welfare system in an effort to assist local communities and agencies to minimize neglect and abuse of children in foster care. While SB 1079 made it through both the Senate and House committees, it did not receive a vote on the House floor.

B. Child Support Enforcement

1983, 1987, 1997

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports equitable and efficient means of enforcing court orders for child support.

Explanation: Child Support Enforcement

The LWVTX adopted this position in 1983, after member study and concurrence. The League lobbied statewide in support of a proposition amending the Texas constitution to provide garnishment of wages for enforcement of court orders for child support. After passage of the proposition in November 1983, the League dropped the position at Convention 1985, believing its goal had been achieved. However enforcement of court orders for child support payments continued to be a significant statewide problem, and delegates voted to reactivate the position at Convention 1987.

History: Child Support Enforcement

1991-93: In the 1991 and 1993 Legislative Sessions, League efforts contributed to passage of bills to bring Texas into compliance with federal guidelines for income withholding, to improve insurance protection for children, and to facilitate procedures for establishing paternity.

An especially important 1993 bill provides the requisite authorization for Texas to develop and implement procedures to enforce child support obligations under the provisions of the federal Child Support Recovery Act of 1992, the "Deadbeat Parents Act". The federal law provides for interstate enforcement of child support orders and makes it a federal offense with a criminal penalty to willfully fail to pay past due support obligations for a child residing in another state.

1995. Passage of a measure providing for suspension of professional and recreational licenses for those delinquent in paying child support was another victory for the League and other proponents of effective means of enforcing support orders. Despite recent progress, much more remains to be accomplished under this position. Children in single-parent households still comprise the fastest category of persons living in poverty in Texas today. Many live in poverty because only one parent sustains them, while court orders for their support are ignored and unenforced. The Periodic Program Review Committee studied the Child Support Enforcement position in the 1995-97 biennium. Despite recent more stringent enforcement legislation, the committee recognized that in this area the law is far from perfect and recommended no change in this position.

C. Early Childhood

1990, 1995, 2009 (See also LWVUS position "Child Care" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports policies, legislation, and programs that address the needs of all Texas children and families for accessible, affordable, and quality childcare.

The League believes that all children in childcare are entitled to a safe, nurturing environment and developmentally appropriate activities. Caring for children is a societal as well as a family responsibility and the state should play a role in meeting childcare needs. The League supports the development, adoption, and implementation of a comprehensive state childcare policy that includes, but is not limited to:

- Programs designed to provide an adequate supply of accessible childcare.
- Access to information that will help families recognize and choose quality childcare.
- A provision for parental choice in the selection of subsidized childcare.
- Programs designed to make childcare affordable to all.
- Consistent and reliable funding, administered efficiently, and used effectively.

- Financial support from a variety of sources including federal grants and matching funds, state funds, local government funds, employer contributions, fees for service, private philanthropy.
- Minimum standards, effectively enforced, for childcare services.
- Measures to promote quality childcare.
- Coordination of childcare programs, services, and funding.
- Encouragement of cooperation among groups and agencies.
- A state model-employer program that makes quality, affordable childcare available to state employees.

Explanation: Childcare/Early Childhood

At Convention 1989 delegates adopted a study of Childcare in Texas. The scope of the study included programs, services, availability, standards, enforcement, policies, and affordability. A Facts and Issues: Childcare in Texas: The Roles and Responsibilities of the State was produced by the study committee and widely circulated to members, childcare advocacy groups, and legislators. Consensus was reached in the fall of 1990, with 28 local Leagues participating.

The childcare position underwent Periodic Program Review during 1993-95. Several editing changes that clarify meaning were recommended by the Periodic Program Review Committee and approved by the membership. The reworded position is set forth above. A recommendation by the Periodic Program Review Committee for a substantive addition to the position (support of measures to override local restrictions on the location of childcare facilities, including family day homes) was rejected by the membership. The name was changed by state board vote in October 2009 to Early Childhood to reflect the prevailing title used in the industry.

History: Childcare/Early Childhood

1985. Action to strengthen and expand the state role in childcare programs was taken in support of legislation enabling the Texas Employment Commission to provide public and private employees information and technical assistance regarding childcare. The LWVTX also supported the successful legislation which allows counties to provide childcare services for employees and jurors and to set fees for those programs. Also see Childcare/Early Childhood under State Program.

1991. Childcare was a League priority for the 72nd Legislature and was a very active issue because of developments at the federal and state levels. The passage of federal block grant legislation during 1990 made significant new funding available to the state for childcare, necessitating substantial policy development and planning by the state. In response, the interim Childcare Task Force of the House Health and Human Services Committee produced comprehensive recommendations addressing policy, planning, quality, and regulation, as well as measures to make childcare affordable and available. The task force recommendations were introduced as a package of bills, most of which the League was able to support. The League worked closely during the session with other childcare advocates through the Childcare Working Group for passage of these bills. Thanks to strong legislative leadership in both the House and Senate and coordinated advocacy, most of the legislation passed.

This legislation included a resolution setting forth a clear position for the State of Texas on the importance of childcare and specific requirements to make childcare affordable and available. Other legislation set guidelines for the implementation of federal and state childcare programs and established an advisory committee to assist in developing policies for the use of state and federal funds for childcare. A League representative was appointed to this committee. Another successful bill related to standards, licensing, and coordination of prekindergarten programs.

Several bills the League supported failed to pass because they required additional state funding. These included bills relating to training of childcare providers and reimbursement of start-up costs incurred by childcare providers, and one mandating a cost-of-care study.

1993. Due to fiscal restraints, few new initiatives for children succeeded in the 73rd Legislature. Most legislation that did pass was of a regulatory or technical nature. Many health and human services programs were underfunded in the 1994-95 budget. A childcare program that enables low income families to pursue employment or be employed in order to remain off welfare was cut by $8 million, affecting 6000 children. The federal matching funds were diverted to serve 4-year-olds in communities that have prekindergarten programs, thereby subverting the intent of the program.

1994-95. During the legislative interim, the Texas Board of Regulatory Services adopted stricter minimum standards for childcare facilities. The League lobbied in favor of the new standards, contacting board members to urge their support. Unfortunately, the victory was short-lived. The 74th Legislature rolled back key provisions of the new standards, including child/adult ratios, square footage requirements, and group sizes. Prior to future changes to the minimum standards, an independent cost/benefit economic impact study must be completed and sent to the legislature. But implementation of the rolled-back standards was delayed until September 1997. This delay gave advocates for young children, including the League, the opportunity to educate legislators about the components of quality childcare.

1997. Early in the session many of the recently strengthened Childcare Minimum Standards were lost to a compromise between childcare advocates and legislators, but a number of positive childcare bills were eventually passed. Childcare professionals and advocates will be able to use an appropriation of $34.9 million from general revenue funds to qualify for matching federal funds for childcare expenditures being spent, or that can be spent, in their communities. Other bills that passed provide childcare training to local workforce boards, establish pilot programs offering childcare training to welfare recipients, and mandate a childcare representative on local workforce boards. Family home providers are now required to register with the Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, pay annual fees, and obey state regulations. Other legislation provides guarantees for small and medium loans for childcare businesses and nonprofit centers that provide childcare services, establishes the Interagency Council on Early Childhood Intervention, and provides school-based childcare for latch key kids. The League produced an advocacy paper, "Quality Childcare for Texas Children: A Sound Investment in the Future."

1999. The LWVTX followed several childcare bills and the following measures were successfully passed. A childcare resource and referral network will be developed to provide a periodically updated listing of childcare providers, including hours of operation and cost, for each county. Professional childcare training scholarships and student loan repayment assistance will be offered to childcare workers. Additional training on shaken baby syndrome, sudden infant death syndrome, and early childhood brain development will be required for childcare providers. The LWVTX supported these bills in order to strengthen the quality or affordability of childcare in Texas.

2001. The focus of the LWVTX and other child advocates was on adequate funding to ensure that no children in working poor families are removed from childcare in the next biennium. There was a slight increase in funding for childcare, but it doesn't appear to be sufficient. Only through the reallocation of some unexpended federal Childcare Development Funds was the state's waiting list of approximately 40,000 children as of January 1, 2001, reduced.

2003. During the 78th Session, quality initiatives for childcare services were reduced through budget cuts. However, legislation passed which requires coordination of early childhood programs and establishes two groups to address the issue of quality early care programs. Even though the need for childcare continues to expand, due to the state budget shortfall, fewer children will receive subsidized childcare in 2004-5. The newly organized Texas Early Childhood Education Coalition, composed of childcare advocates, holds promise for successful future collective action.

2005. Two of the childcare bills that the LWVTX supported were signed into law. Approximately 50 early care and education bills were filed this session. SB 23 expands the Texas Early Education Model (TEEM), an integrated model of service delivery of early care and education programs (prekindergarten, childcare, Head Start) to increase full day, full-year quality preschool services. HB 2808 contained an amendment that provided for the appointment of a blue-ribbon commission to study early childhood education and development resource needs, financing options to secure adequate funding, as well as identifying barriers to the integration of preschool delivery systems.

Although the Legislative Budget Board, not a blue-ribbon commission, is designated to conduct the study in HB 2808, it does provide an opportunity for advocates to work with leadership on the Legislative Budget Board during the interim. The Legislative Budget Board will conduct a performance review and develop a report to:

- Study the resource needs of high-quality early childhood care and education programs.
- Recommend options for additional funding.
- Develop a plan to implement in phases, full-day preschool programs for at-risk children and to expand the eligibility for early care and education programs.

Promoting quality initiatives and improving access to preschool programs remain as goals on the unfinished League childcare agenda.

2007. Mixed results were accomplished by the 80th Legislature with emphasis on state oversight of childcare facilities and staff. Additional funding for residential (foster care) licensing was obtained, but no new funding for day care licensing. Proposed cuts to public prekindergarten programs were also avoided.

SB 50 (Zaffarini), a comprehensive, cooperative and interdisciplinary approach to improve all facets of childcare, prekindergarten and training of early childhood professionals; stalled in the House and did not pass. However funding for many of the provisions in SB 50 was included in the budget: prekindergarten services through the Texas Early Education Model, improve reimbursement rates paid to childcare participants in Texas Rising Star Certification Program, and funding towards creation of regional development partnership projects to improve the recruitment, retention, and quality of professionals working with young children. A portion of the bill that required school districts to report Texas Primary Reading Inventory scores in the school readiness certification system to the State Center for Early Childhood Development was amended onto SB 1871 (Zaffarini) which passed.

SB 758 (Nelson) allows children in the foster care system eligibility for prekindergarten, ensuring that children who have been sexually abused, physically assaulted, and/or neglected have a leg up before kindergarten, and to remain eligible for public prekindergarten after leaving foster care. HB 199 (Madden) addresses the critical first year of a child's life by establishing a residential infant and parenting program for mothers in prison.

The Texas Workforce Commission adopted new background check rules for relatives who are compensated by the state for providing childcare in the home. HB 1385 (Villeareal) created a separate level of regulation for small businesses that offer childcare on their premises for employees. This bill also included exemptions from childcare regulation to some rural private schools and religious education programs.

2009. Update of the program title from Childcare to Early Childhood was approved by the LWVTX Board of Directors to help better describe the topics in this area of advocacy. The early education movement in Texas this year has grown to be so strong that its only critics are those who opposed any public investment, no matter how solid the research. Since many bills filed for have to do with early childhood education we also act under the LWVUS position on Early Intervention for Children at Risk, adopted in 1994. See the section on National Program action at the end of this publication for action under this position.

Also SB 572 (Shapiro), "Jacob's Law," mandates 2 hours of annual training hours specifically related to the safe transport of children under the age of nine; SB 1646 (Van de Putte) establishes a Council on Children and Families to identify methods to ensure children and youth receive appropriate assessment, diagnoses, and intervention services; HB 136 (Villarreal) requires school districts to notify parents of prekindergarten eligibility; HB 1240 (Villarreal) requires infant care information to be provided to parents.

Following the legislative session, Texas Childcare Licensing Division initiated a review of the current minimum standards for center-based and home-based day care operations. The review process will further evaluate childcare licensing regulations, addressing expired legislative initiatives, regarding the training provider qualifications and minimum training hour changes for childcare employees/operators facilities.

2011. Ten out of 23 bills supported by the LWVTX were signed into law, with eight taking effect September 1, 2011. Legislation focused on safety and staff training, specifically increasing childcare provider training hours, specifying qualifications for those providing childcare training, and allowing the Texas Rising Star childcare centers to use comptroller purchasing discount programs. Licensed childcare homes will also receive additional fire safety inspections annually by local government, with other safety violations reported directly to childcare licensing. Licensure improvements and government-sponsored databases will provide data indicating childcare providers who meet minimum standards. Those centers meeting higher quality rating systems standards will also be identifiable for the first time from a state website. (See Child Health Insurance Program under Health Care for Those of Lesser Means.)

2013. Seventeen of the 44 bills were signed into law with only $40 million earmarked specifically for supplemental prekindergarten funding. With nearly $300 million cut from prekindergarten programs during the 82nd Legislative Session, successful bills were low fiscal impact and dealt with early childhood program quality, earlier identification of children with disabilities, Early Childhood Intervention caseload growth, and childcare regulation enforcement concentrating on child health and safety of all children.

The advocacy goals since 2005 for quality initiatives and improving access to preschool programs were largely accomplished this session with the success of HB 376 (Strama et al.), SB 50 (Zaffirini) and SB 430 (Nelson). HB 376 prioritized quality components in the Texas Workforce Commission childcare subsidy system with quality programs receiving additional and incremental reimbursement rates. It also provided technical assistance to improve childcare centers, required childcare quality initiatives for local workforce development boards, and created the establishment of an appointed Texas Rising Star Program Review Work Group to continuously improve the quality of education/care for children on Texas Workforce Commission childcare subsidies. HB 376 was the result of a statewide work group collaboration, with the LWVTX participating, spending 4 years to create legislation prioritizing quality care for children on federally-funded Texas Workforce Commission childcare subsidies and resolving the extremely low reimbursement rates providers receive.

SB 50 expanded the composition of the Texas Children's Policy Council adding representation for at-risk and special needs children. SB 430 requires the Department of Family and Protective Services to verify the unavailability of community day care before day-care assistance or services are specified to be provided by foster parents.

The successful Texas Early Childhood Education Coalition consolidated with Texans Care for Children to better serve advocates on priority and crossover issues. Texas early childhood program funding continues to be a concern; local entities are creatively funding pilot projects to gain increased child access to local prekindergarten programs.

2015. Only four of 52 filed bills were signed into law this session with three focusing on childcare records/inspection transparency and one on prekindergarten. With prekindergarten identified as one of the governor's emergency legislative issues, HB 4 was earmarked the governor's prekindergarten bill. It passed providing a small bump in funding for public school prekindergarten programs that meet new requirements. It does not include class size limits or other quality provisions, but it takes a first step that future legislatures can build on. HB 4 provides an additional $130 million via grants for the 2016-17 biennium for high quality prekindergarten programs to currently eligible 4-year-old students without explicitly funding or requiring full-day programs. HB 4 does change the Education Code requiring the Texas Education Agency or school districts to do the following:

- Attempt to maintain a ratio of not less than one teacher or one teacher's aide for each 11 students.
- Prekindergarten teachers are certified teachers and have a Child Development Associates Degree or certain other additional early childhood qualifications.
- The Texas Education Agency Commissioner to develop a prekindergarten teacher training course
- Permit partnerships between school districts and private providers.
- High-quality prekindergarten programs measure the progress of students in meeting recommended learning outcomes.
- Opt into the new high-quality programs to create family engagement plans.
- High-quality programs use a curriculum that meets the Texas Education Agency Prekindergarten Guidelines.
- Report to the Texas Education Agency class sizes, teaching ratios, the type and results of assessments used, and the curriculum used for all district prekindergarten programs.

The Early Childhood Intervention program has experienced growth in the proportion of enrolled children who have more complex needs, such as a medical diagnosis or a delay in multiple areas. Much of this change stems from budget cuts in 2011, which led the Department of Assistive and Rehabilitative Services (DARS) to narrow the eligibility criteria for Early Childhood Intervention and keep children with less acute needs out of the program. The Department of Assistive and Rehabilitative Services requested $14 million in additional General Revenue for the 2016-17 biennium. The Legislature opted to cut pediatric therapy service rates and partially fund this budget request with $3.8 million in general revenue funding and $5.9 million in all funds (a combination of state and federal funding). This funding was estimated to allow the program to provide an average of 2.75 monthly service hours, rather than the 2.78 that the Department of Assistive and Rehabilitative Services hoped to reach by 2016 and the 2.88 it hoped to reach by 2017. This represents a $2.5 million decrease in all funds from expenditures during the 2014-15 biennium, despite an anticipated increase in the number of children served and hours of service provided. The Early Childhood Intervention program is expected to serve a monthly average of 26,753 children in 2016 and 27,170 in 2017. Another unknown is the state agency consolidation impact of transferring the Department of Assistive and Rehabilitative Services functions to the Health and Human Services Commission.

2017. Numerous cross-agency bills were proposed with only three bills overcoming political stalemate: (a) HB 2039 created an early childhood teacher certification to teach students prekindergarten through Grade 3. (b) HB 674 limits out-of-school suspensions for students in grades prekindergarten through 2^{nd} grade and permits school districts to implement positive behavior management strategies. (c) HB 357 expands prekindergarten eligibility to include children of seriously injured or fallen first responders.

The legislature cut appropriations for prekindergarten, eliminating the funding for the high-quality 2015 grant program. Instead, legislators passed a budget rider simply directing all school districts to comply with the grant program quality standards using a portion of the Foundation School Program kindergarten entitlement, totaling $236 million statewide for a high-quality prekindergarten program. Educators recognize the need for high standards, but the enforceability of the rider is in question. The best way to drive improvements is through high standards coupled with additional funding to support additional district investments in quality teachers, full-day options, reduced class size, or other improvements. And legislators failed to improve:

- Transitional Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) services.
- Nutrition standards in childcare.
- A review of the Texas Workforce Commission subsidized childcare program.
- A staff/child ratio and group size incident reporting of licenses childcare study.
- Licensed before- and after-school programs promoting healthy eating and physical activity.
- A task force to coordinate the multiple agency study of parent engagement/education programs provided.

2019. See Early Intervention for Children At Risk. The focus is on child health bills.

D. Domestic Violence

1985, 1986, 1997, 2008 (See also LWVUS position "Violence Prevention" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports adequately funded state and local programs that work to eliminate the incidence of domestic violence and to alleviate its effects.

The League also supports appropriate penalties for offenders, easy access to protective orders, improved enforcement and administrative procedures for criminal justice professionals who deal with domestic violence, financial compensation to victims, and improved accessibility to services dealing with domestic violence. The League supports state funding for seed money, capital funds, and operating costs for the following:

- Local and regional residential centers for victims.
- Nonresidential support services.
- Counseling programs for all affected members of the family or household.
- Mandatory treatment and counseling programs for offenders to correct abusive behavior.

- Mandatory specialized training for peace officers, prosecutors, judges and court personnel, and parole and probation officers.
- Expanded training in police academies to deal with domestic violence.
- Public information about domestic violence.

In order to provide appropriate penalties for domestic violence offenders, the League supports:

- Enhanced enforcement of present assault statutes and imposition of penalties intended by the law.
- Penalties for injury to any victim of domestic violence equivalent to the penalties for injury to a child or an elderly person.
- Adoption by prosecutors of a "no drop" policy so that a victim's request for dismissal will be denied if charges have already been filed.
- Criminal prosecution of those who violate temporary restraining orders in domestic violence cases.

The League supports efforts to make it easy for domestic violence victims to obtain protective orders by:

- Requiring that prosecuting attorneys file all applications for protective orders upon receipt.
- Providing applications and easy-to-follow instructions for filing protective orders without representation by an attorney.

To enable criminal justice professionals to deal effectively with domestic violence cases, the League supports:

- Requiring specialized training for police officers, prosecutors, judges and court personnel, and parole and probation officers.
- Establishing crisis or domestic violence teams.
- Mandating arrest without a warrant when there is probable cause.
- Establishing and providing adequate funding for a central Protective Orders Registry. The League supports mandatory specialized treatment and counseling of abusers to correct their behavior.

To work to eliminate the incidence of domestic violence and to make services more accessible to victims, the League supports the use of financial compensation, including payment by abusers for medical and legal expenses, counseling, and living expenses incurred by victims as a result of abuse.

Explanation: Domestic Violence

Delegates at Convention 1983 chose domestic violence for statewide study, and members adopted a position regarding domestic violence in 1985. The first domestic violence position called for adequate state and local funding for programs to reduce the incidence of domestic violence and alleviate its effects. Because the League position was limited to support of adequate funding, the LWVTX advocates were unable to act on domestic violence bills that went beyond funding during the 1985 session. To remedy that situation, a second domestic violence study focusing on the legal system was selected by delegates at Convention 1985. The current, expanded domestic violence position statement was adopted in June 1986.

As a result of legislation enacted in 1995, the 1994-97 Periodic Program Review Committee eliminated several provisions dealing with protective orders and added one concerning creation of, and funding for, a central Protective Orders Registry. Convention 2006 recommended that the position should not read "reduce" domestic violence, but "eliminate" it. Revised wording was put forward as an item of concurrence in Program Planning, fall 2007, agreed to unanimously, and adopted by the state board in January 2008.

History: Domestic Violence

1987-89. In the 1987 and 1989 Legislative Sessions, the LWVTX supported successful bills to reduce the cost and improve the accessibility of protective orders to victims of family violence and to tighten their enforcement. In the 1989 Session, League efforts included strong support for a successful omnibus protective order bill and a bill providing for the incremental upgrading of offense classification and punishment for subsequently occurring acts of domestic violence. Funding was secured with passage of Lt. Governor Hobby's Anti-Crime Plan.

1991-93. The LWVTX supported its domestic violence position through membership in the Texas Council on Family Violence. An important achievement of the 1993 Session was passage of the so-called "stalking" bill that provides a means for victims to report an individual's harassment before actually experiencing physical injury, thus giving the law enforcement system the ability to protect potential victims of domestic violence.

1995. With League support, the 74th Session of the Texas Legislature amended the Code of Penal Procedure to create a legal exception to the spousal adverse testimony privilege. The Senate Interim Committee on Domestic Violence had strongly recommended creation of the exception to prevent perpetrators of family violence from hiding behind the shield of "spousal privilege," thus escaping successful prosecution and conviction. Another significant measure enacted during this session created a statewide central registry for protective orders through the Texas Department of Public Safety.

1997. A strengthened anti-stalking bill was passed early in the session, followed by several proactive bills to assist survivors of domestic violence. One measure authorizes the Department of Human Services to develop procedures to assist family violence survivors who are welfare recipients, while another bill will use a small increase in court-filing fees to provide basic legal services to the indigent, many of whom are battered women and children. Two bills that would have made it more difficult for women to escape abusive marriages were defeated. A bill that would have authorized the creation and distribution to all public schools of an antiviolence curriculum did not get out of committee.

1999. Advocates scored significant victories during the 76th Legislature. There were significant increases in appropriations to the Department of Human Services Family Violence Program and to Battering Intervention and Prevention Programs. Legislation passed making it more difficult for batterers to obtain custody and/or visitation of children.

2001. The League supported a bill, signed by the governor, which provides that as of September 1, 2001, it is illegal in Texas for those under final protective order for family violence and those convicted of family violence crimes to possess guns.

2019. The 86th Legislative Session passed several bills which LWVTX supported to assist law enforcement with prosecution of domestic violence and sexual assault cases. The Lavina Masters Act mandates that rape kits must be tested at a lab within 90 days after it receives the evidence. If the evidence has not been tested by a forensic lab, the statute of limitations (the timeframe in which a case must be presented to a Grand Jury) for sexual assault cases is tolled. Rape kits cannot be destroyed by the state for 40 years after receipt or until the statute of limitations runs, whichever is later. And Rachel's Law, allows district attorneys to file continuous family violence charges against an offender if the act takes place in more than one county.

Lawmakers gave law enforcement more tools to investigate domestic violence cases. The passage of S.B. 586 increases mandatory law enforcement training hours regarding sexual assault, child abuse and family violence to ensure that the training includes the use of best practices and trauma-informed techniques to effectively recognize, document, and investigate these types of cases.

Texas will now have a Protective Order Registry. This centralized internet-based registry will track applications for protective orders and protective orders issued in this state. A portion of the registry will also be set up for restricted use by law enforcement to help protect victims of domestic violence. The public will be able to access limited information about issued protective orders at no cost.

Financial abuse—a previously overlooked form of domestic violence--was proactively addressed in this session. Two bills that LWVTX supported through testimony and Action Alerts will now be law. S.B. 234 gives victims of family violence a right to vacate and avoid residential lease liability while S.B. 2697 is the first law to address coercive debt, providing a legal remedy for persons victimized by financial crimes (identity theft, credit card fraud, etc.).

2021. The high note on the domestic violence issue during the 87th legislative session was an increase in funding for services to assist survivors of domestic violence. These funds will help reduce capacity in shelters and provide more options for legal assistance and housing. On the legal front, survivors did not see transformative victories in this session. Although women and their protection were major talking points for legislation regarding guns, few bills actually passed to help survivors.

One bill that did pass is SB 798. LWVTX supported this bill which was signed by the Governor and will take effect September 1, 2021. Now survivors of domestic violence and dating violence as well as children of a survivor can obtain a certified copy of a birth certificate and state-issued ID at no cost. While this new law seems minor, it will have a positive impact on survivors who are often handicapped by limited financial resources. Identification is crucial for survivors of domestic violence to start their new lives outside of shelters.

LWVTX continues to support all efforts to prevent domestic abuse in dating relationships from legally obtaining firearms (the "Boyfriend Loophole"). Although assigned committees, both SB 283 and HB 210 (identical bills) were never scheduled for public hearing.

This legislative session unfortunately denied the opportunity through HCR 59 for a joint interim study regarding domestic violence. The resolution supported by LWVTX outlined the effects of domestic violence on adults in all areas of their lives as well as the damage caused to children who are directly victimized or witness domestic violence. HCR 59 was considered in public hearing but left pending in committee.

E. Equal Opportunity/Income Assistance

1970, 1995, 2020 (See also Equality of Opportunity under National Program.)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports legislation and administrative action to achieve equal rights for all persons, regardless of their race, color, gender, gender identity, gender expression, religion, national origin, age, sexual orientation, veteran and military status, familial status, or disability, to combat discrimination and poverty, and to provide equal access to housing, employment, and quality education in Texas.

Specific measures that we support include:

- Access for all persons to free public education that provides equal opportunity for all.
- Removal of the ceiling on income assistance (welfare) spending from the state constitution.
- Provision by the state of supportive services, such as health care, childcare, family planning, legal aid, and job training for income assistance (welfare) recipients.
- An effective human relations commission for Texas that includes such features as:
 - Permanent independent status.
 - o Investigative and legal enforcement powers that go beyond the conciliation process.
 - An adequate budget funded independently of the governor's office.
 - Equitable representation of racial, religious, and ethnic groups.
 - An adequately sized staff trained in human relations work.

Explanation: Equal Opportunity/Income Assistance

In the fall of 1970, local Leagues in Texas studied income assistance under a national program item, with the state League adding two consensus questions to the list of national consensus questions. The basis for action at the state level was thus increased by the resulting positions on state income assistance and state supportive services.

League members have supported establishment of a human relations commission for many years and, in 1970, identified those elements that comprise an effective commission. League members believe that such a commission should publicize its existence and help communities form their own commissions. Other programs which members support include these: enforcement of fair housing laws, enforcement of minimum building codes, expansion of vocational education opportunities, expansion of counseling services, and combating discrimination in employment. The legislature created the Texas Human Rights Commission in 1983. However, this commission currently addresses only employment discrimination, not the other program needs identified in our position.

This position underwent Periodic Program Review in the 1993-95 biennium. Several wording changes that update the statement to reflect changed policies and circumstances were suggested by the Periodic Program Review Committee and approved by delegates at Convention 1995. The updated position is printed above.

Our position was amended by delegates to Convention 2020 to enlarge and explain the definition of those who deserve equal rights in Texas. Wording from the LWVUS position was used as a guide.

History: Equal Opportunity/Income Assistance

1980s. The League has been very active in the support of adequate benefit levels for the Texas Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program, described previously in the state program section on Equal Opportunity/Income Assistance.

1983. The League opposed state workfare legislation that would have required work for Aid to Families with Dependent Children adult recipients. The proposed bills did not clearly define nor fund training, education, work opportunities, or essential support services such as childcare, medical care, or transportation for participants.

1987. The state League testified that state funding for the administration of the Texas Food Stamp Program was inadequate to serve those persons eligible for food stamps and that federal and state requirements for the processing and issuing of food stamps were not being met in many areas of the state. In subsequent sessions, the LWVTX has worked with the People First! Coalition to increase state funding for human service programs mandated by the federal government.

1971-87. During this period, the League focused on the removal of Texas constitutional limits on state spending for income assistance and on raising Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) benefits. Because attempts to remove the ceiling on income assistance benefits were repeatedly defeated, the League supported the politically feasible action of raising the constitutional ceiling. There was both legislative and public support for a ceiling of 1% of the annual state budget, and the 1982 ballot measure designating that ceiling was approved by the voters. Raising AFDC grants remained a legislative priority in 1985 as the League lobbied for a benefit of $60 or more per AFDC recipient. The AFDC benefit was raised from $53 to $57 per month for the 1985-87 biennium.

1985. During the 1985 Texas Legislative Session, the LWVTX lobbied in support of measures that would have established state studies in the area of comparable worth and pay equity as a means of eliminating sex-based wage discrimination and alleviating the growing feminization of poverty. The League lobbied for an interim legislative study of affordable housing in Texas and supported legislation which would allow the Texas Department of Human Services to collect information on teenage pregnancy in Texas and to serve as a clearinghouse for such data.

1987-93. The state fiscal crisis and the major threat of budget cuts caused the League and other human services advocates to work in the 70th Legislature to maintain the level of services in the 1987-89 biennium rather than lobbying for much needed increases. The LWVTX joined the statewide coalition People First! that successfully urged the legislature to address the basic needs of people first in state budget priorities, and that supported state revenue restructure and enhancement to provide adequate funding for essential state services. In the 1989, 1991, and 1993 Sessions the League again worked with People First! to maintain funding levels.

1995. A bill restructuring welfare in Texas was signed into law. Some of its provisions include: a needs assessment must be done for all Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) recipients; support services such as education, child care, and transportation assistance will be provided subject to availability of funds; a recipient must be a U.S. citizen or legal immigrant and a citizen of the state; and a recipient must sign a responsibility agreement that includes cooperating in efforts to check the child's paternity, taking the child for regular checkups and immunizations, and education/work agreements among other commitments.

1999. Legislative activity continued to deal with welfare reform in Texas. The LWVTX actively lobbied to protect support services to Texans receiving Temporary Aid for Needy Families (TANF). Some successes were legislation that allows (a) TANF recipients to keep more of their earned income, (b) removes barriers to finding and keeping jobs, and (c) funds additional child care for low-income families. A success was preventing the monthly TANF benefit from being reduced; it will remain at 17% of the federal poverty level.

2001. The League goal during this legislative session was to support bills that would remove many of the barriers in the present system for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families and obtaining food stamps. Results were mixed. Successful legislation will provide hardship exceptions for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families time limits, phone application and recertification for food stamps, a required interagency plan for coordinated services for hard-to-employ clients, and aid for distribution of fresh produce from farmers to food banks. The governor vetoed bills that would have extended transitional services for certain Temporary Assistance for Needy Families clients and another that would have eased work requirements for certain clients. We have expressed concern that the current budgetary practice of using Temporary Assistance for Needy Families funds for other state needs will continue to put pressure on the program designed to effectively meet the needs of needy families, especially in welfare-to-work services.

2002-03. During the interim between the 77th and 78th Legislature, the Sunset Advisory Commission reviewed the operations of the Texas Workforce Commission, that was established in 1995 during welfare restructuring to merge all employment and training programs into a single, locally-controlled workforce system. The Sunset Commission made several recommendations to make the Texas Workforce Commission more accountable. The LWVTX submitted comments on particular recommendations, stating that the Texas Workforce Commission would benefit from more input from the public, local workforce boards, and childcare experts before formulating policies to be carried out by local workforce boards. The general intent of accountability and additional input for the Texas Workforce Commission was adopted in the final legislation.

Budget cuts were the name of the game in the legislative session. The number of families eligible for Temporary Aid to Needy Families will be reduced by lowering the asset test, lowering the vehicle value limit, and enforcing full termination of assistance to a family for any infraction of the Personal Responsibility Agreement. Budget priorities indicated that lawmakers were more interested in reducing numbers of recipients, rather than removing barriers to employment.

2005. Priority: Support for work development programs, including training for living wage jobs. Unfortunately, no legislation was passed out of committee to improve training for higher wage jobs. The Skills Development Fund, the Texas Workforce training program, was actually cut by nearly 60%. Funds were shifted to the Texas Enterprise Fund, a program to give incentives to businesses moving to Texas.

2017. Though equal opportunity wasn't a primary focus of the LWVTX this session, the rest of the nation was watching closely to see what would happen in regard to "lavatory" legislation and all the bathroom bills that had been filed. It's a mixed bag of the good, the bad, and the ugly.

The good: A record-setting 40 pro-lesbian-gay-bisexual-transgender-queer (LGBTQ) bills were filed by legislators this session. Even better: Three of them were actually voted out of committee but died in Calendar Committee.

- HB 1848: Although marriage equality is legal in the U.S., it is still technically illegal to engage in homosexual conduct in Texas. HB 1848 sought to repeal that.
- HB 225: Would have ensured that LGBTQ Texans were not discriminated against in employment.
- HB 192: Nondiscrimination for LGBTQ Texans in housing.
- Still, it is historic insofar as Texas has never passed a pro-LGBTQ bill this far in the process.

The bad: Twenty-four anti-LGBTQ bills were filed this session, more than any state legislature in the history of the U.S. Twenty-three of them either died or failed. But one (HB 3859) was signed into law by Governor Abbott.

HB 3859 allows child welfare agencies to discriminate against follow Texans based on "sincerely held religious beliefs." This hurts our foster care system because gay couples could be denied the ability to adopt a child. Gay or transgender children could be denied important child welfare services due to their sexual orientation or gender identity. Children who have been victims of sexual assault may also be denied emergency contraception, all in the name of religious refusal. Supporters of the bill claimed that any person who is denied services by a religious organization could still be served by a state agency, but the bill lays out no clear direction in how to track who is being left behind and what their status is. And considering that LGBTQ youth experience abuse and homelessness at disproportionately higher rates than their straight or cisgender peers, the LWVTX is extremely concerned about their access to safe and supportive care.

Special session. We helped defeat five attempts in the special session that would have explicitly discriminated against LGBTQ Texans. Knowing that Governor Abbott made privacy (code for transgender bathroom bills) one of his legislative priorities during the special session made it that much more difficult to defeat, but together we did defeat all five bills: SB 3, SB 6, SB 91, HB 46, and HB 1362, plus an unsuccessful last ditch effort by some legislators to add bathroom language to HB 21, a school finance bill.

2019. Our major activity this session began with our opposition to SB 15 (Creighton). This bill would prohibit cities and counties from requiring certain benefits and protections for employees. This relates to any form of employment leave (such as paid sick leave), hiring practices, employment benefits or other terms of employment. This bill would also gut non-discrimination ordinances that now protect more than six million Texans in most major Texas cities. Currently Austin, Dallas, El Paso, Ft. Worth, Plano, and San Antonio have municipal non-discrimination ordinances, and several other cities and counties have such policies for city workers and contractors. We issued an Action Alert (245 responses) and testified against the bill and the bill died in the Senate.

Then the author resubmitted it as four bills, SB 2485, 2486, 2487, and 2488, hoping parts of the bill would pass. Again we issued an Action Alert, "Fight Anti-Local Control Bills," and got 491 responses. All four bills passed the Senate but died in House Calendars.

The other bill we fought was SB 17, the "License to Discriminate" bill (Bettencourt), which said a holder of a state professional license could deny services on the basis of "sincerely held religious beliefs (except medical professionals). We testified against it and issued an Action Alert which got 245 responses. The bill passed the Senate but died without a hearing in House State Affairs.

F. Health Care for Those of Lesser Means/Child Health Care

 $1986, 1995, 2009, 2010 \;\; (See \; also \; LWVUS \; position \; \text{``Health Care''} \; in \; \textit{Impact On Issues})$

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports a basic level of health care for the medically indigent.

The League believes that all persons whose incomes fall below the federal poverty guidelines are most at risk of medical indigence and should be eligible for basic health care services. Special attention should be given to children of low-income families and to persons of low income who are elderly, pregnant, or mentally ill.

It is the responsibility of individuals to pay for their own health care to the best of their ability. For those unable to pay, health care services and programs for the medically indigent are the responsibility of various levels of government.

The League of Women Voters of Texas believes the following services constitute the basic level of health care for the medically indigent:

- Maternal and child care
- Emergency care
- Primary care
- Preventive care
- Care for the mentally ill
- Care for catastrophic illness
- Nutrition
- Substance abuse treatment
- Health education
- Long-term care
- Care for persons with disabilities

The League believes that all health care facilities, both public and private, have a responsibility to serve the medically indigent and should be accessible to those in need.

To improve health outcomes in the state of Texas, the League of Women Voters of Texas believes that Medicaid expansion, as permitted under the Affordable Care Act of 2010, should be approved and implemented by the state of Texas.

Explanation: Health Care for Those of Lesser Means/Child Health Care

League delegates to Convention 1985 adopted a study of Health Care for the Medically Indigent, which focused on eligibility, providers, funding, services, alternatives, and the role of state government. The LWVUS health care position, adopted in 1993, also calls for a basic level of quality health care that is affordable to all residents. (For more information on the LWVUS Health Care position and on relevant LWVTX advocacy efforts, see Social Policy section of National Program at the end of this publication.

The Health Care for the Medically Indigent position was reviewed during the 1993-95 Periodic Program Review process. The Periodic Program Review Committee recommended an editorial change and a substantive change in wording; the recommended substantive change was deletion of a phrase that listed several government levels as being responsible for indigent health care services. The committee rationale was that the listing was not all-inclusive and that the phrase, "various levels of government," without specifying which levels, would give Leagues more options for local advocacy efforts. The Periodic Program Review Committee recommendations were approved, and the updated position is printed above.

This position was amended to add a statement supporting Medicaid expansion in Texas, and was passed unanimously by delegates to LWVTX Convention 2020.

History: Health Care for Those of Lesser Means/Child Health Care

1980s. During the 70th Legislature, a budget crisis meant no additional funding for health care programs. The League supported continuation of current levels of state funding passed in 1985.

1988-89. Two active interim committees examined the expansion of Medicaid and alternative funding methods for health care. In July 1988, the board of the Texas Department of Human Services approved expansion of Medicaid coverage to pregnant women and to children up to age 2 years who are eligible. Important gains for expansion of Medicaid were realized during the 71st Legislature in 1989. Because Medicaid for pregnant women was no longer tied to Aid for Dependent Children (AFDC) guidelines, up to 22,000 pregnant women and 50,000 more children became eligible for health care benefits under Medicaid. Income eligibility for this special population was set at 130% of the federal poverty guideline. The income eligibility cap for nursing home care was raised to the maximum federal level, allowing Medicaid benefits that increase access to care for a greater number of elderly, disabled persons.

1990-92. The League monitored the Governor's Health Care Policy Task Force and presented written testimony in support of major portions of the draft recommendations. The final report was released in January 1993, calling for universal access to health care and, as a first step toward that goal, creation of health care coverage for all children and pregnant women.

1993. In 1993, following adoption of the LWVUS position, health care was selected as a priority issue for the 73rd Legislative Session. An advocacy paper, "Health Care in Texas: Condition: Critical; Rx: Major Surgery," was written and distributed to all House and Senate members and to local Leagues throughout the state. According to the advocacy paper, the goals for the LWVTX in the session were to establish a health care system that covered all pregnant women, create an immunization program that pays for vaccine for all children whose families cannot afford this care, and to reform health insurance by making it available to everyone at a reasonable cost; thus creating a uniform, mandatory package of basic health care benefits, and eliminating deductibles and copayments for a variety of preventive health screenings.

League testimony was delivered in both houses supporting the creation of an immunization program that met our established goal. Several variations of the bill were filed and ultimately combined. In cooperation with other organizations, the League worked successfully behind the scenes to remove language from the bill that was onerous and punitive to poor children and their families. The bill was signed into law at a ceremony attended by League representatives.

The League also worked in support of a bill that passed addressing small employer access to health insurance by increasing the availability of insurance to employers of 3 to 50 people. While the measure calls for voluntary employer participation, several factors may encourage small employers to join the system. The law allows for the creation of purchasing cooperatives, establishes the nonprofit Texas Health Benefits Purchasing Cooperative, requires insurers to use a modified community rating rather than an experience rating system, and stipulates a basic package of health care services that must be offered to employers who select the plan. Insurance carriers electing to offer the benefit plans set forth in the legislation must agree to accept all employers regardless of prior claim experience and to renew the employer's health benefit plan.

The League supported successful legislation aimed at expanding health services in medically underserved areas. Support was also given to measures that failed, including creation of a cost containment council and limitations on a physician's ability to refer patients to a facility in which the physician or a family member has a significant ownership interest.

1995. The LWVTX published an advocacy paper, "Medicaid Reform: To Solve a Crisis," which was circulated to legislators and other interested officials, groups, and individuals. The paper called for implementation of the following cost-saving steps to ensure the availability of health services for the indigent: streamlining of administrative processes, emphasis on preventative and primary care, expansion of managed care options for Medicaid recipients, and creation of incentives for expansion of community services by public and private providers.

The 74th Legislature enacted legislation that dramatically alters how the state delivers and funds medical care to the indigent. In effect, the Medicaid program has been converted into a managed health care system that places new emphasis on prevention. The legislation also mandates pooling local and state health care monies used to provide indigent health care in order to maximize access to federal matching funds.

1997. Five League-supported bills on health care were signed into law. The Texas Healthy Kids Corporation will provide low-cost health insurance for children of parents who cannot afford insurance but make too much money to qualify for Medicaid. Another bill directs the Texas Department of Health to provide rules for lead abatement, a serious health hazard faced disproportionately by children in the lower socioeconomic level, while an omnibus nursing home act established procedures and penalties for noncompliance of existing laws and regulations. Legislation was enacted requiring health plans that provide maternity benefits to also include coverage of inpatient care for a mother and her newborn in a health care facility for a minimum of 48 hours, and, consistent with the League position on Medicaid reform, a new law provides increased penalties for Medicaid fraud.

1997-99. In the fall of 1997, following passage of enabling federal legislation, The LWVTX became actively involved in a coalition of child health advocacy groups calling for a Children's Health Insurance Program for Texas. Throughout the legislative interim, the coalition, including LWVTX representatives, worked with agency staff to help shape the legislation that was ultimately introduced. Named one of the priority issues for the LWVTX, the Children's Health Insurance Program received grassroots advocacy from local Leagues, including travel to the capitol for the Children's Health Insurance Program Advocacy Day. We achieved passage of all our goals: a health insurance plan that will provide primary and preventive care to low-income, uninsured children who are not eligible for Medicaid. The plan will maximize the use of federal matching dollars, provide family-friendly enrollment, provide appropriate benefits for children, and support working parents.

In addition to the Children's Health Insurance Program, health care in general was an active issue for the LWVTX. Nine League- supported bills on health care became effective September 1, 1999. School districts may establish school-based student health centers. Legislation was enacted that sets forth the standards and procedures for the delivery of indigent health care. Another bill provides for state assistance to counties that spend at least 10% of county general revenue to provide health care services to residents through a hospital. Permanent funds were established for certain public health items. The elderly should benefit from a bill that provides for required immunizations for nursing home residents. Consistent with the League position on Medicaid reform and cost containment, a bill streamlines the administration and delivery of federally funded Medicaid programs supporting long-term care, while another stipulates that contracts must be in effect for insurers to reimburse providers. Legislation directs state agencies to study and make strategic plans concerning the delivery of long-term care and other health services. While female genital mutilation was prohibited, the 75th Legislature did not add the budget line item for women's health for which the League had actively lobbied. The Campaign for Women's Health will regroup during the interim and work for a more favorable outcome in 2001.

2001. During the 77th session the LWVTX continued its active participation in the Children's Health Insurance Program coalition working towards simplification of the Medicaid application and recertification procedures to become comparable to those of the Children's Health Insurance Program. We were largely successful in obtaining more simplified forms and processes, phased-in continuous eligibility, age 6 to 19 years, by 2002, and 1-year continuous eligibility no later than June 2003. We were unable to obtain elimination of the assets test for Medicaid, although the extensive documentation formerly required has been dropped. In addition, the governor signed a bill requiring a pilot study and, if successful, a pilot project to allow portability of Medicaid benefits for migrant children. The governor vetoed a bill that would have allowed Texas to exercise its option under federal law to provide Medicaid benefits to otherwise-eligible legal immigrants after they have been in the U.S. for 5 years. It is not clear that there is adequate funding for either Medicaid or the Children's Health Insurance Program. Since Medicaid is an entitlement program, the legislature must fund any shortfalls. However, Children's Health Insurance Program is not an entitlement program and is already exploring options for restricting or reducing services if a budgetary shortfall materializes.

The League was also active in the area of women's health care. Medicaid can now cover uninsured women under the age of 65 who have breast cancer. However, the governor vetoed a bill for a Medicaid waiver for women's health and family planning. The waver would have saved the state $300 million over the next 4 years and provided family planning services and preventive health care to an additional one million uninsured Texas women. The legislature did not pass legislation that would have allowed application for a Medicaid waiver to provide for comprehensive health care for women.

2003. During the 78th Session the Medicaid Waiver failed again. A bill, which would have called for the state to apply for the Medicaid Waiver for Women's Health, was heard in House Human Services Committee and died in committee. The bill would have established a demonstration project through the application of an 1115 Medicaid Waiver to expand women's health care services for women 18 years and older with an income at or below 185% of the federal poverty level. During the appropriations process prenatal health care services were also reduced.

2007. Due to lots of hard work by members of the Children's Health Insurance Program coalition and by a number of committed legislators, HB 109 passed, restoring much of what had been lost in 2003. The bill is to be to be fully implemented by September 1, 2008. About the law:

- Section 1: Allows deduction of certain childcare expenses when determining if a family's income qualifies for the Children's Health Insurance Program.
- Section 2: Restores language from the original Children's Health Insurance Program law requiring a community-based outreach program, including contracts with community-based organizations.
- Section 3: Increases the asset limit authorized in 2003 for children and families at 150% to 200% of the federal poverty level from $5,000 to $10,000.
- Section 4: Requires that the Children's Health Insurance Program use some method to verify the reported incomes of Children's Health Insurance Program applicants.
- Section 5: Provided an eligibility period of 12 months for children in families with incomes at or below 185% of the federal poverty level. Children in families at 185% of the federal poverty level are to have their income reviewed every 6 months. The Department of Health and Human Services must notify parents at least 30 days prior to ending coverage if a child is found ineligible due to income reviews under one of the 6 month reviews.
- Section 6: The 90-day delay in coverage is eliminated to allow for uninsured children to be eligible for the Children's Health Insurance Program.

2009. The Community Based Alternatives program received additional $15 million ($3.7 million for FY 2010, $11.3 million for FY 2011) to fund an additional 430 slots by the end of FY 2010, and 861 slots by the end of FY 2011. In addition, $58.5 million all funds ($28.8 million for FY 2010, $29.7 for FY 2011) was appropriated to fund an $.80 per hour wage increase for attendants as a result of the July 2009 minimum wage increase. Also, the reimbursement rate for nursing homes was increased by 3%.

The Legislature wants the state to promote the importance of having health insurance and educate the public on purchasing and the availability of health insurance. They directed the Health and Human Services Commission to cost effectively process claims for all health care services by the same system. Also, they outlined streamlining initiatives in applying for Medicaid waiver programs and called for long-term care consumer information to be provided on the Internet.

2011. Children's Health Insurance Program. Much of the legislation impacting health care for the children of Texas was contained within the budget and a massive health efficiency bill. These measures changed and expanded multiple times during the regular and special sessions. The bill, as finally passed and signed, included beneficial provisions that could undermine the wellbeing of those qualifying for either Children's Medicaid or the Children's Health Insurance Program.

Budget discussions focused on proposed provider rate cuts of 10% to those delivering health care to Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program patients, in spite of Texas' already low reimbursement rates and recent cuts. In the end, payments to children's hospitals and primary care physicians treating children were spared the large cuts made to other hospitals and providers.

Multiple proposals targeting greater health care efficiency evolved into SB 7 (Nelson), which passed during the special session. On the positive side, SB 7 included strategies for improved quality of care provided to Children's Health Insurance Program and Medicaid recipients. It also called for shifting from the traditional system of payment for services to payment rewarding better health outcomes. Negatively, the final bill carried provisions designed to give the State of Texas more control over health care programs. A health care compact, if ultimately approved by the U.S. Congress, would turn all federal health funding coming to Texas for Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program, as well as Medicare and other programs, into a single large block grant to the state. A waiver of federal law would radically restructure Medicaid in the state. If either the block grant or the waiver were to take effect, children and other vulnerable populations would lose much in the way of protection currently guaranteed under federal law.

Most individual bills designed to either improve or restrict Children's Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program died in the regular session. Unfortunately, an attempt to extend Children's Medicaid eligibility to a 12-month continuous period, thus allowing many qualified children to retain access to health insurance, made little headway.

Other issues. With a $27 billion shortfall, Medicaid and education were big targets for cuts in the 82nd Legislative Session. Maintaining existing reimbursement rates was a priority for many groups, including the League. Because of strong advocacy, Medicaid reimbursement rates for nursing homes and community based alternative care were maintained at 2010 rates. Hospice got a 2% cut. Everyone on a Medicaid waiver got his or her funding cut 10%. Direct health care will not be cut as it is deemed nonnegotiable. Negotiable expenses such as home modifications will make up the 10%. Providers got cuts in administration costs.

During the special session, "secession legislation" passed seeking a health care compact, a partnership with other states to take control of Medicaid and Medicare, and legislation asking the Obama administration for a waiver to operate Medicaid as Texas sees fit. Both are unlikely to happen under the Obama administration. Legislation passed to protect patient advocacy activities by nurses and certain other persons, providing an administrative penalty for denying right to advocate.

2013. The most significant health care considerations for the 83rd Legislature were related to implementation of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. Other measures concerning Children's Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program were focused mainly in three areas: expansion, efficiency, and funding.

Legislators filed only a few bills designed to expand access to publicly funded insurance for deserving children. Proposed measures called for opening the Children's Health Insurance Program to families with somewhat greater assets or increasing the time to a full year before families must reapply for Children's Medicaid. Expansion efforts all died without consideration by the full legislative body.

Massive bills intended to make health care delivery more efficient did become law. Some features of the bills could ultimately benefit children, such as extending managed care to a wider range of medical situations and providing incentives for quality care. Other features could have a negative impact, such as limitations on the criteria for expanding Medicaid eligibility.

Lawmakers rectified some of the deliberate underfunding of Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program from the previous session just in time to meet current needs. The budget for 2014-15 provided for an 11% increase in the number of children in Medicaid, but it projected a drop in the number of children in the Children's Health Insurance Program due to Affordable Care Act implementation. When adjusted for inflation and population growth, overall health-related funding (including immunizations, Children with Special Health Care Needs, education on tobacco and abstinence, and a number of other programs, in addition to Children's Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program, saw a per-child decrease.

2015. The most significant health care issue, Medicaid expansion, was completely ignored by the 84th Legislature. There was no consideration or deliberation on any Medicaid expansion laws in Texas.

The Appropriations Committee did have one meeting to consider the possible loss of the federal 1115 Waiver money. No actions were taken. The cost of uncompensated care in Texas is partially paid for by the Affordable Care Act 1115 Waiver. The 1115 Waiver was meant to be a temporary solution to uncompensated care while the Affordable Care Act was ramping up. Now the federal Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services is threatening to cut the 1115 waiver to encourage Texas to participate fully in the Affordable Care Act and allow more citizens access to health insurance.

Meanwhile the Children's Health Insurance Program continues to be an available insurance program for Texas. With the Affordable Care Act more children qualified for Medicaid. Rider 50 to the Texas budget was added at the last minute. The rider removed $350 million for therapy services for children with special health care needs.

2019. We have been following several important bills which could have improved access to health care services for women and children in Texas. Unfortunately, despite vigorous advocacy by individuals and organizations committed to maternal and child health, only one of these bills passed and was signed by the Governor.

Efforts were made this session to expand Medicaid coverage in Texas under the Affordable Care Act. This would have required an amendment to the Texas Constitution as well as enabling legislation. The House failed to pass the bill providing for the constitutional amendment, and the Senate failed to take up the issue.

Medicaid Medical Transportation (HB 25): This bill authorizes a pilot program to allow medical transportation program services to a child if the child is younger than 13 years of age and if the child's mother is: a recipient of Medicaid during a pregnancy; using medical transportation program services to travel to and from a covered health care service related to the pregnancy, including postpartum care; regardless of whether the child is also a recipient of Medicaid. Without this bill, a mother may not be able to take her newborn baby with her when she goes for post-partum care. Although this may seem like a small improvement, it would enable a mother to receive essential care to maintain her own health, and the mother's health is key to the well-being of the child. This bill was passed by both the House and Senate and was signed by Governor Abbott.

Bills Which Did Not Pass: The Texas Senate failed to take up the maternal health coverage bill (HB 744), which would have addressed the high maternal mortality rate in Texas by extending Medicaid coverage for pregnant women to 12 months post-partum. The Texas Senate also let the provisions of the Child Health Coverage bill (HB 342) die; these provisions were included as an amendment to SB 1105 and would have reduced the onerous administrative paperwork that is now required to keep a child on Medicaid for 12 months. A bill to provide contraception with parental consent for CHIP recipients (HB 800) and a bill to prevent insurance plans from switching enrollees off medications that are working (HB 2099) also died in Senate committees. Finally, the Texas House voted down an amendment to implement Medicaid expansion, and the Texas Senate did not discuss the issue.

Yes, this has been a disappointing year for children and pregnant women in Texas who need access to health care services. The legislative session is over, but the problem has not gone away. In the coming months, we will be watching for opportunities to improve access and care by other means. We will also be looking to 2021, our next opportunity to improve child health by legislative action.

G. Health Care System for Older Texans

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports a comprehensive health care system for older Texans that ensures a seamless continuum of quality care.

Access to health care should include:

- Statewide and local information and referral networks which provide clear, correct, and consistent information about publicly funded health care programs and eligibility requirements.
- Development of programs to provide adequate and affordable transportation for clients and health care providers.

Health care for older adults should include:

- Integration of health care services, including developing an individual health care plan and providing a continuum of services, such as health care screening, prevention services, acute care, long-term care, and hospice care.
- A variety of long-term care services and alternative housing options in sufficient quantities to provide the level of care appropriate for each individual.
- Options that include home and community-based services, in addition to institutional care.
- Programs that address limitations to access in rural and other medically underserved areas for dentistry, hearing and vision services, mental health services, and long-term care.
- Innovative programs that use waivers and blending of funds to customize services to fit individual and community needs.
- Access to prescription drugs which is not limited by the ability of an individual to pay for them.

Actions to achieve high quality health care should include:

- Adoption and strict enforcement of high standards for all long-term care services for older Texans.
- Programs to improve the training, pay, benefits, and retention of personnel engaged in planning, regulation, and delivery of care.
- Policies that promote training in geriatrics at all levels of medical and nursing education
- Coordination of benefits from Medicare, Medicaid, and other publicly funded programs in order to serve individuals who are eligible for more than one program.
- Sufficient funding to support comprehensive, high quality health care for older adults.

Explanation: Health Care System for Older Texans

Reflecting a widespread interest in issues surrounding health care, delegates to Convention 1999 approved the Continuum of Health Care for Older Adults study. Focused on health care options for older adults, the study examined existing laws and regulations relating to health care for older adults, a wide range of health care options for indigent and non indigent older adults at varying states in their lives, and accessibility to available health care options including the financial implications of these options. A study committee produced Facts & Issues: A Continuum of Care: Health Issues for Older Adult (2000), which was distributed to League members, public officials and agencies, and other interested groups and individuals. Consensus was reached in the fall of 2000, and the state board approved the new position in November of that year.

History: Health Care System for Older Texans

2001. The League followed a large number of bills related to long-term care, nursing homes, and related areas. Many of the bills passed and indicate that Texas is taking health care more seriously than in the past. Bills related to pharmaceuticals will allow more information about pharmaceutical assistance programs, bulk purchasing of prescription drugs, and a state prescription program for certain Medicare beneficiaries. Other bills would allow for dental services to some recipients of medical assistance, require health maintenance organizations to provide periodic health evaluations, establish a medical assistance buy-in pilot program for certain people with disabilities, and establish a program of all-inclusive care for the elderly. Other bills that passed will improve case management for Medicaid recipients and improve services through telemedicine.

Other bills that passed will improve health care in rural areas, further protect nursing home residents, and provide an opportunity for nursing homes to purchase liability insurance from the Texas Liability Insurance Underwriting Association as well as allowing the state to make grants to nursing homes that demonstrate best practices. A temporary measure to rescue nursing homes as a result of the current crisis in liability insurance also passed. This law includes means to insure quality of care with an early warning and amelioration process and a quality assurance fee (or bed tax) for nursing homes in order to increase nursing home reimbursement rates.

2003. The 78th Legislative Session was faced with a budget crisis that resulted in decreased funding of health care for the elderly and disabled. Community care programs were reduced. Medical services for the elderly on Medicaid will no longer cover counseling, podiatric and chiropractor care, eyeglasses, hearing aids, and other optional benefits. The personal needs allowance for those on nursing home Medicaid was also reduced although legislation was proposed in the first special session to reverse this.

Texas Health and Human Services is being reorganized and a state agency created called the Department of Disability and Aging will be responsible for programs that were originally under the Department of Aging. Whether these changes will be more efficient is yet to be seen. The budget crisis drove the legislative session, and hence this was not a good session for the advancement of care for the elderly.

2005. The major concern for the 79th Legislative Session was funding of programs and the hope that cuts from the 78th Session would be restored. Funding to provide eyeglasses, hearing aids, mental health services, and podiatry benefits for adult Medicaid clients was restored. The 79th Session budget provides funds to increase enrollment in a number of non entitlement community care and health programs that had been reduced in the previous session. The budget assumes lower caseloads for Medicaid and cost per client and includes funding to reduce waiting lists. There is some anticipated cost savings from greater management care for the aged, blind and disabled Medicaid clients. Proposed change to Medicaid Managed Care was most controversial. Some compromises were made and some models will be implemented in the Dallas area.

Long-term care programs now reside in the Department of Aging and Disability Services. Most Department of Aging and Disability Services are through Medicaid. Nursing facility rates were not restored nor increased, and there is a possibility of a nursing home deficit. At the last minute, the governor vetoed a quality assurance fee, a type of bed tax on nursing homes that would have provided funds for rate restorations and increases to nursing home facilities. Consequently this leaves Department of Aging and Disability Services without state funding for nursing home rate restorations or updates and without basic operating funds. Medicaid provider rates were not increased nor restored to previous rates, but remain at the 2003 rates. In addition the personal needs allowance remains at the 2003 level.

2007. The 80th Legislature passed no major legislation for senior health care. The personal needs allowance for nursing home Medicaid recipients was increased to $60/month. A bill was passed to establish the creation of nursing home family councils. Legislation was passed to make long term care insurances for Medicaid consistent with federal law under the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005.

2013. The debate over Medicaid overshadowed much of the session. Sweeping changes were proposed relating to how the state administers the program. Some of the changes came from studying the changes to Medicare in the Affordable Care Act. Many of the changes are expected to improve the quality of care and cost effectiveness of the Medicaid program and to combat fraud.

SB 7 and SB 8, by Senator Jane Nelson, contained some of the largest changes to the way the state administers Medicaid. SB 7 redesigns long-term and acute-care services for the elderly, who are among the most costly services provided by Medicaid, and allows Medicaid managed care to cover services provided in nursing homes. SB 8 bars providers who have been found guilty of Medicaid fraud in Texas or elsewhere from participating in the Texas program. Legislators turned down Medicaid expansion and the $90 billion it would provide over 10 years.

Medicaid reimbursement for many services did increase. For example, nursing home reimbursement increased 2% the first year and 4% in the second year. Attendant care salaries were increased $.50 in 2013 and $.50 more in 2014. Legislation passed to establish a reuse program for durable medical equipment provided to recipients under the Medicaid program.

H. Post-Divorce Payments

1982, 1997

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports changes in Texas laws that would enable a court to award adequate post-divorce payments to a spouse when appropriate.

History: Post-Divorce Payments

1995. A bill enacted in the 1995 Legislative Session removed the stigma of notoriety from Texas as the only state in the U.S. that did not allow its courts the option of ordering post-divorce (alimony) payments. The new law gives courts discretion to order alimony payments for an ex-spouse who is unable to support her or himself, if the couple has been married at least 10 years. In each previous legislative session dating back to 1982, similar, League-supported measures were passed by the Texas Senate but died in the House. Although the 1995 legislature enacted a law awarding postdivorce payments (spousal maintenance or alimony), the new law is very limited. Consequently, the 1995-97 Periodic Program Review Committee added the word "adequate" and urged retention of the position.

I. Services for People With Behavioral Health Disorders

1988 (See also LWVUS position "Health Care" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports the right of all persons who have behavioral health disorders to have access to services designed to help them reach and maintain an optimal level of functioning in the least restrictive environment.

The League believes that state government should ensure that the following services are accessible to persons with behavioral health disorders:

- Residential services
- Nonresidential services
- Continuity of care services
- Outreach to those who cannot or will not seek assistance
- Programs for special populations

The League supports these actions to improve the number and quality of services available for people with behavioral health disorders:

- Provide incentives for community-based residential programs.
- Implement measures to encourage public and private funding of long-term rehabilitative care.
- Provide technical assistance to, and regulation of, housing providers, such as room and board homes that house patents with behavioral health disorders.
- Implement measures to prevent discrimination and encourage community acceptance of residents with behavioral health disorders, including community education about serious behavioral health disorders.

- Supplement federal Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments for mentally disabled persons.
- Allocate state funds to local mental health authorities according to need for services and performance level and quality.
- Provide incentives for local mental health authorities to develop residential services for persons who are most difficult to place.
- Increase the number of physicians who receive training in the public system for behavioral health disorders.
- Expand academic and research opportunities in the public system for behavioral health disorders.
- Require continuing education and in service training for mental health professionals and direct care staff in the public system for behavioral health disorders.
- Provide higher salaries and benefits as required to attract and retain qualified personnel in the public health system for behavioral disorders.

The League supports funding of services for persons who have behavioral health disorders by:

- State government.
- State government through participation in federal programs.
- City, county and other local governments.
- Private insurance.
- Individuals to the best of their ability.

The federal government is currently the major funding source for research on behavioral health disorders. The League supports sharing the responsibility for financing research on the prevention, causes, treatment, and need for treatment of those with behavioral health disorders with state government and the private sector.

Explanation: Services for People With Behavioral Health Disorders

League delegates to Convention 1987 adopted a new study of the state mental health and mental retardation system, with emphasis on persons who are seriously mentally ill. There was excellent participation in the study with 75% of local Leagues responding. The consensus indicated strong support for access to a range of high-quality services by Texans with serious mental illness and public education regarding serious mental illness to combat stigma and discrimination against persons who suffer from it. The position on services for the seriously mentally ill was adopted in November 1988.

History: Services for People With Behavioral Health Disorders

1989. League efforts focused primarily on increasing the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation budget in order to initiate programs for youths and to expand services to rural areas. Although the final budget was an expansion over previous levels, it primarily reflected the increased cost of providing current service levels and some court-mandated reforms for hospitalized clients. A small amount of funding was designated for programs for children and youth. The League also opposed several discriminatory bills, which ultimately died. These bills would have significantly reduced access to housing, within residential areas, for disabled persons including the mentally ill.

1990-93. During the 1990 interim, the LWVTX testified before a hearing of the Senate Health and Human Services Committee to reiterate our support for private board and care homes operated in a responsible fashion. The 1991 Legislative Session produced successful legislation clarifying the regulatory and licensing procedures for board and care homes and outlining a bill of rights for residents and providers. Although not active on this specific issue in the 73rd Legislature, the League worked to maintain funding levels for human services programs, including those for the mentally ill.

1994-95. During the legislative interim, the LWVTX presented testimony to an advisory task force of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation charged with delineating authority/provider roles. The League objected to the proposed separation of local authority from local providers, noting the need for the authority and provider to be one entity at the local level to ensure accessibility, continuity, and flexibility of assistance to those in need of services.

2005. The legislative priority for the 2005 Session was to work to influence the legislature to maintain or increase the current funding level for services for the seriously mentally ill, when appropriate, combining efforts in coalition with other organizations. We appreciate being able to work with the Mental Health Association of Texas, and in particular, the Mental Health Association of Greater Dallas.

The final budget bill included the following mental health items: $20 million added statewide for adult community mental health, $3 million added statewide for children's community mental health, $15 million added statewide to increase state psychiatric hospital bed capacity, $3.3million added for full restoration of Children's Health Insurance Program mental health benefit, $44 million added for restoration of Medicaid adult psychological counseling benefit, and $195 million for the NorthSTAR program.

The following mental health related bills were signed by the governor: (a) HB 224 (Corte): Prevents a minor from discharging him or herself or refusing psychoactive medication under specified conditions, and (b) SB 1473 (Lindsay)/HB 2524 (Coleman): required that all law enforcement officers, veterans as well as cadets, receive training on de-escalation and crisis intervention techniques for dealing with persons with mental impairments. HB 2572 (Truitt), authorizing a local mental health and mental retardation authority to determine whether to provide services directly or to contract with another organization to provide service, was vetoed.

2007. The LWVTX worked to influence the legislature to maintain or increase the current funding level for services for the seriously mentally ill. A request by the Department of State Health Services for $82 million in new dollars for mental health crisis services was full funded. The additional funding will allow the state to pen six new psychiatric emergency observation sites, provide children's outpatient and crisis stabilization for 87,000 people, and to train and certify 340 community center staff to respond to crisis calls. In addition, funding provided for state mental health facilities totaled $634 million, a $14.6 million increase to maintain the 2007 caseloads.

Legislation for parity to require health insurance plans to cover treatment for serious mental health disorders advocated by the LWVTX did not make it through the process. However SB 568 (Ellis), which mirrored pending federal legislation, and HB 510 (Fabree) made it through respective chambers. The features of both pieces of parity legislation were attached to HB 1919 relating to health insurance coverage for individuals with brain injury, however at the last minute these were stripped from the bill in conference committee.

2011. The League monitored legislation affecting mental health and substance abuse services throughout the legislative session and encouraged members through the Legislative Newsletter to contact their congressional representatives serving on the relevant committees and when budget considerations came to the floor of both houses in support of League positions. In light of current language being used to describe mental health and substance abuse issues, it was recommended and adopted that the issue title be changed to "Services for People with Behavioral Health Disorders."

Although the Texas Legislature generally maintained 2010-11 levels of funding for mental health in the Department of State Health Services budget, this must be understood in the context that Texas is at the bottom of all 50 states in per capita spending for public mental health services. While community-based services for children were increased by almost $21 million, community-based services for adults were decreased by over $11 million, and substance abuse treatment services were decreased by over $29 million. Substance abuse treatment services are critical because of the large number of people with mental illnesses who have co-occurring substance abuse disorders.

2013. While Texas continued to be at the bottom of all 50 states in per capita spending for public mental health and substance abuse services, the legislature did provide an additional $350 million for the biennium. This significant increase was in large measure motivated by several tragic mass shootings of people attending a political event, people at a movie, and children and teachers in an elementary school. Young people with histories of mental illness conducted the three shootings.

Some 70 bills related to mental health were filed and the LWVTX monitored and advocated for those related to our positions. In addition to our highest priority for increased funding, the most significant bills passed include the following: (a) authorization of a study of the mental health workforce shortage, (b) facilitation of best practices in hospital emergency rooms for Screening, Brief Intervention and Referral to Treatment in cases of injuries from substance use/abuse, (c) authorization of a study of the need statewide for forensic and civil hospital beds, (d) expansion of the number of mental illnesses eligible for treatment (previous law limited coverage to major depression, bipolar disorder, and schizophrenia), and (e) funding for mental health first aid training statewide, (f) integration of mental health with the rest of the health care system in the Medicaid program (g) provision of improved mental health awareness and suicide prevention training for public school educators and staff, and (h) clarification of judicial authority to court-ordered outpatient treatment for people with mental illness.

2017. Congratulations to the 85th Texas Legislature! There were many, many good bills supporting behavioral health introduced this session, 41 of which the League actively supported. Of these, 22 were finally passed.

Of the $1 billion appropriate from the Rainy Day Fund, $300 million will be dedicated to state-run mental hospitals for new construction, significant repairs, and increased capacity. Also appropriated were $62.7 million to eliminate projected waiting lists for community mental health services for adults and children, $37.5 million for a new mental health jail diversion program, and $160 million for deferred maintenance at state schools and hospitals.

Under the leadership of Chairman Four Price, the House Select Committee on Mental Health passed four significant bills: HB 10, HB 13, HB 1486, and HB 3083. Their provisions include: (a) an ombudsman position for behavioral health access to care, (b) a mental health and substance use disorder parity work group to coordinate state and federal rules and statutes about benefits for these disorders, (c) requirement for the Health and Human Services Commission to establish a matching grant program for the purpose of supporting community mental health programs and provide services and treatment to individuals experiencing illness, (d) a provision in Tex. Gov. Code requiring the Health and Human Services Commission to adopt rules on the training and certification of peer specialists for mental health, and (e) a chemical dependency counselor for those who are eligible to receive repayment assistance on college loans.

House bills supported by the LWVTX that passed include an annual mental health screening under Texas health Steps program for children aged 12-18 years, mental health services for first responders, workman's comp for fire fighters and peace officers who develop PTSD, maternal depression screening.

Senate bills supported by the LWVTX that passed include intervention for veterans, psychiatric rehabilitation services to children and their families, requires the Texas Veterans Commission to create a veterans suicide prevention plan, post investigation psychological counseling for a grand juror in a grand jury investigation, clarifies the definition of psychology and therefore prevents those who are not licensed by the Medical Board from claiming to be psychologists.

2019. Here is a breakdown of major behavioral health bills that passed and have been signed by the governor:

School Behavioral Health/School Climate

- HB 18 (Price) Relating to consideration of the mental health of public school students in training requirements for certain school employees, curriculum requirements, counseling programs, educational programs, state and regional programs and services, and health care services for students and to mental health first aid program training and reporting regarding local mental health authority and school district personnel.
- HB 19 (Price) Relating to mental health and substance use resources for certain school districts.
- SB 11 (Bonnen) Relating to policies, procedures, and measures for school safety and mental health promotion in public schools; making an appropriation.
- SB 504 (Seliger) Relating to the inclusion of certain information in postsecondary education and career counseling academies developed for certain school counselors and other postsecondary advisors employed by a school district.

Foster Care, Trauma, and Behavioral Health

- HB 53 (Minjarez) Relating to the transitional living services program for certain youth in foster care.
- HB 72 (White) Relating to the continuation of Medicaid benefits provided to certain children adopted from the conservatorship of the Department of Family and Protective Services.
- HB 475 (Howard) Relating to information for foster children who are pregnant or minor parents.
- SB 355 (West) Relating to developing a strategic plan to ensure the provision of prevention and early intervention services complies with federal law.

Maternal Behavioral Health

- HB 253 (Farrar) Relating to a strategic plan to address postpartum depression.
- SB 750 (Kolkhorst) Relating to maternal and newborn health care and the quality of services provided to women in this state under certain health care programs.

Criminal Justice and Behavioral Health

- HB 601 (Price) Relating to procedures and reporting requirements regarding criminal defendants who are or may be persons with a mental illness or an intellectual disability.
- HB 1342 (Leach) Relating to the consequences of a criminal conviction on a person's eligibility for an occupational license.
- SB 652 (Zaffirini) Relating to the delivery of certain mental health information regarding a defendant transferred from a county to the custody of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, the commitment of certain defendants for competency restoration, and the use of telepsychiatry in determining whether a defendant is manifestly dangerous before commitment.

Substance Abuse

- HB 4298 (Murr) Relating to the licensing of satellite offices of outpatient chemical dependency care facilities.
- SB 340 (Huffman) Relating to the creation of a grant program to assist law enforcement agencies with the purchase of opioid antagonists.
- SB 436 (Nelson) Relating to state-wide initiatives to improve maternal and newborn health for women with opioid use disorder.
- SB 1564 (West) Relating to access to medication-assisted treatment for opioid use disorder under Medicaid.

Telehealth Services

- HB 3345 (Price) Relating to health benefit coverage provided by certain health benefit plans for telemedicine medical services and telehealth services.
- HB 4455 (Miller) Relating to the provision of mental health services through a telemedicine medical service or telehealth service.
- SB 71 (Nelson) Relating to the establishment of a statewide telehealth center for sexual assault forensic medical examination.

Other bills to address behavioral health

- HB 1590 (Howard) Relating to the establishment of the Office for Sexual Assault Survivor Assistance within the criminal justice division of the governor's office.
- HB 1735 (Howard) Relating to sexual harassment, sexual assault, dating violence, and stalking at public and private postsecondary educational institutions; providing an administrative penalty.
- HB 2813 (Price) Relating to the state-wide behavioral health coordinating council.
- SB 37 (Zaffirini) Relating to the abolition of student loan default or breach of a student loan repayment or scholarship contract as a ground for nonrenewal or other disciplinary action in relation to a professional or occupational license.

J. Transportation

2006 See also LWVUS position "Transportation" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports a transportation system to move people and goods that includes a variety of transportation modes, with emphasis on increased transportation services and other viable alternatives; that is efficient, convenient, and cost effective; that services all segments of the population and diverse geographic needs; that minimizes the harmful effects on the environment, is integrated with land use, and is supported by extensive public education.

Planning for transportation projects should be accomplished by:

- Cooperation and coordination among agencies and different levels of government.
- Timely, informed citizen input in the planning process.
- Selection of projects based on needs assessment.
- Analyses of alternate routes and modes.
- Analysis of environmental impact.
- Measures to provide public transportation to groups who do not have or cannot drive a private auto (elderly, disabled, youth, low-income).
- Policies encouraging the integration of various modes of transportation to promote seamless systems.

Transportation and land use planning should include the following strategies in order to influence travel behavior:

- Parking fees
- Taxes
- Tolls
- Alternatives to single occupancy vehicle travel (high occupancy vehicle lanes, cars/van pools, bicycle lanes, etc.)
- Flexible lanes for high traffic times
- Land use policies to encourage mixed use development coordinated with public transportation

Construction, maintenance and/or expansion projects should be funded through:

- Tolls on new highways.
- Regional rail authorities with taxing ability.
- Federal funding.
- Usage taxes for commercial vehicles.
- Local user taxes.
- State gas and user taxes.
- Bonds.
- Private sources (developers, etc.).

To alleviate congestion on Texas highways, existing routes should be expanded to include added passenger rail service and expanded freight rail lines. New routes should connect major Texas centers of population, preferably by rail.

Explanation: Transportation

A transportation study, "Texas Public Transportation," was adopted at Convention 2003 as a three-year study, after being recommended by seven Leagues, several of which had local transportation positions. The focus was on current public transportation systems, future needs, and funding availability. In addition, members focused on the impact of public transportation on air quality, land use, and the need for regional public transportation networks. Consensus was completed and adopted by the board in January 2006.

History: Transportation

2006. The League opposed the proposed route for the Trans-Texas Corridor because local and regional planning groups had concerns about economic and environmental effects which were not addressed, their recommendations were not included in the route selection, and major population centers were not connected in a seamless manner.

2007. The LWVTX opposed HB 1892 (Smith), a moratorium bill on Trans-Texas Corridor (includes many other toll roads). Highways 1604 and 281 were not included in this moratorium. Some North Texas roads, which had been approved, were not in the moratorium. The governor vetoed the bill passed by the legislature.

2013. During the 2013 Legislative Session few transportation bills were passed. The major legislation involved a proposed constitutional amendment to allow funds from the Rainy Day Fund to be used for infrastructure repair and expansion. The amendment legislation passed but did not appear on the same ballot as the water amendment in November 2013. The Texas Department of Transportation was challenged to use funds in as efficient way as possible, which resulted in gravel on some rural roads instead of paving. Effects on roads from oil/gas drilling trucks were a concern. There has been much uproar since then and projects have been redirected. Both House and Senate committees were concerned with congestion (e.g., on I-35W and I-35E), but with limited funds could come up with no funding solution.

Transportation will be a high priority in the coming legislature. High-speed rail from Houston to the Dallas/Fort Worth metroplex, plus the Mexico to Oklahoma City corridor rail, are being addressed by the Texas Department of Transportation. Interim charges include: passenger and freight rail are to be evaluated through a review of the Rail Division of the Texas Department of Transportation, and the port system will be evaluated through a review of the Maritime Division of the Texas Department of Transportation. There was a constitutional amendment on funding that will be on the ballot in November 2014 for use for road infrastructure and improvement. Our current positions enable us to address the proposed legislation in a favorable fashion.

2017. Transportation policy bills did not get very far in the 85th Legislature. High-speed rail bills, toll road bills, red light camera bills, and other bills to address important transportation issues in the state went eight unheard or did not make it far in the process. Only 10 transportation bills that the League followed this session were sent to the governor.

One of the transportation policy bills that was signed into law is a statewide ban on texting while driving. HB 62 has exemptions for using global positioning system (GPS) and emergency messages while driving and for operating devices that play music. But the reading and sending of messages via text, email, messaging applications, and other text-based means is prohibited unless the vehicle is stopped. Also significant was the passage of SB 30, which requires the inclusion of education for drivers on peace officer interactions. This is following a number of police shootings at traffic stops across the country that has come to national attention. A bill that would have permitted the advertisement of voter registration deadlines and voting days on the Texas Department of Transportation message boards along interstate highways did not get a hearing. This was disappointing as the League was prepared to support the bill.

HB 100 was signed into law. And the state will take over the regulation of ridesharing companies while prohibiting local governments from doing so. This is of note to the City of Austin, which banned companies Uber and Lyft from operating in the city last year after the companies did not comply with local regulations. The companies have been operating elsewhere in Texas. SB 312, the bill to continue the Texas Department of Transportation, was signed by the governor. The Texas Department of Transportation was under sunset review this session and was noted as being unprepared to the challenges of the future.

The bills addressing the high-speed rail project between Dallas and Houston did not get very far this session, meaning that for the next 2 years the private company that owns the project has no special limitations to contend with. An overwhelming number of bills did not receive a hearing or were left pending in committee. And most bills did not pass from one house to the other. Bills banning or limiting toll roads also did not move very far (not all toll road have been financially successful). The reverse in position on toll roads from approximately 10 years ago is a policy issue that can have significant impact on many urban commuters in Texas as the state begins to grapple with massive population growth over the next few years.

2019. The 86th Legislature saw the passage of few transportation bills, and nearly half of the bills either established memorial highways or created new specialty license plates. Among the new plates that are now available to passenger vehicle owners are Register to Vote specialty license plates (HB 1330), a bill successfully supported by the League!

Toll Roads: The troubled finances of some toll entities and problems with both toll road construction and toll gate sensors have contributed to less enthusiastic support for toll roads from many legislators. HB 803 was signed into law and requires greater financial transparency from toll road entities, which have been criticized for not making their information accessible to the public.

Driver Responsibility program: HB 2048 repealed the controversial Driver Responsibility program. Per the Texas Department of Public Safety website:

"The Driver Responsibility Program establishes a system that authorizes the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) to assess surcharges to an individual based on certain traffic offenses that have occurred on or after September 1, 2003. Individuals are notified by mail each time a surcharge is added to their driver record. Surcharges are in addition to other fees and do not replace a suspension, revocation, denial, disqualification or cancellation resulting from the same conviction."

The program had been criticized for contributing to the disproportionate incarceration of low-income individuals, who were unable to pay the charges and subsequently had their driver's license suspended or were jailed after failing to pay the surcharges after 105 days. Critics of the program further asserted that the surcharges trapped people in a cycle of debt. The evidence presented to lawmakers was enough to generate bipartisan support for the passage of HB 2048, which went into effect on September 1, 2019.

Red light cameras: After several unsuccessful attempts in prior Legislative sessions to ban red light cameras, HB 1631 banned red light cameras across Texas. Local law enforcement may no longer use photo enforcement to issue traffic fines and citations.

High Speed Rail: Although high-speed rail has been a controversial issue for landowners and elected official along the proposed Dallas – Houston route, none of the bills regarding the privately owned and operated passenger rail line were passed, leaving another two years without legislative resolution for the issues of rail elevation, coordination with county road cutoffs and re-routes, land acquisition, or multi-modal compatibility, among others.

Other issues: Many cities in Texas have received an influx of electric scooters, which have had both positive and negative responses. SB 549, which would have regulated electric scooters, failed to pass out of the House committee. HB 417, relating to economic impact reviews conducted by the Texas Transportation Commission, would have required analysis and public comment on transportation project impacts to businesses, but did not receive a hearing. HB 2306, relating to a study regarding the public health considerations of transportation planning, was left pending in the House Administration committee.

IV. Natural Resources

A. Climate Change and Air Quality

1960s, 2020 (See also LWVUS positions "Air Quality" and "Climate Change" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas believes that climate change is a serious threat facing our nation and our planet.

The League believes that an interrelated approach to combating climate change will protect public health and defend the overall integrity of the global ecosystem. Typically climate change solutions will address:

- Energy conservation
- Air pollution controls
- Development of resilient infrastructure
- Promotion of renewable energy resources

The League supports climate goals and policies that are consistent with the best available climate science and that will ensure a stable climate system for future generations.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports state government action for control of air pollution in Texas, including:

- Power to set and enforce standards stricter than those required by the federal government.
- Adequate funding to carry out research, planning, and enforcement.
- Legislation allowing local and regional governments to set and enforce standards stricter than those of the state.
- Encouragement of citizen involvement in the rule making and enforcement process.

Explanation: Air Quality and Climate Change

The League has been involved with air quality legislation at the state and national levels since prior to the passage of the Federal Clean Air Act in 1970. In 1977 amendments to the Federal Clean Air Act were passed extending deadlines and relaxing some pollution standards. The Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 aimed to reduce substantially air pollution from most American cities by the turn of the century. The requirements will protect human health and the environment, while balancing environmental and economic concerns. Provisions include more stringent pollution controls for air quality, motor vehicles, hazardous air pollutants, acid rain, and stratospheric ozone depletion. Areas in Texas not meeting the air quality standards are Houston, Beaumont/Port Arthur, El Paso, and Dallas/Fort Worth. Additionally, Victoria County and Culberson County (Guadalupe Mountains National Park) are being evaluated for non-attainment status.

The vehicle provided under the Federal Clean Air Act to show compliance or a plan to attain compliance is the State Implementation Plan. The League has been involved in numerous revisions of the State Implementation Plan and supports legislation that will promote clean air, such as vehicle inspections, changes in gasoline formulation and/or the use of alternate fuels, and more auto and industry pollution controls.

This position was amended by delegates to Convention 2020 to include a statement on Climate Change. Wording was modeled after the LWVUS position on climate change.

History: Air and Climate Change

1985-89. In the 1985 Legislative Session, the League supported requirements for the state to do periodic reviews of permits and to institute administrative penalties for industry violations of air quality guidelines. We worked in the 1987 Session to maintain these gains. The League also intervened on behalf of the state in the suit brought against Texas by the Texas Association of Business regarding jury trial and administrative penalties. (In 1993, the Texas Supreme Court upheld the lower court's ruling in our favor, affirming the constitutionality of administrative penalties.) The League worked in the 1989 session in support of legislation that promoted the use of alternative fuels in fleets of vehicles such as school buses, taxicabs, and metropolitan transit systems.

1991-93. In 1991 the League supported funding at adequate levels for the Texas Air Control Board and the necessary statutory authority to implement the Federal Clean Air Act in Texas. This legislation ultimately passed during the first special session as part of a reorganization of natural resources agencies. In the 1993 Session, the League supported dedication of revenues from environmental fees, such as those required of air polluters, to environmental regulatory and remedial programs. We also successfully opposed legislation that would have exempted agriculture operations from all state air pollution control requirements. Also adopted in 1993 were legislative changes required to bring Texas clean air programs into compliance with regulations adopted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to implement the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990. Despite League opposition, the 1993 Session repealed the requirement that school buses convert to alternative fuels. Conversion of school buses is now purely voluntary.

1995. Though environmental protection was a priority for the LWVTX in the 74th Legislature, an antiregulatory mood prevailed. A League-opposed measure that broadens the definition of alternative fuels to include petroleum fuels passed and was signed into law. In addition, despite opposition from the League and environmental groups, the statewide air emissions testing program was scuttled. Centralized testing was abandoned in favor of returning to the old system of tailpipe testing that is done at the time of the annual safety sticker inspection. Known as the Interim Texas Plan, the program will be in effect while the governor, through the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission negotiates a program with the Environmental Protection Agency. The new program will be designed to show that Texas meets the requirements of the Federal Clean Air Act while at the same time administers a program of maximum convenience. The League considers these actions to be a major setback to efforts to achieve cleaner air for polluted areas of the state.

1997. The League was unable to support any of the bills concerning air quality that passed during this legislative session. One law authorized Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to exempt a permit applicant from meeting pollution control requirements as long as the exemption is consistent with federal law and is at least as protective as the usual standard. Another bill weakened previously enacted laws that required a significant percentage of the vehicle fleets of state and local government agencies, mass transit authorities, and school districts to use alternative fuels. A third bill allowed grandfathered facilities from the 1970s to continue to receive exemptions from obtaining air pollution control permits for new construction and modification permits. The League did not support a provision that was added requiring the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to develop a voluntary emissions reduction plan for these facilities, which could provide the opportunity for interested parties to address the issue of bringing grandfathered facilities into permitted status. The good news is that several other objectionable air pollution bills failed passage.

1999. As in the 75th Legislative Session, natural resources was one of our legislative priorities: advocacy to promote funding and policy initiatives supporting environmental protection and public participation. In 1999 the legislature revisited the issue of grandfathered facilities, those facilities that were exempted from having to obtain air pollution control permits as they were in operation prior to implementation of the Federal Clean Air Act in 1970.

Believing that 30 years is long enough, the LWVTX worked with a broad coalition to require that all air-polluting facilities be required to comply with laws protecting public health by a certain date. A House bill would have set a deadline to require facilities to be permitted, would have required the use of best available technology, and would have ended the volume discount for polluters that only had to pay fees on the first 4,000 tons of emissions. However, what passed was a bill implementing the governor's voluntary program for moving grandfathered polluters into the air control permitting process.

The greatest success in cleaning up Texas air came through the electric deregulation/restructuring bill that was passed and signed into law. Although the League does not have a position on electric deregulation, the LWVTX testified before the Senate and House committees urging them to consider (in the legislation) the importance of public participation and education, the impact on public health and the environment, the use and conservation of energy, and the development of renewable energy resources.

Language in this bill requires about 100-grandfathered power plants to reduce emissions by 50%. With that provision, the exemption loophole was removed from roughly 30% of the state's total grandfathered facilities. Together the two bills will ensure that 60% of the annual emissions by grandfathered plants, or about 540,000 tons of air pollutants, will now have to begin to meet clean air standards. This stands as the biggest win for the environment this session.

2001. The 77th Session was the best in a decade for air quality. Important air quality bills that were strongly supported by the League and signed by the governor included the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission Sunset/Reauthorization bill that ended the grandfather loophole. After 4 years of sustained work by environmental and public interest groups, including the LWVTX, the legislature finally ended the 30-year-old loophole for grandfathered plants, forcing Texas' oldest, dirtiest industrial plants to meet modern clean air standards. The law defined new standards for "upset emissions" of pollution, required that all emissions be reported within 24 hours, made the source come up with a corrective action plan, and provided penalties.

A large setback came when the legislature failed to remove the fee cap or volume discount collected under the Federal Clean Air Act on air emissions above 4,000 tons. The League, along with our coalition partners, lobbied hard on this issue.

In another major victory for cleaner air in Texas, the Texas Emissions Reduction Program provided three types of incentive programs: (a) rebates to consumers for the purchase of low-emission and alternative fuel vehicles, (b) incentives to use more fuel-efficient building materials and appliances, and (c) assistance to companies that agree to retrofit or replace high polluting diesel engines. Another bill expanded vehicle emissions inspection and maintenance requirements to counties beyond the one specified by federal requirement. The LWVTX supports a regional approach to solving air quality problems.

Other legislation establishes the Clean Coal Technology Council, requires the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to suspend operations for a rock crusher or cement batch plant found to be operating without a permit, allows the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to authorize emissions reductions achieved outside the United States to satisfy emission reduction requirement in international border issues, and allows the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to waive public notice and hearing requirements under certain conditions during construction or modification of a facility. In a loss for the environment, the legislature enacted a provision that prevents the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission from requiring petroleum marketers to sell cleaner grades of motor fuels in Texas markets.

2003. In a session in which environmental protection was rolled back dramatically, funding the Texas Emissions Reduction Program was a rare positive for Texans. Although the Texas Emissions Reduction Program was adopted by the 2001 Legislature and signed into law, a court in 2002 ruled the main funding mechanism unconstitutional. Without the 16.3 tons of emissions reductions per day in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and 18.9 tons per day in the Houston area, last year the Environmental Protection Agency threatened to reject the state's urban smog strategies in the State Implementation Plan. So the legislature was under pressure to find the money to fund the program.

Last minute action by both the legislature and the governor prevented federal intervention by funding a program to replace dirty, old diesel-powered construction equipment. Consistent with the prevailing mood of legislators regarding public health and the environment, a state program on low-sulfur diesel fuel was replaced by less stringent federal rules that could increase pollution by 6 tons per day statewide. The new law also eliminated the program of rebates to consumers for the purchase of low-emission and alternative fuel vehicles.

As passed, the Texas Emissions Reduction Program provides assistance to companies that agree to retrofit or replace high-polluting diesel engines and pays for research into new clean air technologies. To pay for it, the plan raises vehicle title transfer fees Texans pay when buying new cars and adds surcharges for on- and off-road diesel vehicles and equipment.

Another LWVTX supported bill that passed allows areas with early action compacts with the Environmental Protection Agency to establish motor vehicle inspection and maintenance programs as an air control strategy. Formerly only areas designated nonattainment were allowed to have inspection and maintenance programs, and other areas were prohibited.

Despite the budget shortfall, the legislature took no action to raise or remove the cap on the air emissions fee. They also failed to prohibit the use of hazardous waste as a fuel in cement plants.

The LWVTX supports efforts to force polluters to pay for all emissions and to tighten the regulation of cement kilns, as the current permits are inadequate to protect air quality.

2005. The quality of the air in Texas was a low priority for the 79th Legislature. No significant piece of clean-air legislation passed, although many areas of the state face severe air-pollution problems. In fact, the legislature worked hard to cut the Texas Emissions Reduction Program, which since 2001 has provided hundreds of millions of dollars in grants to help companies replace older, dirtier diesel-powered construction equipment. Off-road equipment such as bulldozers and cranes contribute a significant portion of the state's pollution. The legislature even proposed cutting in half the fund that helps low-income motorists repair vehicles that fail the annual emissions test required in nonattainment areas of the state, but restored that fund to current levels at the end.

The enactment of the Texas Emissions Reduction Program in 2001, an economic incentive program to reduce air pollution instead of punishing polluters, was hailed as a model for the nation and was crucial to gaining Environmental Protection Agency approval for State Implementation Plans in Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston-Galveston Area. As a compromise, that legislature did not restrict use of heavy construction equipment during the summer smog season nor did it impose a requirement for faster replacement of old, high polluting diesel engines by providing funding through the Texas Emissions Reduction Program for voluntary replacement by diesel-dependent industries.

The reason given was the budget constraints. But a proposal on raising operating permit fees from the current cap of 4,000 tons per day (no matter how much air pollution is emitted) to 8,000 tons per day never was considered. Proposals requiring the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality to make the amount of a penalty for air or water pollution at least as much as the value of any economic benefit gained by the polluter through the violation had little consideration. Both these would have increased revenue and would have made it more beneficial to business to prevent pollution.

Unfortunately, the health of residents living near industrial plants had low priority. A proposal that would have required the state to develop enforceable health-based pollution standards to protect residents living near industrial plants choked legislators. Proposals to monitor and control toxic air emissions near those plants, along with requiring consideration of cumulative effects of pollution, went nowhere.

Ongoing action in the air quality portfolio involves cement batch plants in Ellis County. While these plants contribute half the industrial pollution in North Texas, they were not included in the Dallas Fort Worth area nonattainment area under the old 1-hour standard. Their permits allow them to emit more pollution than other industrial plants in Texas. When the Environmental Protection Agency designated nonattainment areas under the new 8-hour standards in 2004, they included Ellis County in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. One plant had a permit change request under review to turn off the scrubbers as it costs them too much to operate them at their desired profit levels. That was not approved before the Environmental Protection Agency designation, so the law does not allow them to cite economic disincentive. We gave input to include Ellis County in the Dallas-Fort Worth area nonattainment area as well as to request denial of this permit change.

Border issues. The League followed a number of issues that were unique and/or critical to the border region. Many of the bills were directed at vehicular traffic, electronic and clearance checks, coordination of activities between various government agencies, and the review and development of road projects.

2007. Many bills were filed in the Legislature concerning air quality. However, only two passed and Senator Averitt, the Senate Natural Resources Committee Chairman, introduced those. The first updated the Texas Emissions Reduction Plan and the Low-Income Vehicle Repair Assistance Program. These programs were both funded.

The second bill required that not only should a preconstruction permit be reviewed every 10 years, it must also be reviewed during the permit amendment process—a great step forward. The League testified many times on the various bills that were introduced, including many that did not pass. These include the toxic hotspots bills, fence-line monitoring, California standards for cars and light trucks, establishing an air pollutant watch list, and a clean school bus bill.

2009. Once again, many bills were introduced in the Legislature regarding air quality. Many were also introduced regarding climate change. Only three passed, however. Senator Averitt, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, introduced an omnibus bill which included air quality and climate change. Unfortunately, this bill did not pass, though parts of it were added to another bill that did pass and was signed by the governor. Those parts which were added include the Texas Emission Reduction Program extension through August 31, 2019, a requirement that the Department of Agriculture, Texas Commission on Environmental Quality, Public Utility Commission, and Railroad Commission collaborate in the federal government process for developing federal greenhouse gas reporting requirements and the federal greenhouse gas registry requirements, and a program for new technologies for emissions control that requires best available control technology as defined by the Federal Clean Air Act instead of the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality—a major gain. Not included in the floor amendment were building energy codes, idling of motor vehicles, maximum weight for vehicles with idle reduction systems, housing partnership program rebates, and an online emissions database.

A bill by Senator Watson passed relating to "no regrets" greenhouse gas emissions reduction strategies to be prepared by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality by December 31, 2009. The third bill that passed was by Senator Gallegos. It requires a permit applicant or the applicant's designated representative to attend a public meeting on the permit application. So they can't just skip out. We also prepared testimony for several bills that dealt with cement kilns. Regrettably, none passed.

2011. While much of our time was spent fighting off bad bills in the 82^{nd} Legislature, we did have a number of successes—primarily the passage of the Sunset Bill for the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality. Changes to the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality include the following:

- The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality is to develop and implement a policy for negotiated rulemaking and alternative dispute resolution.
- The executive director is charged with making sure that the agency is responsive to environmental and citizens' concerns, including environmental quality and consumer protection. This was formerly under the purview of the Public Interest Council.
- The Public Interest Council is to ensure that the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality promotes the public interest. However, the primary duty of the office is to represent the public interest as a party to matters before the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality.
- The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality by rule shall develop standards for evaluating and using compliance history that ensures consistency. However, the compliance history shall not exceed 1 year from the date of issuance of each notice of violation. In addition, compliance history is to be classified as "satisfactory, unsatisfactory, or above satisfactory."
- Fees are changed in the Health and Safety Code from not to exceed $2,500 per day to "not to exceed $5,000 per day." All other violations are changed from not to exceed $10,000 per day to "not to exceed $25,000 per day for each violation."
- The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality is to develop a policy to prevent regulated entities from systematically avoiding compliance through the use of supplemental environmental projects.

In addition, Representative Howard's bill passed that if a person violates a rule set by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality relating to idling limitations, that person commits a Class C misdemeanor. Representative Burnam's bill adds electric vehicles and natural gas vehicles to vehicles covered by the Low-Income Vehicle Retirement Program.

With regard to climate change, we worked hard opposing Representative Hancock's bill-a Concurrent Resolution urging Congress to prevent the Environmental Protection Agency from regulating greenhouse gases from stationary sources-and it failed. Another bill that failed was by Senator Hancock and would have allowed Texas to participate in a Regional Air Quality Compact with one or several states, thus avoiding the Environmental Protection Agency jurisdiction. Needless to say, we opposed this bill. In addition, Representative Craddick's bill allowing oil and gas facilities to have reduced permit requirements failed.

We prepared testimony which was presented to the Environmental Protection Agency on the Plan for Texas under the Prevention of Significant Deterioration Rule, the proposed Environmental Protection Agency ozone rules, and the proposed rules on New Source Performance Standards and National Emissions Standards for Hazardous Air Pollutants for the oil and gas industry, including hydraulic fracturing. We also encouraged local leagues to become involved in the Clean Air Promise, a campaign of the LWVUS.

2013. Of the 26 bills we watched closely, five bills that we supported passed, and nine bills that we opposed didn't pass. That's 14 of 26, more than half–a real plus for our environment. The most important bills that passed were the rewriting of the legislation regarding the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality, more funding for the Texas Emissions Reduction Program, and encouraging the capture and utilization of carbon dioxide for use in enhanced oil recovery.

Important bills supported by the LWVTX that passed included increases the funding for the Low Income Repair and Replacement Assistance Program from $5 million to $10 million.

Major bills opposed by the LWVTX included a bill dealing with greenhouse gas emissions which was amended in such a way that we could no longer support it. The bill now indicates that it is not subject to contested case hearings and that fees for exceeding emissions of greenhouse gases are limited to the cost of imposing the fee. We submitted testimony opposing the bill unless changed. Unfortunately, the bill passed and was signed by the governor.

2015. Air quality. Successes were important this legislative session as we were, as always, in defensive mode. Many bills we opposed died in committee.

Climate change. Few legislators were interested in climate change. However, one bill passed and another introduced that will continue. Representative Farrar introduced HB 706, which allows an exemption from ad valorem taxation of property on which a solar or wind-powered energy device is installed or constructed. Representative Anchia introduced HB 2078 establishing a Global Climate Change Commission to study the impact of climate change in Texas from a global perspective. The LWVTX gave testimony supporting this bill, including a definition of greenhouse gases that Representative Anchia said was the best definition he had heard. His goal is to inform his committee and others about the importance of climate change. He intends to speak to every member of the legislature about the growing impact of climate change on the earth.

2017. Air quality. The LWVTX supported HB 2003 (Zerwas) that relates to money used by certain counties for low-income vehicle repair assistance, retrofit, and accelerated vehicle repair assistance programs; and local initiative air quality projects. Left pending in the Senate Natural Resources & Development Committee.

Climate change bills were supported by the LWVTX but they did not pass.

(HB 773 E.Johnson) related to information on projected changes in weather, water availability, and climate variability in strategic plans of certain state agencies. Died in House State Affairs Committee. HB 445 (Frank) to ad valorem tax incentives for wind energy. Died in Chamber.

2019. During this session a total of 10 climate change bills and three resolutions were filed in the House, and one in the Senate. The 86th Texas Legislative Session showed a dramatic increase in the public's interest in climate change legislation. Unfortunately, only HB 219 authored by Ron Reynolds received a committee hearing (Urban Affairs) and it was "left "pending." HB 219 required that long range municipal planning include adoption of an environmental evaluation report. The report was to include projections of the environmental impact of the municipal plan along with strategies to mitigate any adverse results. HB 219 was similar to many other bills submitted this session which incorporated environmental studies as part of a long-term planning process.

The League issued an Action Alert on March 17 directed to the members of the House Environmental Regulation Committee, urging then to give the climate change bills a hearing. The Alert generated 866 responses, but did not result in a hearing for the six bills cited.

The 14 climate change bills submitted this session were the most in the past 10 years. We were particularly encouraged by passage of HB 3143, which offered revisions to the Property Redevelopment and Tax Abatement Act to extend Chapter 312 of the Tax Code to 2029. This bill affected both air quality and climate change. Opponents to renewable energy tried to amend this Act by making property receiving a tax exemption, ineligible for that benefit if a "solar energy device" or "wind power energy device" were installed or constructed on that property. The Texas Public Policy Foundation supported that amendment in an effort to reduce the impact of renewable energy in Texas, but the amendment failed.

Although Texas, nationally, is a major natural gas and oil producer, it is also the largest producer of wind power in the country. Wind in Texas generates 22,700 MW of power which is 15.7% of the electricity produced in the state. Wind power production is a major industry statewide, accounting for 24,000 jobs.

B. Land Use

1974, 2018 (See also LWVUS position "Resource Management" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports a comprehensive state land use policy to provide for the orderly development of the state, including:

- Land being used according to its carrying capacity based on a thorough inventory of our land and natural resources.
- Growth and development of an area being compatible with the degree of availability of essential natural resources in that area.
- Protection of the traditional rights of ownership of property, but in conflicts between private interest and public welfare, precedence should be given to the public interest.
- Preservation of agricultural lands and desirable open space with preferential tax treatment for each.
- Preferential tax treatment for maintenance of the desirable existing buildings and infrastructure.
- A coordinated system of land use management in Texas including the establishment of a state land use management agency.
- Identification and protection of areas of particular significance (historical, archaeological, aesthetic, recreational) and rare or fragile ecosystems.
- Planning being carried out at the local level should be the main thrust of land use.
- Equitable enforcement of land use regulations and a method for appeal and arbitration when conflicting needs exist.

Explanation: Land Use

After 2 years of study, League members in 1974 asserted that public interests should take precedence over private rights when there are conflicts over traditional rights of property ownership. Support for preferential tax treatment to preserve agricultural lands and open space and maintain the built environment allows consideration of many innovative tax reform ideas, though care must be taken to examine this aspect of the Land Use position in conjunction with other positions, especially Financing State Government and LWVUS' Urban Policy. While the League's desire for a state land use management agency has not been realized, changes in agencies such as the General Land Office have accomplished some of our goals.

In 2018, delegates to LWVTX Convention voted to review the Land Use position as it relates to eminent domain, especially regarding private property law and the need to consider environmental impacts. A review committee was appointed. They produced an Eminent Domain Issue Paper 2018 and recommended that no change was needed to the Land Use position. The current language accommodates support for protection of landowner interests, support for protection of environmentally sensitive lands, and support for a requisite public interest when considering legislation concerning eminent domain.

History: Land Use

1975-84. Land use advocacy has often focused on coastal issues. From the late 1970s to early 1980s, League members played key roles in the development of a Texas coastal zone management plan, but the governor did not approve the plan. The League supports the national celebration of Coast Week each year.

The League worked for the establishment of the Big Thicket National Preserve in 1973-74. We have continued to support legislation that would add areas of unique biological diversity and/or essential components of ecologically viable systems to the preserve. The League also played a key role in the 1984 designation of 34,000 acres of east Texas national forest land for wilderness purposes, and we annually cosponsor a Wilderness Pow Wow and support beach cleanup programs.

1990-91. In 1990 the League supported the successful reauthorization of a strong federal Coastal Zone Management Act and was represented on a Coastal Management Committee formed to aid the General Land Office in the development of a comprehensive long-term plan for state-owned coastal public lands in Texas. In 1991 the League opposed proposed state legislation that would have facilitated the development of fragile and disaster-prone areas on the Texas coast.

1995. Takings and other regulatory measures. Within the broad priority issue of environmental protection, land use restrictions vs. private property rights were a major focus of League advocacy during the legislative session. The League joined other groups in mounting opposition to the Private Real Property Rights Preservation Act, known as the "takings bill." Unfortunately, antiregulatory sentiment carried the day, and the bill was signed into law.

Key provisions of the new Private Real Property Rights Preservation Act include:

- A broadened definition of taking of private property by government entities to include actions that reduce market value by 25% or more.
- A requirement that governmental entities prepare "takings impact assessments" to determine proposed actions would constitute takings.
- A requirement that health and safety actions meet a stringent three-part test to qualify for exemption from its provisions unless specifically exempted in the law (about 20 categories of government actions are exempted).

On the plus side was the death of several bills opposed by the League that would have required cost-benefit analyses of major environmental rules by state agencies.

Coastal management. The 74th legislature passed and the governor signed a revamped state coastal management plan. The League supported the revised plan and proposed rules drafted by the General Land Office.

The Railroad Commission submitted numerous amendments to the proposed rules to the Coastal Coordination Council. At a hearing on August 30, the LWVTX expressed opposition to these amendments, noting their conflict with the Federal Coastal Zone Management Plan and the likelihood that adoption of the amended rules would result in rejection of Texas' coastal management plan by the federal government and loss of state authority to regulate the coastal area. The League also urged rejection of the objectionable amendments because they do not reflect important land policy goals, including preservation of the physical, chemical, and biological integrity of the ecosystem, with maximum protection of public health and the environment. (See LWVUS position on Environmental Protection and Pollution Control.)

1999. A number of land use issues were debated during the 76th Session, and two bills affecting county land use powers were passed and signed into law. Because of substandard development and growth concerns the first bill gives counties a little more power to regulate growth by requiring developers to file plats when they subdivide land into parcels of ten acres or less. It allows counties to set standards for roads and drainage. Adoption of this bill reverses a 1995 appellate court decision, the Elgin Bank Case, that required platting only if roads or parks were being dedicated to the county for maintenance. In order for subdivisions to be approved where the source of water is groundwater, this bill requires that a statement, certified by a registered engineer and approved by Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, must be attached stating that adequate ground water is available to the subdivision. This requirement applies to municipal authorities and counties.

The LWVTX continues to support a comprehensive state land use policy to provide for the orderly development of the state. Growth and development of an area should be compatible with the availability of essential natural resource in that area and should avoid the depletion of ground water.

The League actively opposed a bill that would have prohibited wetlands mitigation negotiations on proposed airport sites. The bill, which was counter to the wishes of a majority of Houstonians, and would have threatened the Katy Prairie Westside airport tract, a waterfowl wintering area, did not pass the Senate.

Unfortunately another bill supported by the League that proposed an interim study of farmland preservation was never reported out of committee. Agricultural land is threatened in Texas, the most rapidly urbanizing state in the country.

2003. Most of the bills introduced in the 78th Session followed by the League, dealt with county authority to regulate development. (This was also true of border issues.) Issues addressed in bills that did not pass included elections to require a subdivision to use a central water or waste water system and standards for (a) minimum amounts of open space or limits on the amount of impervious surfaces, (b) rights of way, (c) drainage, (d) utility connections, and (d) the location, use, and occupancy of housing. A bill prohibiting the operation of a motor vehicle in or on the beds or banks of Texas rivers passed and was signed into law. This issue was examined during the 2002 interim and drew interest statewide from people on both sides of the issue.

2007. HB 12 (Hildebran) passed and became law. It appropriates $170 million more dollars to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, and also transfers 18 historical sites to the Texas Historical Commission.

HB 3447 (Rose) failed to pass. This bill would regulate land development in a county wholly or partly located in a priority groundwater management area designated by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality that contains a territory from seven or more counties.

2011. Activity was concentrated primarily in making eminent domain procedures and property owners associations fairer to property owners. In both instances, these powers are widely perceived to have been abused in the past. In the case of eminent domain, the process and method of calculating reimbursement were spelled out in more detail, and the definition of who can wield eminent domain authority was tightened. Governor Perry deemed this topic an emergency at the beginning of the 2011 session, so passage was streamlined and nearly guaranteed. Natural gas pipelines, however, were specifically omitted from this legislation.

Property owners associations, particularly in unincorporated areas, wield great power, but regulations governing the operations of the associations have been ill defined. In the most egregious example of an over-reaching property owners association, a home was foreclosed for relatively small arrears in property owners' association dues. New regulations are intended to result in better notification procedures and more open decision making.

Note: Convention 2012 adopted a concurrence entitled "Homeowners Association Reform". This position includes protection against unreasonable foreclosure on homesteads, and priority of payments so that assessment payments apply first to delinquent dues, and then to non-assessment items such as interest and penalties.

2017. Legislation supported by the LWVTX but did not pass.

- Protecting water quality in the Hill Country. Using water and land use positions, the LWVTX made a major advocacy effort to end the permitting of direct discharge of wastewater over the Edwards Aquifer contributing zone, which covers most of the Hill Country region. An action paper was written, "Protect Water Quality in Edwards Aquifer," and testimony was given at hearings in the House and Senate. Despite significant support from other organizations and affected landowners arguing for land application of wastewater rather than discharge into streams, the proposed legislation died. Work will continue, perhaps during the interim, to stop contamination of surface and groundwater over the Edwards Aquifer contributing zone.
- Protecting parks and open space. An Action Alert was issued to advocate for an increase in the proposed funding for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, from $230 million to $333.5 million. The funding is needed as population growth in the state has caused increased park use and greater need for maintenance and repairs. Legislation was also supported to mandate the dedication of the sporting goods sales tax to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, fixing a previous loophole. Sadly, both a budget increase and legislation for a permanent funding source failed.

Legislation successfully opposed.

- Preserving desirable open space. A bill failed that would have removed land used as an ecological laboratory to be appraised as open space land. The LWVTX registered in opposition to this bill because the LWVTX supports preservation of desirable open space with preferential tax treatment.
- Supporting adequate powers at the local level. The LWVTX opposed several bills introduced in the regular and special sessions to remove land use powers from local governments. Especially egregious bills introduced in the special session would have preempted cities' tree ordinances. The LWVTX testified against these bills and worked with an alliance of other groups to successfully keep the bills from getting out of committee. One bill affecting tree ordinances did pass during the special session and was signed by the governor. It requires cities to allow property owners to plant trees to offset mitigation fees for tree removal. This bill was ultimately acceptable to cities, tree advocates, and builders alike. It keeps intact cities' authority to regulate tree removal.

• Local control of land use. The LWVTX also opposed other bills affecting local control of land use. One bill would have required cities to enforce building codes according to date of purchase of property rather than date of permit application. Another bill would have accelerated cities' permitting process. The LWVTX registered in opposition because these kinds of decisions belong to local, not state, government.

Legislation unsuccessfully opposed.

SB 1172 (Perry): Will prohibit local governments from regulating seed, essentially stripping city and county governments of their ability to protect their farmers and citizens from harmful agricultural practices. The LWVTX position is that these kinds of decisions belong to local, not state, government.

Legislation watched. Eminent domain and annexation issues also took center stage. In the special session legislation passed requiring cities in large counties to receive voter approval before annexing new areas.

2019. There were four major issues relating to Land Use in the 86th Legislative Session.

Eminent Domain. Using the new LWVTX publication, Eminent Domain Issue Paper 2018, we registered and sent testimony in support of numerous bills which were introduced to give protections to property owners involved in eminent domain proceedings. Despite vigorous advocacy from many groups, in the end none of the bills were successful.

Flood Control Planning. An historic statewide planning and funding package for flood control was authorized by the Legislature and approved by voters through constitutional amendment in November 2019. LWVTX registered and sent testimony in support of bills that created the framework for this first state flood plan in Texas. A designated Flood Infrastructure Fund (FIF) will pay for planning and flood control projects. The flood control planning process will be similar to the current water planning process, with regional stakeholders, including the public, planning together. The Texas Water Development Board will administer the FIF by making loans to local governments. Projects eligible for FIF may include non-structural and nature-based solutions, like wetlands, as LWVTX and other groups advocated.

Funding For State Parks. Legislators agreed to a permanent dedicated funding source for state parks and historic areas, and voters agreed through passage of a constitutional amendment in November 2019. This amendment will close a loophole in previous legislation and will require that all proceeds from the state sales tax on sporting goods will go to Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. and to the Texas Historical Commission. Population increases, aging and storm-damaged park facilities, and the need for new parks closer to urban areas all require a dedicated, predictable funding source for long-range planning. LWVTX enthusiastically registered in support of this legislation.

Regulatory Issues. LWVTX joined with other groups to stop a bill that threatened the contested case hearing process, which is often the last line of defense for citizens to stop the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ) from issuing a permit that could harm air or water quality. Thanks to member response to a LWVTX Action Alert, the bill died. Throughout the session, we watched other legislation regarding regulatory changes and supported protection of environmental regulations.

C. Water

1971, 1974, 1978, 2012 (See also LWVUS position "Water Resources" in Impact On Issues)

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports the proposition that water is a natural resource and should be managed for the benefit of the people and the protection of the environment. Further, water conservation should be mandatory, with adequate citizen education for effective water stewardship.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports long-range state water planning that:

- Takes into consideration its social, economic, environmental, and land use implications.
- Provides for development of adequate water supplies by ecologically and financially sound means.
- Emphasizes conservation and reuse of water.
- Is based on increased research concerning wise and efficient use of the state's land and water resources.
- Affords protection for the land and for fragile ecosystems.
- Establishes water availability criteria before issuing any leases, permits and licenses for new industry, business, housing, and other developments.

The League of Women Voters of Texas supports measures for the protection, conservation, and development of the groundwater resources of the state as an integral part of the comprehensive state water plan, and groundwater management that would achieve the following objectives:

- Maintain groundwater quality by preventing harmful contamination of aquifers.
- Assure the long-term productivity of the state's groundwater resources and availability of groundwater supplies.
- Minimize adverse effects of groundwater withdrawals, including land subsidence and reduction of spring flows.

Water resources planning should also include the following:

- Detailed information concerning:
- Hydraulic characteristics and recharge of the state's aquifers.
- Quantities, locations, and trends of groundwater withdrawals.
- Measures that could conserve and extend existing supplies.
- Current and projected costs of ground water and alternative surface water supplies.
- Potential conjunctive use of ground water and surface water.
- Management options developed specifically for each area of the state where ground water is a significant resource and assurance that water transfers to urban areas do not endanger future rural economies.
- Methods to strengthen groundwater conservation districts so they can continue to regulate groundwater use.
- Full public consideration of groundwater management options including a strong state agency with enforcement powers to regulate all water transfers.
- Recommendations of measures to be taken by the state, by political subdivisions of the state, and by the private sector to assure wise management of the state's groundwater resources.
- Coordination of state plans for groundwater management with relevant policies and programs of the federal government and of other states.

Adequate funds should be appropriated for planning and for management of the state's groundwater resources.

Explanation: Water

In the 1950s and 1960s, the LWVUS positions were reached on water conservation and development and on abatement of water pollution. These positions, as well as national and state positions in other natural resource areas—especially land use—are relevant to action on Texas water issues. A study of state water planning was adopted by Convention 1970. Impetus for the study was the 1968 Texas Water Plan, and the 1969 election in which a $3.5 billion bond program to begin implementation of the plan was narrowly defeated. The plan proposed importation of out-of- state water to West and South Texas via two large canal systems. The League consensus disagreed with that aspect of the plan, stating that (a) additional water supplies should be developed in an ecologically sound manner from within the state and (b) more efficient use should be made of existing water supplies. The League took another look at the Texas Water Plan in 1974, following publication of a Corps of Engineers analysis of a proposal for importation of water from the Mississippi River. This consensus reaffirmed our 1971 positions.

Convention 1977 deleted the position statement that additional water supplies should come from within the state. Delegates continued to oppose massive water transfer projects but felt that opposition should be based on other League positions. Convention 1977 also adopted a study of groundwater management and protection, and consensus was reached in November 1978.

The water position was updated in 2012 after the study of Water as a Commodity was completed. The changes specified that the LWVTX believes that water is a natural resource and should be managed for the benefit of the people and the protection of the environment. Further, water conservation should be mandatory, groundwater conservation districts should be strengthened so they can continue to regulate groundwater use, water transfers should be regulated by the state, and water transfers to urban areas should not endanger rural economies.

History: Water

1976-80. When Proposition 1 authorizing $400 million in Texas Water Development bonds was placed on the ballot in November 1976, the League worked to defeat this proposition. League opposition was based on the absence of financial safeguards guaranteeing timely repayment by beneficiaries of water development projects, absence of environmental protection provisions, and inadequate information as to what projects would be funded. The amendment was defeated. Proposition 2, authorizing $100 million in water quality enhancement bonds, was supported by the League and approved by voters.

Over the next several years, testimony based on League water positions was presented on the state lignite mining program, state water quality management plans, hazardous waste disposal legislation, the High Plains Ogallala Aquifer Study, the federal Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977, and a proposed Environmental Protection Agency Groundwater Protection Strategy. The LWVTX Education Fund projects on water issues included: (a) co-sponsorship of a regional floodplain conference in 1975 and (b) Project Safewater in 1976, which explained through a slide program and information kit the implications of the federal Safe Drinking Water Act for Texas communities.

1981-84. In 1981 League action again focused on opposition to a proposed constitutional amendment. Proposition 4 would have dedicated half of the state excess revenues in each biennium to a new water fund. In addition to the concern that prompted our opposition to the 1976 amendment, the League opposed the constitutional dedication of state revenues, in accordance with our position on Financing State Government. The League also pointed out that the revision of the Texas Water Plan initiated in 1976 had not been completed. The amendment was defeated.

Shortly after the November 1981 election, the governor called for revision of the Texas Water Plan. The state League and local Leagues testified at forums on water planning issues in 1982 and at hearings on a draft revision of the plan in 1983. In September 1984 the Water Development Board adopted a revised plan, "Water for Texas: A Comprehensive Plan for the Future," which emphasized water conservation and reuse and recognized that importation of water was not feasible under present conditions. In 1981, the LWVTX Education Fund published Fresh Water for Texas Bays and Estuaries.

1985-88. The 1985 Legislative Session passed a major package of water legislation. Prior to and during the session, the League lobbied to strengthen provisions for water conservation and protection—especially for groundwater. The package consisted of water conservation programs, protection of freshwater inflows to estuaries, creation of groundwater conservation districts in critical areas, and expanded powers for groundwater districts. A bond issue authorized by voters in the November 1985 election funded these initiatives. The League also supported a related ballot issue that passed, authorizing state bonds for an Agricultural Water Conservation fund, if approved by a two-thirds vote of the legislature by 1989.

The League worked with the Water Development Board and the Water Commission for effective implementation of the new conservation requirements and groundwater district provisions. In the 1987 Legislative Session, some League-supported proposals (e.g., stronger septic tank regulation) passed, but all statewide groundwater bills failed.

In 1987-88 local Leagues and the state League participated in the League of Women Voters Education Fund "Community Drinking Water Survey," interviewing water officials on impacts of the 1986 Safe Drinking Water Act amendments. At Texas Water Commission hearings, the LWVTX testified for more stringent water quality standards and more effective controls of nonpoint source pollution.

1989-93. The League reviewed the 13 critical groundwater area reports published by the Texas Water Commission in 1989 and 1990, and urged the commission to address promptly the more serious problems described in the report. Also, in 1990 the state League and several local Leagues presented statements at the Texas Water Development Board public hearings on draft revisions of the state water plan. We commended the plan's emphasis on water conservation and subsequently worked successfully for legislation adopting water-conserving plumbing standards, as recommended in the plan.

In 1990 we attended numerous meetings of the legislature's interim committee on the Edwards Aquifer and testified in the 1991 Legislative Session on two bills proposing management of the aquifer, neither of which passed. A League priority in the 1993 Legislative Session was the creation of a regional management entity for the Edwards Aquifer. The bill the League supported passed in the final days of the session.

In the fall of 1991, the LWVTX testified for a more effective Integrated Environmental Plan for the Mexico-U.S. Border Area and supported a constitutional amendment authorizing use of $150 million of Water Development Fund bonds for water and wastewater services to colonias. The League was represented on the Texas Water Commission Clean Water Council, which submitted its report in November 1992, and on the Clean Texas 2000 Awards Committee, that recommended the April 1993 award winners.

1994-95. In 1994 the LWVTX Education Fund sponsored a workshop in New Braunfels highlighting local League work to protect water quality in south central Texas. Since early 1994, League members have been participating in regional advisory committees to the Trans-Texas Water Program, which is considering future water supply options to be recommended in the 1996 revision of the Texas Water Plan. The League is also represented on Watershed Texas, a statewide watershed management project of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission Office of Water Resource Management.

In the 1995 legislative session, the League supported the bill that was passed to meet U.S. Justice Department requirements for the election of the Edwards Aquifer Authority Board. We opposed several bills that did not pass, including those lowering water quality standards and limiting pollution control authority of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

1997. Major new water legislation, known as SB 1, was drafted by various groups during 1996 in response to a statewide drought and also to provide a broader state framework for dealing with Texas' current and future water needs. Early in the session representatives of several public interest and environmental groups, including the League, met to discuss the proposed legislation and to identify essential elements of a state water bill. A resulting policy statement was submitted to legislative staff and these elements were incorporated into the final bill. Key provisions include:

- Adoption of a new state water plan that will incorporate regional plans for drought planning and water conservation by September 1, 2001.
- Retention of the right of capture doctrine for state groundwater.
- Inter-basin transfers approved by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission would become 'junior' water rights with little or no water to transfer out of the basin during a drought.
- Stream flow needs for streams and rivers and environmental flow for bays and estuaries will continue to compete with perceived water use needs of agricultural, municipal, and industrial needs.
- Formulation of a state water plan addressing different needs of managing water in various regions of the state.

The 1997 appropriations bill contains funding of $36 million for the water legislation during the biennium. An Interim Committee on Water Resources and Development and Management will be created to study a broad range of water issues, including water marketing, and make recommendations to the next legislature. The League plans to monitor this committee during the biennium.

Another bill reinstates the funding mechanism for the state Clean Rivers Program, which would have expired in 1998. However, the population threshold for cities required to establish a water pollution abatement program was increased, weakening the program. Two constitutional amendments concerning water will be on the ballot in November 1997. One would create Water Development Fund II. The other would allow local governments to give tax breaks to businesses that install water-conserving equipment.

1999. The LWVTX worked on water quality and protection issues and on budget issues. The LWVTX had as a key priority the provision of money for water quality and quantity issues. The League successfully supported full funding for the ongoing regional water planning process set up by SB 1 in 1997.

The LWVTX joined environmental groups in asking the legislature to fund programs and employees in the storm water permitting process, a water quality program that emphasizes working to maintain the designated uses of specific rivers and streams, water quality improvement and water modeling, and revenue for the National Estuary implementation program for Corpus Christi and Galveston Bay areas. We met with mixed success, but have made an important stride forward in working on the legislative budget and appropriation processes.

The two most important bills, both opposed by the LWVTX, concerned ground water protection and a wastewater discharge bill that restricted the opportunity for public participation. The groundwater bill, originating in the House, was directed at the regulation of the Edwards Aquifer and would have put a moratorium on the pending Edwards Aquifer (protection) Rules that the League supported. The bill would have established a committee to study the rules adopted by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission that had not yet gone into effect. The League opposed the bill, believing that the rules offered increased protection to the contributing, as well as the recharge zone, and were already the result of a large amount of public participation. The bill did not pass; the rules went into effect June 1.

The second bill, which did pass and was signed into law, authorizes the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to lift the cap on wastewater discharges eligible for a general permit. Previously the law had a discharge limit, which if exceeded resulted in having to go through a permit hearing process. These general permits restrict the opportunity for public participation by replacing the contested case hearing process with a notice and comment provision. The bill was strongly opposed by the LWVTX and environmental organizations. This bill serves as an example of legislation that deals with more than one issue, in this case public participation and water quality.

2001. The legislature continued its examination of Texas water policy and planning. SB 2 (Brown), signed by the governor, revised the state regional water-planning process, established the Texas Water Policy Council, provided direction on water management strategies, and set up a comprehensive study of water resource issues that will occur during the 2002 interim. The bill strengthened the ability of underground water districts to control the pumping of groundwater. The bill also established the water infrastructure fund to be funded through the Texas Water Development Board. The LWVTX did not support or oppose (during the session or the election) a proposed constitutional amendment to authorize an additional $2 billion in general obligation bonds for water projects.

2003. For a session that was not supposed to deal with water there were a large number of significant bills introduced and passed. These include bills that:

- Deal with the Texas Water Development Board administration and funding, including the Water Infrastructure Fund, the Rural Community Water and Wastewater Loan Fund, and the Rural Water Assistance Fund.
- Consolidate various agricultural assistance funds.
- Create the Water Conservation Implementation Task Force.
- Require all water conservation plans and drought contingency plans submitted with a water rights permit or financial assistance application to include specific, quantifiable 5-year and 10-year targets for water savings.
- Establish the Study Commission on Water for Environmental Flows, prohibits the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality from issuing a new permit for in-stream flows dedicated to environmental needs or bay and estuary inflows and clarifies that groundwater conservation districts may adopt different well spacing or production limits for distinct aquifers or for different geographic areas within their boundaries.
- Require the Texas Water Development board to study, investigate, and survey the development of water supplies from seawater desalination.
- Relate to notice of groundwater contamination that may affect a public or private drinking water well.
- Relate to (a) prohibiting the creation or enforcement of certain restrictive covenants that undermine water conservation, (b) the authority of certain nonprofit water supply corporations to establish and enforce customer water conservation measures, and (c) the definition, use, regulation, and permitting of grey-water.
- Relate to requiring water rights applicants and holders, water utilities, and conservation and reclamation districts to adopt and implement certain water conservation measures.
- Relate to lawn irrigation and rainwater cutoffs, wastewater, the discharge of wastewater into waters of the state, storm water, land application of sludge, and water supplies.

Bills that would affect low-flow toilets and washing machines conservation standards did not pass. Two other water bills that did not pass addressed issues relative to small community water systems that face exceptional physical or financial circumstances in attempting to comply with federal Safe Drinking Water Act requirements relating to naturally occurring material. This legislation could have led to the loss of federal funds.

2005. The latest super water bill, SB 3 (Armbrister) (in line with SB 1 and SB 2), died in the House,a victim of late filing and bad timing. The bill would have covered conservation, groundwater, in stream flows, protection of the bays and estuaries, and other topics. At the last moment representatives were looking for bills to attach environmental flows and the protection of the bays and estuaries amendments. However, no significant water legislation passed. Senator Armbrister filed a bill in the special session dealing with Article I of SB 3, environmental flows and bay and estuary protection, but the bill was not added to the governor's list for the special session. The governor had said that school finance took priority before anything else would be considered.

2006. SB 1, the 2nd 5-Year State Water Plan was adopted in the fall following statewide hearings.

2007. HB 3 (Puente), supported by the LWVTX, creates a basin-by-basin process for developing recommendations to meet in-stream needs, requires the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality to adopt recommendations in the form of environmental flow standards, and creates the Environmental Flow Advisory Group to oversee the process.

HB 4 (Puente), supported by the LWVTX, is a water conservation bill that represents the consensus recommendations of the state Water Conservation Implementation Taskforce established by the legislature in 2003. The bill establishes a statewide water conservation public awareness program to educate Texas residents about water conservation.

SB 3 (Averitt), opposed by the LWVTX, passed. This bill became a reservoir designation bill. The passage of SB 3 does not mean that reservoirs will automatically be built, but may set up conflicts that will take years to resolve.

2011. SB 332 (Fraser) originally attempted to reaffirm groundwater as a property right (rule of capture) by describing it as a vested property right. The result would have been to threaten the balance between landowners and the 97 local groundwater conservation districts that are the only community regulators of groundwater reservoirs. These reservoirs supply more than 60% of the state's water needs. In a compromise, the bill eventually just restated groundwater ownership as a landowner's property right. Had "vested" remained in the bill, it would have been a constitutionally protected property right, becoming a statute of common law.

The Texas State Supreme Court in the Edwards Aquifer Authority v. Day case answered the vested question in early 2012 when they ruled that water was indeed owned by the landowner. The full implication of this decision is to classify any restriction in the use or sale of a landowners' water as a legal taking that must then be remunerated. The problem now returns to the legislature and the courts to decide how to guarantee the best use of water for the people. In commenting on this Texas Court decision, the New York Times noted that Texas is the only state that "functions by the rule of capture, which allows landowners to pump essentially unlimited amounts of water. Elsewhere in the U.S. groundwater is a public resource" (March 18, 2012).

There were two proposed constitutional amendments relating to water passed by the legislature for the November 2011 ballot:

• SJR 4 (Hinojosa): This proposition is a product of the Sunset Advisory Commission recommendations on the ability of the Texas Water Development Board to issue debt. It authorizes the Texas Water Development Board to issue self-supporting general obligation fund bonds at its discretion and on a continuing basis (essentially a revolving fund). The Texas Water Development Board would thus have greater flexibility in targeting needs across a longer time horizon and increase their ability to meet needs of local governments that must upgrade infrastructure to meet growing populations. This amendment passed.

• SJR16 (Estes): This is the Water Stewardship Amendment that would add water stewardship purposes to the agricultural exemption option (open-space valuation option) for property tax valuations. According to the bill analysis, adding water stewardship purposes to the land management practices would give landowners "a tool to better manage their property and incentivize land owners to invest in projects that improve water quality and quantity for the state." This amendment failed.

Otherwise, this session was a disappointment for all hoping that the issues of water demands and shortages would be faced once and for all. The new, increasing challenges involving groundwater depletion, pollution and toxic spillage resulting from natural gas drilling and hydraulic fracturing will be in the forefront of water planning and permitting for some time to come.

2013. The LWVTX followed 23 bills during the session, of which seven passed. The most important water bill signed by the governor was HB 4, which sets up the Texas Water Development Board funding for implementation of the so-called SWIFT loan fund (State Water Implementation Fund of Texas) and bond sales to support the State Water Implementation Fund of Texas.

Also, this bill reorganized the Texas Water Development Board from being run by an administrative voluntary board of six appointed by the governor to a paid professional board of three, one each appointed by the governor, lieutenant governor, and speaker of the house, respectively. The reorganization of the Texas Water Development Board was effective September 1, 2013. However, the State Water Implementation Fund of Texas funds would not be established until the constitutional amendment proposal (SJR 1) passed by the voters in the statewide election November 2013. This vote would authorize the state to move $2 billion from the Rainy Day Fund to set up the funds. There were lots of pros and cons on this proposal, and the LWVTX undertook a campaign to pass the amendment, including a press conference, working with other groups, and working with local Leagues, sending them blue wristbands to show their support. The amendment passed by a wide margin.

2017. This session was not focused on water issues. And several good bills that passed in one house failed to be considered in the other due to tensions between the two houses over unrelated, tendentious issues, such as transgender person's use of public restrooms. So progress overall was limited.

The LWVTX supported bills to protect groundwater (see Land Use paper), surface water, encourage conservation, encourage rainwater harvesting, wastewater reuse, storm water control, desalination, and aquifer storage and recovery. Of these, HB 1648 was signed by the governor providing that any private water utility with over 3,300 connections to specify a conservation officer to be responsible for the utility's conservation plan. SB 59 was also signed into law providing more specific support from the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality for water and energy conservation planning by all state entities.

The League also supported many measures that would strengthen the Water Code and the administration of regulations by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality, the Texas Water Development Board, and the Railroad Commission, which has a great deal of enforcement authority for the drilling industries to prevent contamination of groundwater. The League supported many of the recommendations of the Sunset Commission in its review of the Railroad Commission. Of these, only a few were signed by the governor.

- SB 864 requires that groundwater conservation districts be notified if the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality receives an application for the use of surface water that identifies groundwater as a backup source.
- HB 2215 adjusted the due dates for groundwater conservation districts to adopt desired future conditions (31 Tex. Admin. Code, Pt. 10, §356.10[6]) of aquifers in order to harmonize with the dates for new iterations of the state water plan.
- HB 1818 (a) requires the Railroad Commission to develop an Alternative Dispute Resolution Policy (an annual plan for strategic use of its resources for monitoring and enforcing oil and gas violations) and publish a report of all violations and enforcement measures annually, and (b) provides fees on pipeline applications sufficient to cover administrative and safety enforcement activities.
- HB 1573 requires training standards for certified water loss auditors.

SB 347 specified that regional planning group meetings be subject to all open meeting provisions.

A very interesting bill that passed confirmed the legality of the contract that Midland had negotiated with an oil exploration company to exchange upgrades to its wastewater treatment plant for a guaranteed amount of treated wastewater to use in hydraulic fracturing. This seems like a win-win project that may be replicable in other places. Reducing the use of fresh water for hydraulic fracturing is an excellent conservation measure.

Several bills the League opposed also failed. Most would have rewritten state definitions and regulations in favor of regulating water as a commodity and reducing the time needed to approve a surface water permit, which would shift the balance in favor of developers by reducing protections for the public interest to be considered thoroughly.

The League also watched many bills that would have amended the process of developing the State Water Plan. SB 1511, the only one that passed, provides more hearings by the regional planning groups, the assessment of any strategies that were implemented and identification of impediments to the implementation of those that were not, and allows simplified planning, which means that if nothing has changed, every other 5-year update can be less comprehensive.

Pertinent bills that passed and were signed by the governor.

- SB 625 establishes a database of all special purpose districts with many specific data points required.
- SB 1009 limits information requirements.
- SB 1430 prioritizes handling of permits for desalination projects and limits time for appeals.
- SB 1446 loosens some of the notification requirements in contested case hearing on surface water permits.
- SB 1538 allows the use of the Floodplain Management Fund to collect information about planning, protection, mitigation, etc., and provide it to the public. Signed by the governor.
- HB 544 allows the Water Development Board to fund planning for water projects as well as implementation.
- HB 294 allows the Public Utility Commission to take over investor owned water utilities that do not comply with state rules in counties with over 2.7 million population.

Related measures passed and signed by the governor, of interest as governmental oddities.

- HCR 31 urges Congress to encourage the U.S. Department of Agriculture to change a regulation that requires a farmer to continue watering a crop that has already failed in order to collect on its crop insurance policy.
- HB 965 requires state correctional facilities to comply with local water restrictions in times of drought.
- HB 641 continues the Red River Boundary Commission that negotiates with Oklahoma over shifts in the riverbed.

2019. The 2019 Session offered a view into changing water perspectives in Texas. Clearly water, or a lack thereof, is becoming a concern for our lawmakers. Filed were numerous bills pertaining to groundwater and aquifer injection; that is the storage of water we have now, for use later. Creating laws around how water is measured and retrieved will likely continue as a focus while we become more sophisticated in our groundwater management approach.

The League supported numerous bills giving authority for these injection wells, in addition to the formation of an interregional planning council for state water planning and a bill directing the Water Board to conduct a study on aquifer storage and use across the state. A partner bill authorizing the Water Board to fund interregional projects was also filed and passed. We believe long term water goals for Texas are more easily met by increased partnerships across water sheds. After all, water knows no county lines, and infrastructure needs can be spread across the state for cost savings and innovation.

Aguifer storage bills that passed and were signed into law:

- SB 520 (HB 481) allowed the City of New Braunfels storage and recovery of water in a portion of the Edwards Aguifer.
- HB 712 authorized the Texas Water Development Board to conduct studies of and prepare and submit reports on aquifer storage and recovery and aquifer recharge projects.
- HB 720 clarified retrieval rights from aquifer storage wells.

We also supported HB 1044 which sought to expand definitions of the Edwards Aquifer to include the Upper Glen Rose. Sadly, this bill did not make it out of committee.

Planning as a focus (signed into law):

- HB 807 Requires the Texas Water Development Board (TWDB) to appoint an interregional planning council during each five-year state water plan adoption cycle. The council would include one member of each regional water planning group, to serve until a new state water plan is adopted.
- HB 1052 Board funding established in partnership with HB 807.

One planning bill LWVTX supported, HB 1059, related to the creation of a 10-member group each fiscal biennium to prepare a report on the use of green stormwater infrastructure and low impact development in the state. Governor Abbott vetoed the bill stating there were already provisions in place for stormwater study. The emphasis on green stormwater infrastructure was a key component of this bill. We hope to see something similar in the future and will offer increased support.

While Proposition 8, "creating a flood infrastructure fund that the Texas Water Development Board could use to finance drainage, flood mitigation and flood control projects after a disaster" was approved by voters, green planning remains an over-looked need for our state.

The League also supported HB 817 which would prevent dumping of toxins into the Edwards Aquifer. Sadly, this bill was left pending in committee. Fortunately, one bill with some teeth, SB 530, increased fines for polluting drinking water, public water supplies, and bodies of water from a penalty from $50 to $1,000 for each violation to $1,000 to $5,000. We hope this decreases the likelihood of intentional pollution in our waterways.

A big win for Texans, Proposition 2, calls for investment in economically distressed areas of the state through loans from the Texas Water Board. The proposition passed with a wide margin of support "allowing the Texas Water Development Board to issue bonds to fund water and wastewater infrastructure projects in areas where median household income is at or below 75% of the statewide median income level." This should offer relief to thousands of Texans, largely located near the border, who currently have little to no water infrastructure.

LWVUS Program Positions

This is a summary of LWVTX advocacy at the state level based on certain national League positions, and for which we have no corresponding state position. A complete record and explanation of all current LWVUS positions can be found in Impact on Issues (revised after each LWVUS Convention).

I. Representative Government

Promote an open governmental system that is representative, accountable, and responsive.

A. Citizen's Right to Know/Citizen Participation (Open Government)

1984

The League believes democratic government depends upon informed and active participation at all levels of government. The League believes that governmental bodies must protect the citizen's right to know by giving adequate notice of proposed actions, holding open meetings, and making public records accessible.

LWVTX Action: Open Meetings/Open Records

1987-89. The League supported a successful effort on the part of a coalition of several groups (Common Cause, news media) during the 1987 Legislature to amend the Texas Open Meetings Act to strengthen the provisions on executive sessions of public bodies, requiring them to tape record such sessions or file certified agendas. In the 1989 session the League supported successful legislation that strengthened the Texas Open Records Act by requiring agencies to make records available within 10 days after they are requested and establishing reasonable fees for copying records.

1997. The League supported a bill that would have prohibited closed-door staff briefings of governing boards in cities, counties, school districts, etc., a common practice throughout the state. The bill passed the Senate easily, was voted out of the House committee, but was killed when it was pointed out that the practice is already illegal under current law. Another League supported bill that would have mandated that private contractors, offering services formerly provided by the state, operate under the Open Meetings Act, did not come out of committee.

1999. Two important bills dealing with open meetings and open records statutes were passed during the session. The first bill removed a loophole that allowed governmental bodies to meet in secret without notice when called a "staff briefing." The second bill combined multiple changes in the open records act, preventing delay tactics and restricting the withholding of information.

2001. Although the League followed several bills, none will significantly affect the public's right to know. At the end of the session the League worked with Common Cause and the Consumer's Union to defeat several otherwise dead bills that were attached as amendments to still-alive bills. Two of these amendments would have closed certain records to the public. The League's biggest concern, a proposed constitutional amendment making privacy an explicit constitutionally guaranteed right, did not pass.

2005. SB 286 (Wentworth) and HB 634 (Baxter), both supported by the LWVTX, added educational requirement to the existing Open Meetings Act and Public Information Act for elected and appointed officials in Texas. This training was one of the legislative priorities of Attorney General Abbott. The governor signed SB 286.

Explanation: Recorded Votes

Texas is the largest of the 10 states that does not require that votes be routinely recorded by legislators' names. About half of the votes taken are by voice vote: all those in favor say aye, opposed nay. Legislators must request a recorded vote by roll call in the Senate and by electronic means in the House. Records of votes are published in the Texas Journal and are difficult to access by even competent computer users. The participation of citizens in the democratic process is hindered by the unavailability of voting records of their individual representatives.

LWVTX Action: Recorded Votes

2003. In April the Dallas Morning News began a media campaign to inform the public of when and how votes are recorded and not recorded. A Recorded Votes Committee was approved at the state level in August 2003. During the special session of the Legislature in the summer of 2003, Senator John Carona of Dallas introduced legislation to record nonceremonial votes. The efforts of the Recorded Votes Committee resulted in an action motion passed overwhelmingly at Convention 2004 in support of the constitutional amendment noted above. Throughout 2004-05 advocacy efforts were undertaken with written articles, educational forums, meetings with candidates for office, and lobbying of state representatives.

2005. League members can take pride in the progress that was made in the 2005 Legislative Session regarding the need to routinely record all substantive votes. In previous legislative sessions, bills for recorded votes were not even heard in committees. In 2005 both the House and the Senate changed their rules to make recorded votes easier and more frequent, and to have them posted on the Internet. Bills to require routinely recorded votes were heard in committees in both Houses, and the Senate passed a bill to record all substantive votes. The Senate vote was unanimous. Regrettably, the House leadership persisted in their opposition of the bill and did not allow a vote in the State Affairs Committee, although there were enough votes to pass it.

Efforts to make routinely recorded votes and public access to them a reality in Texas will continue in the interim and the 2007 Legislative Session. It is not unusual for a bill to take three sessions to pass. Our plans for future action include:

• Investigating the mechanics of recording votes in other states.

- Getting candidates and elected legislators on record regarding recorded votes during the 2006 primaries and general election.
- Continued education of our members and the public.
- Ongoing collaboration with newspapers and advocacy groups that support routinely recorded votes.

2006. History was made in the 80th Legislature when the House and Senate passed HJR 19 (Branch), a constitutional amendment to the Texas Constitution: "to require that a record vote be taken by a house of legislature on final passage of any bill, other than local bills, of a resolution proposing or ratifying a constitutional amendment, or of any other nonceremonial resolution, and to provide for public access on the internet to those record votes." The amendment was supported by the League and approved by Texas voters in the November 2007 election. This achievement is the culmination of work by a dedicated program chair and other League members who worked tirelessly since 1997 to advocate for recorded voted.

LWVTX Action: Open Government

2011. The governor signed HB 2973, known as the Citizen Participation Act or Anti-SLAPP legislation, which is an acronym for Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation. The new law places burdens on lawyers who want to file lawsuits on behalf of public figures or institutions in order to discourage people from investigating or complaining about the public figures.

Other bills supported by the League that became law include HB 336, requiring the posting on the Internet of political contributions and expenditures of public school board trustees in larger school districts. HB 2439 requires state agencies with more than 1,500 employees to allow employees to submit suggestions for cost efficiencies on their website. HB 2460 makes public retirement systems subject to the Texas Public Information Act. HB 2017 requires advisory committee meetings of the Texas Department of Motor Vehicles to be publicly accessible. SB 227 requires the Texas Medical Board to make public any remedial plans created to resolve complaints about physicians.

2019. Transparency and open government, among the pillars which assure that democracy works, were hot topics this session. Advocates in all sectors are unabashedly complaining that the once-robust Texas Public Information Act is hemorrhaging, and the League of Women Voters in Texas stands firmly with them.

This session the League of Women Voters of Texas is closely aligned with the Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas and the growing statewide Sunshine Coalition. The Foundation seeks to inform all about their rights and responsibilities as participants in our democracy, with the clear objective to protect and preserve the state's open meetings and open records laws. The Sunshine Coalition is working with state and local lawmakers, executives and other key policymakers to enact new provisions that strengthen Texas' Sunshine Laws, improve public oversight and rebuild trust in government operations and decisions. Both are nonprofit organizations.

Sen. Kirk Watson, D-Austin, and Rep. Giovanni Capriglione, R-Southlake, worked with the League of Women Voters through the Sunshine Coalition and Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas to pass SB 943, contracting transparency legislation that strengthens the Texas Public Information Act. In 2015, two Texas Supreme Court rulings had blocked public access to how taxpayer money is spent.

Watson and Capriglione also joined to pass SB 944, which allows better access to public records in a government official's private cell phone or email account. These records are already public by law, but SB 944 closes a "custodian loophole" and makes them easier to obtain.

This session's bi-partisan legislation will obligate governments to reveal the core elements of their contracts with private companies, including final dollar amount, key contract provisions, and line-item pricing. Information about public contracts with nonprofits that are performing government work, such as economic development agencies, will also be more readily available.

A bill we supported by Sen. Watson (SB 1318), which clarified when dates of birth should be made public, was left pending in committee. Businesses, journalists, and regular citizens use dates of birth for many purposes. Birthdates help to verify identity in the context of credit checks, providing loans, news reporting, etc.

Unfortunately, in dire contrast to what is discussed above, HB 2730 (Leach), passed and was signed by the governor despite opposition from groups such as the League and Sunshine Coalition. In most cases, the Anti-SLAPP law is a tool for regular Texans facing a David-and-Goliath court battle they cannot afford and do not deserve. HB 2730 will remove protections for people who get sued for defamation, for employers who try to protect their employees, for Texans who get sued by out-of-state corporations, and for consumers who write online reviews but have unknowingly signed non-disparagement agreements while clicking through the website. The law could actually prevent average citizens from getting a lawyer to defend them because of certain language.

B. Public Policy on Reproductive Rights

The League of Women Voters of the United States believes that public policy in a pluralistic society must affirm the constitutional right of privacy of the individual to make reproductive choices.

LWVTX Action - Access for Safe, Legal Abortions

LWVTX immediately began using this position for action and actively works to support access to safe and legal abortion. During each legislative session, we track legislation that affects abortion access and register our position for or against pending legislation. We frequently prepare written or oral testimony to be provided to various legislative committees.

During every Texas legislative session, bills are introduced to restrict Texas women's access to meaningful reproductive choices. LWVTX works with other prochoice groups to defeat these measures with mixed success. Unfortunately, Texas now has some of the most restrictive abortion laws in the country. Anti-abortion advocates have been successful in imposing a 24-hour waiting period before an abortion can be performed and have severely limited the availability of abortions after 20 weeks of pregnancy. They have passed laws that require parental consent for a minor to obtain an abortion and require a vaginal ultrasound prior to an abortion.

1983-89. During each succeeding legislative session, bills attempting to place various restrictions on abortions have been introduced. The LWVTX has worked with other prochoice groups to defeat these measures, initially with great success. But laws enacted in recent sessions severely restrict Texas women's access to meaningful reproductive choices. Also in recent years, prochoice groups, including the LWVTX, have broadened their focus in this area to include advocacy for women's access to comprehensive reproductive health services and for medically accurate sexuality education. In supporting these initiatives, the LWVTX has relied on the LWVUS positions on Health Care and Meeting Basic Human Needs. The LWVTX position on Health Care for Those of Lesser Means also supports advocacy for access to comprehensive reproductive health services. Following the 1989 U.S. Supreme Court decision in Webster v. Reproductive Health Services that gave states increased power to regulate abortion and threatened to overturn Roe v. Wade, prochoice groups in Texas, including both state and local Leagues, began organizing concerted responses to the escalating calls for restrictive legislation.

1990's. In 1995, for the first time, two restrictive measures were voted out of Senate committees. One would have mandated parental or judicial involvement in a minor's decision to seek an abortion. The other would have classified abortion providers as ambulatory centers, thereby driving the cost of the procedure beyond the means of most women. At committee hearings, the LWVTX presented testimony in opposition to both bills. Fortunately, neither measure garnered the 21 votes necessary to be voted for consideration on the Senate floor. By 1999, after many failed attempts in previous sessions, antichoice proponents were able to enact a parental notification bill, vigorously opposed by the League. Under its provisions, a physician performing an abortion on a minor must provide 48-hour notice to a parent. A judicial by-pass was provided as the only alternative to parental notification.

2003. Several laws were enacted that further compromise a woman's right to choose:

- An omnibus law implements a 24-hour waiting period before a woman can obtain an abortion, requires physicians to provide women seeking abortions with informational materials including misinformation linking abortion to breast cancer, and requires abortions after 16 weeks be performed in ambulatory surgical centers, making their availability and cost prohibitive for most women.
- Another law allows criminal or civil charges to be brought against anyone who causes the death or injury of a fetus, and defines an individual as "an unborn child at every stage of gestation from fertilization until birth."
 By thus giving a fetus status as an individual, this law opens the door to future measures and lawsuits that would undermine women's reproductive choices. The law also has the potential to interfere with a doctor's care of a pregnant woman, as a doctor might not be willing to perform certain procedures (such as amniocentesis) for fear of being charged with a crime if the woman lost the fetus as a result.

2005. Enacted setbacks to choice were in the form of amendments attached to the measure reauthorizing the Texas Medical Board. These amendments mandate parental consent for a minor's abortion (cf. the notification requirement enacted in 1999), and further restrict the already extremely narrow circumstances under which a woman can obtain a legal abortion in the third trimester of pregnancy to cases where the fetus has a severe and irreversible brain impairment or the women risks death or severe and irreversible brain damage or paralysis.

Other setbacks for women's health included two riders attached to the state budget: One diverted $5 million to crisis pregnancy centers whose chief mission is giving misinformation to pregnant women in order to discourage them from having abortions, rather than providing actual health care services. The other rider diverted $20 million from existing providers (including Planned Parenthood affiliates, medical schools, hospital districts, and health departments), displacing over 70,000 low-income women currently receiving family planning and other health care services from these entities.

On the good news front, the legislature passed the Medicaid Waiver bill, which instructs Texas Health and Human Services to apply for a federal waiver that will expand access to preventive health care and family planning services for low-income women, including screening for diabetes, cervical and breast cancer, hypertension and tuberculosis, as well as counseling and education on contraception. Unfortunately, a bad amendment attached to the waiver prohibits waiver funds from going to agencies that perform or promote abortions and limits coverage of information about and prescriptions for emergency contraception. Another victory was passage of a bill mandating hospitals to implement plans for adequate and comprehensive services to victims of sexual assault, though it regrettably does not mention emergency contraception.

2007. Although there were a couple of close calls, all of the bills filed during the 80th Legislative session that would have imposed additional burdens on Texans seeking abortions and/or abortions providers died. The state budget brought both good news and bad news for proponents of women's health and increased access to preventive and reproductive health care. New language was added to the rider passed by the 79th Legislature in 2005 that diverted $20 million away from proven providers of preventive health care and resulted in 33,000 fewer women receiving family planning services. The new rider restricted the Texas Health and Human Services from implementing the rider if it would adversely affect the number of women who receive family planning services. However, the Alternatives to Abortion program rider enacted by the 79th Legislature remained intact. The provision allows for allocation of $5 million to agencies that provide no medical services and do nothing to prevent unwanted pregnancies.

2009. For better and worse, status quo is an appropriate summation of the 81st Legislative Session in this program area. On the better side, no antichoice bills were passed, thanks in part to unrelated procedural maneuvers. Measures opposed by the LWVTX that came close to passage included those that would have (a) required an ultrasound prior to abortion, (b) authorized Choose Life license plates whose purchase would fund unregulated, unlicensed pregnancy centers, and (c) placed burdensome new reporting requirements on women seeking and physicians performing abortions, under the guise of protecting women from coerced abortions.

On the worse side, efforts to improve sex education in public schools and to expand low-income women's access to preventive family planning and other health care services were ultimately unsuccessful. Some of these efforts were encompassed in the Education Works bills and the Prevention Works bills strongly supported by the LWVTX. Kudos to Representatives Castro, Villarreal, and Strama who tried but failed, during the frantic waning days of the session, to attach amendments to an education-related bill that would have required information taught in sex education courses to be medically accurate.

Also for the worse, provisions included in the state budget opposed by the LWVTX impede women's access to preventive health care:

- Rider 56 diverts $20 million from expert family planning health care providers, such as Planned Parenthood, and gives it to Federally Qualified Health Centers that don't have the capacity to see large numbers of family planning patients. Since the rider was enacted in 2005, 70,700 fewer such patients have been served. A bright spot: New language was added requiring funds not spent by Federally Qualified Health Centers to go back to family planning providers who can use them.
- The Alternatives to Abortion program was also renewed, with increased funding that is directed to crisis pregnancy centers-organizations that provide no medical services and do nothing to help women prevent unintended pregnancies.

2011-2012. Despite vigorous advocacy by the LWVTX and other prochoice groups and individuals, women's health and reproductive choice were big losers in the 2011 Legislature and its aftermath.

Family planning funds and the Texas Women's Health Program. A budget cut of approximately $62 million from the state family planning program will leave an estimated 200,000 women without access to basic health services. Adding insult to injury, the budget actually includes an increased amount for the Alternatives to Abortion program that encourages women in crisis pregnancies to carry to term, often with Medicaid support. The Alternatives to Abortion program, which has an $8.3 million budget in the current biennium, provides no medical services, although it does make referrals to other government programs.

Although the Texas Women's Health Program was reauthorized, but the renewal application submitted to the federal government effectively excluded Planned Parenthood centers from providing Texas Women's Health Program services.

The federal government responded that excluding qualified providers is a violation of federal law and that funding for the Texas Women's Health Program would be withheld if Planned Parenthood were excluded. The state refused to back down. Planned Parenthood then filed a lawsuit against the state Health and Human Services Commission, alleging that it is unconstitutional to block Planned Parenthood from participating in the Medicaid Women's Health Program and depriving women of the right to choose their health care provider. The judge has issued a temporary injunction that allows renewal of the program and Planned Parenthood participation pending a full hearing and arguments from both sides.

Antichoice legislation/regulations.

Sonogram requirement. As passed and signed into law, Texas now has perhaps the most extreme pre-abortion sonogram requirement law in the country: it mandates that the woman receive a verbal description of the fetal image even if she opts out of viewing it. Further, although a woman may certify that she doesn't wish to view the fetal image, the law actually says that her consent to the medical procedure of an abortion is not informed if she doesn't view the image.

Choose Life license plates. This new law authorizes the issuance and purchase of Choose Life license plates. Proceeds from the purchases will go to eligible organizations that give assistance to pregnant women who are considering placing their children for adoption. But organizations that provide abortions or abortion-related services or make referrals to abortion providers are not eligible to receive these funds.

Funding restrictions. Another amendment to SB 7, the special session's omnibus health care bill, effectively bans hospital districts from using local tax revenue to fund abortions or risk losing state funding. The amendment allows exceptions if the woman's life is in danger or if the fetus has a severe fetal abnormality.

2013. As the regular session adjourned, the LWVTX and other advocates for reproductive choice and for comprehensive, affordable women's health care briefly rejoiced that none of the bills on these issues that the LWVTX opposed passed. In fact, none of them even received a vote from either chamber. Also preventive health care for women was a winner in the state budget that:

- Allocated $71.3 million in state funding for the Texas Women's Health Program. Approximately 90% of this was to replace lost federal funding because of the Affiliate Ban Rule enacted in 2011. This funding maintains the Texas Women's Health Program but shifts the funding source from federal to state dollars.
- Expanded the state's Community Primary Care program by $100 million to support women's preventive care, including contraceptive care for approximately 100,000 low-income women.
- Added $32.1 million to the Texas Family Planning Program to replace federal Title X grant funds that were awarded to the Women's Health and Family Planning Association of Texas instead of to the state.

Unfortunately, along with the death of the antichoice bills opposed by the LWVTX during the regular session, all of the prochoice and pro-women's health measures supported by the LWVTX also died without receiving votes.

In the 1st special session that immediately followed the regular one, the governor added "legislation relating to abortion procedures, providers and facilities" to the agenda. A number of abortion bills were filed but the ones that moved were companions SB 5 (Hegar) and HB 60 (Laubenberg)-omnibus measures banning abortion after 20 weeks, requiring all procedures to be performed in a mini hospital forcing women to make four trips to a clinic for a drug-induced abortion, and requiring all abortion doctors to have admitting privileges at a nearby hospital. The committee substitute for SB 5 added an exception to the 20-week ban for situations involving a severe fetal abnormality.

The battleground then moved to the House where the State Affairs Committee scheduled HB 60 and HB 16 (Laubenberg), a stand- alone fetal pain measure banning virtually all abortions after 20 weeks, for hearing. Hundreds of women (estimates as high as 700) registered to be heard. After more than 10 hours of testimony, with hundreds (including the LWVTX) still waiting to be heard, the committee closed the hearing.

The State Affairs Committee reconvened the next day and quietly approved both HB 60 and its companion bill SB 5, as well as HB 16. However Texas women's impassioned and eloquent stand against these antichoice bills began to receive national attention. The marathon testimony in the State Affairs Committee was widely reported and dubbed "the people's filibuster." With the full House set to hear SB 5 and HB 60, hundreds of motivated and mobilized reproductive rights advocates headed for the Capitol, most wearing orange as urged by organizers and many wearing orange tee shirts saying "Stand with Texas Women." After hours of debate that went on into Monday morning, the House passed SB 5 on a vote of 95-34 with 20 members absent.

As the bill moved back to the Senate for its final approval on June 25, activists began arriving early in the Senate gallery. Senator Wendy Davis began to filibuster against SB 5 at approximately 11 a.m., needing to continue until midnight in order to kill the bill. Filibuster rules prohibit the speaker from eating, drinking, taking bathroom breaks or straying off the subject of the bill.

As afternoon turned into evening, several senators challenged Davis with specious points of order, alleging that it was out of order for Davis to accept a back brace from Senator Ellis as she stood on the floor and that twice, her remarks had strayed from the subject and were not germane. Unfortunately, the points of order were sustained and as senate rules provide, the filibuster ended on the third ruling, shortly after 10 p.m.

Other prochoice senators then stalled a vote on the bill with procedural questions until 11:45 p.m. As Senator Duncan, presiding in place of Lt. Governor Dewhurst, was about to start the roll call on a procedural vote before the final vote on the bill, Senator Van de Putte interrupted with a parliamentary inquiry, asking at what point must a female senator raise her voice to be heard by her male colleagues. At that point, the gallery filled with prochoice supporters erupted in cheers that were taken up and echoed by others standing outside the gallery and all around the Capitol building. Midnight came and went and the bill died amid the cheering and chaos.

Governor Perry wasted no time in calling a 2nd special session for July 1, with abortion front and center on the agenda. With unabated passion, approximately 5,000 prochoice supporters, including many LWVTX members, assembled on the Capitol steps on July 1 to bring their message to legislators. The Legislature focused on SB 1 (Hegar) and HB 2 (Laubenberg), companion omnibus measures that mandated (a) prohibition on abortion after 20 weeks, (b) requirements that facilities where abortions are performed meet the standards of ambulatory surgical centers and that doctors performing them have admitting privileges at a nearby hospital, and (c) a requirement that physicians administer in person the two medicines used for drug-induced abortions and see the patient again within 14 days.

In the House State Affairs Committee, 3543 persons had signed up to speak but only 100 were heard. Then the action shifted to the Senate Health and Human Services Committee for a hearing on SB 1. LWVTX presented testimony, among thousands who had registered to testify.

Unfortunately, HB 2 passed both House and Senate and was signed into law by Governor Perry on July 18. During floor debate in the Senate, prochoice senators offered 20 amendments, ranging from proposals to add exceptions to the 20-week abortion ban for victims of rape and incest to requiring annual inspections of abortion facilities. All were rejected. The Texas Tribune reported the chants and cheers from the massive crowd of prochoice advocates gathered outside of the chamber but that the audience observing from the gallery remained mostly quiet and orderly throughout the proceedings, in contrast to the closing hours of the 1st special session.

2015. Those who oppose women's access to safe, legal abortions and to comprehensive, affordable and accessible reproductive health care were not content to rest on their laurels in 2015. Regretfully, these people worked to restrict access to safe, legal abortions even further, coming up with new, draconian proposals affecting women's health.

Access to safe, legal abortions.

The worst bill that passed. HB 3994 imposes significant and unreasonable restrictions on the judicial bypass option for young women seeking safe, legal abortions. The harmful provisions of the bill as passed include: (a) requirement that bypass petition be filed in the teen's home county (unless the county has a population under 10,000), (b) elimination of physical, sexual or emotional abuse as grounds for a bypass, (c) extension of the time (from 2 to 5 business days) in which judges must rule on bypass petitions, and (d) requirement that the minor's attorney and guardian ad litem be the same person. This omnibus judicial bypass measure will have an especially adverse impact on vulnerable minors who have been neglected, abused or abandoned.

Another bad bill that passed. HB 416 requires abortion facility personnel to take education and training on human trafficking. The measure as passed is thus a targeted regulation of abortion providers that should apply to all frontline medical personnel. Note that Planned Parenthood clinics in Texas have for many years been proactive in training staff to recognize and appropriately deal with trafficking victims.

Women's health care safety net.

Budget-the good news. The General Appropriations bill for 2016-2017 includes $50 million in new funding for women's preventive health care, including contraception. The Texas Women's Healthcare Coalition has called for thoughtful implementation that will 'increase the number of women served and help provide access for the more than 1.3 million Texas women in need of contraception and other preventive services.

Budget-the bad news. Unfortunately, the budget effectively removes Planned Parenthood's participation in the Breast and Cervical Cancer Screening program by stipulating that providers of these screenings must be eligible for the Texas Women's Health Program. (Planned Parenthood was excluded from that Program in 2011.)

Good bills that passed. HB 786 requires public employers (e.g., state agencies, local governments, public schools) to provide accommodations for mothers who need to pump breast milk while at work. According to the Texas Breastfeeding Coalition, 40% of mothers who return to work choose not to breastfeed because they anticipate lack of accommodations at work.

Note. On July 1, 2016, the Texas Women's Health Program and the Expanded Primary Health Care for Women program were consolidated into the Healthy Texas Women Program. The program provides pregnancy testing and counseling, family planning, breast and cervical cancer screenings, immunizations, and screenings and treatment for diabetes, high blood pressure and high cholesterol to low-income women. It covers minors as young as age 15 years with parental consent, including access to free birth control.

2017. The 2017 Legislative Session was very challenging for reproductive choice proponents. In the end, only one of the many antiabortion measures filed in the session was enacted and became law. But, unfortunately, that one is particularly heinous. However several measures that strengthen the women's health care safety net passed into law. Legislative attempts to ensure comprehensive, medically accurate sexuality education go nowhere.

Access to safe, legal abortions.

Very bad news. SB 8 (Schwertner), opposed by the LWVTX, is now law. As passed by the Senate, SB 8 requires burial or cremation of fetal remains after an abortion and also bans the donation of aborted fetal tissue for medical research. It also bans partial birth abortions, which are already prohibited by federal law.

In the House, an amendment was added to SB 8 (and approved when sent back to the Senate) that prohibits abortion providers from performing dilation and extraction abortions. Called "dismemberment abortions" by opponents of the procedure, it is the most commonly used and safest method of performing abortions during the 2nd trimester. The Texas branch of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists stated that such a ban would create "a dangerous environment for patients that would prevent doctors from having every option available when providing a patient with the best possible care in any given situation." A trial judge has blocked implementation of this prohibition pending the outcome of the litigation.

Women's health care safety net. Several supported by the LWVTX are now law. These include measures that address the recent disturbing spike in maternal mortality and morbidity in Texas such as requiring insurance coverage for maternal medical depression screenings during a Medicaid or Children's Health Insurance Program visit up to 1 year after a child's birth.

2017 special session. While we rejoice that vouchers for private schools and the "bathroom bill" did not pass in the special session, abortion access took several big hits. On the other hand, the crisis in maternal deaths in Texas received long overdue attention that resulted in a comprehensive bill addressing the situation.

Insurance coverage.

HB 214 (Smithee) passed, which prohibits private insurance companies from providing coverage for elective abortions unless a woman purchases a supplemental policy. The LWVTX and other reproductive rights advocates fought hard against this cruel measure that makes abortion unaffordable for many women, especially women of color, rural residents, and immigrants.

Women's health care safety net-addressing the maternal mortality crisis.

Passage of SB17 with bipartisan support was a big win for women's health advocates, including the LWVTX. Highlights of SB 17 as passed include:

- Continuation of the Maternal Mortality and Morbidity Task Force until 2023, giving more time for the state to directly address the causes of pregnancy-related deaths in Texas and demonstrating the state's commitment to reducing the high rate of maternal mortality and morbidity.
- Expansion of the duties of the Maternal Mortality and Morbidity Task Force to include study and review of health conditions and factors that disproportionately affect the most at-risk populations and best practices and programs in other states that have reduced the incidence of pregnancy-related deaths and severe maternal morbidity.
- Requirement that the Maternal Mortality and Morbidity Task Force compare the rates of pregnancy-related deaths based on the mother's socioeconomic status and consult with the Perinatal Advisory Council when - making recommendations to reduce the incidence of pregnancy-related deaths and severe maternal morbidity.

- Requirement that the Texas Department of State Health Services conduct a statistical analysis of the aggregate data for pregnancy-related deaths and sever maternal morbidity to identify trends, rates, and disparities; and empowering the Texas Department of State Health Services to convene a panel of experts to advise the department and the Maternal Mortality and Morbidity Task Force in developing recommendations for improving collection of accurate data.
- Requirement that the Texas Health and Human Services Commission evaluate options for treating postpartum depression in economically disadvantaged women, which could lead to improved access to mental and behavioral health screenings before and after childbirth.
- Requirement that the Mortality and Morbidity Task Force coordinate with the Texas Department of State Health Services to develop and make available to health care providers materials on substance use and best practices in substance abuse screening of pregnant women and a list of substance use treatment resources statewide.

2019. The most recent 2019 legislative session was again challenging for reproductive choice proponents. Emboldened by the current composition of the U.S. Supreme Court, abortion opponents proposed several extreme new laws. In the end, none of the extreme bills were enacted, but three bills affecting abortion were passed and signed into law.

H.B. 16, as amended by the Texas Senate, was signed into law. The so-called "Born Alive" legislation creates a doctor-patient relationship between a doctor and a child born during a failed abortion and imposes a minimum $100,000 fine on the doctor and criminal liability if the doctor does not provide the required care. Under the bill, a child born must be immediately transferred to a hospital. LWV actively opposed this bill, and the companion bill S.B. 23, because the legislation was unnecessary and was aimed at shaming women. This bill is an effort to intimidate and deter doctors from performing late term abortions. Late term abortions are rare.

S.B. 22, prohibiting transactions between governmental entities and affiliates of an abortion provider, was signed by the Governor. This legislation prohibits all transactions between a governmental entity and an abortion provider or an affiliate of a provider, specifically Planned Parenthood. The law not only cuts off all future state funding for these health care providers, it extends the ban to local governments. LWV opposed this bill for several reasons. In our written testimony, we pointed out that this bill would reduce women's access to necessary medical services, including preventative care, contraceptives, cancer screenings, and STD screenings. This bill would be harmful to thousands of low-income women.

SB 24 regarding counseling was enacted. Under prior Texas law, women must receive counseling and certain information prior to receiving an abortion. The new law prohibits the information from being provided by audio or video recording, and requires the information to be provided at least 24 hours before the abortion, orally by telephone on a private call, or in person in a private and confidential setting.

However, several bills restricting abortion rights failed to move forward. A heartbeat bill to restrict the time for an abortion to the 6th week of pregnancy, and another bill to prohibit abortion based upon the woman's reason for an abortion, both failed. Proposed legislation that would have required a pregnant woman to receive counseling by a third party (possibly a crisis pregnancy center) prior to abortion did not advance out of committee. A bill to appoint an attorney for the fetus in cases where a minor sought a judicial bypass from the parental consent requirement also failed.

Unfortunately, some good bills intended to ameliorate previously enacted harmful laws met the same fate. These included: elimination of waiting period before abortion and removal of unproved information from so-called informed consent to abortion materials.

Women's Healthcare Safety Net

LWVTX is a coalition member of the Texas Women's Healthcare Coalition. We track laws that impact women's health and access to family planning. We strongly advocate for the availability of long acting reversible contraceptives (LARCS) which enable women to have more control over when and whether to have children. We also advocate for post- partum care and for increasing Medicaid eligibility for women to take care of themselves and children.

2019. Positive news on this front includes a budget of $346,961,855 for the state's women's health programs including family planning programs – this is an increase of $62.3 million from last biennium's allocated amounts. It is not as much as our coalition partner, Texas Women's Healthcare Coalition, had advocated as necessary to account for the increase in Texas population.

II. Natural Resources

Promote an environment beneficial to life through the protection and wise management of natural resources in the public interest.

Resource Management and Protection

Support resource conservation, stewardship, and long-range planning, with responsibility for managing natural resources shared by all levels of government. Preserve they physical, chemical, and biological integrity of the ecosystem with maximum protection of public health and the environment.

1975,1978

Support environmentally sound policies that reduce energy growth rates, emphasize energy conservation, and encourage the use of renewable resources. (For full position, see Impact on Issues, LWVUS).

LWVTX Action

1973-76. The LWVTX became active in the energy area in 1973 when it recommended to the LWVUS Council the adoption of energy as an emergency study item. The study item was not adopted then, but Council directed that a series of energy briefs be published to give members background material on this timely topic. The following year, again with strong LWVTX involvement, an Energy Task Force was established at Convention 1974 and our first position on energy—relating to conservation—was the outcome. Our national study on alternate sources of energy was also strongly supported by the LWVTX at the LWVUS Convention 1976.

1980s. During the existence of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council and its predecessor agencies, the League was represented on advisory committees in the areas of conservation, solar, and nuclear energy. We worked diligently, but in vain, during the 1983 Legislative Session to prevent the demise of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council and the Energy Development Fund. We also supported legislation dealing with conservation, solar energy, low-level nuclear waste management, and funding of the Energy Development Fund. In the effort to increase use of renewable energy, we supported legislation protecting consumers (installer licensing, device testing) protecting users' access to sun and wind, providing assistance in financing installations, and establishing an energy conservation code.

During the 1980s the League was represented at several utility-consumer interaction meetings, where we pressed the utilities to encourage conservation and use of renewable energy to delay the need for more generating plants. We argued this would conserve both natural resources and capital while providing increased employment in the labor-intensive, pollution-free solar energy and weatherization industries. In 1985 we cosponsored a second electric utilities dialogue.

2007. Committee Substitute HB 3693, supported by the LWVTX, passed into law. It requires electric utilities in Texas to achieve energy efficiency and conservation. This bill improves and expands existing energy efficiency measures, allows better management of customer demand, updates energy codes, and requires state agencies to utilize equipment and appliances that are more energy efficient.

2011. None of the legislation that we supported passed in this legislative session. However, some of the other bills that passed may have positive impacts, such as HB 51 (Lucio III) that establishes high-performance sustainable-design standards for the construction of new state buildings and renovations for which the cost exceeds 50% of the value of the existing facility. These standards would apply to institutions of higher education, public education instructional facilities, and certain state agencies. HB 362 (Solomons) prevents property owners' associations from including or enforcing a provision in a real estate dedicatory instrument that would prohibit a homeowner from installing a solar energy device as defined by the Tax Code. The bill would void any existing deed restriction against solar energy devices.

B. Waste Management

Promote policies that reduce the generation and promote the reuse and recycling of solid and hazardous wastes. (For full position, see Impact on Issues (LWVUS).

LWVTX Action

Under this national position, the LWVTX has taken action on both municipal solid waste and hazardous waste issues.

1980s. Since the adoption of the position in 1973, the state League has worked for passage of container deposit legislation, actively participating in the Association for Beverage Container Deposits, publishing an advocacy paper in 1987, and submitting legislative testimony in 1989, to no avail. In 1983 the League helped draft the Comprehensive Municipal Solid Waste Management, Resource Recovery, and Conservation Act and served on a related Texas Department of Health advisory committee.

The LWVTX advocacy for proper hazardous waste management began in the 1970s and intensified in 1980 when Texas first sought Environmental Protection Agency authorization to implement the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. In 1981 the League obtained a grant from the LWVUS and sponsored an educational workshop and tour of hazardous waste management facilities in the Houston area. League legislative and administrative action in 1981-83 focused on the need for more stringent criteria for siting new facilities.

In the interim before the 1985 Legislative Session, the League testified on hazardous materials administratively. In 1986 the League intervened on behalf of the Texas Water Commission and the Texas Air Control Board in a lawsuit filed by the Texas Association of Business contesting the constitutionality of administrative penalty powers. During the sunset review process additional public participation opportunities and enforcement powers for the agencies that regulate hazardous waste were requested. During this interim a state League director served on the Governor's Hazardous Waste Task Force, which drafted consensus recommendations that led to passage of comprehensive hazardous waste legislation addressing most of the issues of concern to the League. Sunset reauthorization of the Texas Water Commission gave the agency the power to assess penalties in a case that was decided in 1989 in favor of the state agencies, a victory for the League. The Texas Supreme Court affirmed this decision.

During the mid-1980s, the League played an educational role on the controversial issue of hazardous waste incinerator ships. The LWVTX send an observer aboard an incinerator ship in the North Sea. It participated in Environmental Protection Agency briefings and a Keystone Center national policy dialogue on the role of the oceans in hazardous waste management.

1985. The League completed the major part of the Keystone Education Project, a 2-year League effort to educate communities about hazardous waste management and the Keystone site selection process for community involvement in the site selection of new hazardous waste facilities. The project included sponsorship of workshops in six industrial areas of the state and publication of informational materials as well as a training manual for those who serve on Keystone local review committees.

The League commented on rules implementing the comprehensive hazardous waste legislation and fee system and lobbied for waste reduction. Legislative activity focused successfully on preservation of the joint and several liability clauses of hazardous waste laws during the legislative efforts to reform the tort law system.

1989. Since 1989 the League has been represented on the Waste Reduction Advisory Committee, a policy advisory committee to the Texas Water Commission and its successor agency, the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. The League supported a policy that would require industry to reduce waste at the source. In October 1990 the Texas Water Commission adopted the Waste Reduction Advisory Committee policy on waste reduction, which required industry to move toward source reduction, to work toward recycling and neutralization of toxins, and to move away from injection wells, incineration, and land-fills.

1991. In the 72nd Legislature the League supported bills calling for waste reduction and pollution prevention. These included a comprehensive hazardous waste reduction and pollution prevention bill that passed, making significant changes in regulatory programs in Texas. This legislation called for a temporary moratorium on new permits for commercial hazardous waste facilities, a greater role in the site selection process for citizens' groups, needs assessments, and requirements for source reduction.

The League has also been represented on Task Force 21: Waste Management Policy for the Future, a Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (formerly the Texas Water Commission) advisory council made up of representatives of industry and environmental groups. The task force has worked on development of regulations to bring state agencies into compliance with existing law. See next section, Public Participation, for more on Task Force 21.

The League supported an omnibus recycling bill, addressing many League concerns, which passed. The law charged the General Land Office with coordinating a recycling market development study, implementing a strategy for expanding markets, and developing and implementing a recycling awareness campaign.

1993-95. Unfortunately, the sessions did not continue the progress made in 1991 toward pollution prevention, waste reduction, and recycling goals. Despite League opposition, bills were enacted in that limit the power of local governments to regulate what goes into their local solid waste streams and that encourage the environmentally unsound process of mixed municipal solid waste composting. The League has continued to monitor development of regulations to implement the comprehensive waste minimization and recycling legislation enacted in 1991. We have submitted comments on proposed composting regulations and the adoption process.

1999. Following denial by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission of a permit for low-level radioactive waste disposal at the state site near Sierra Blanca in West Texas, the legislature worked on and debated a bill that would have allowed private facilities to receive low level waste. The issues of disposal are complex and involve an interstate compact Texas has with Maine and Vermont, the licensing of private entities, site selection issues, groundwater protection, full public disclosure and participation, as well as the kind and volume of waste. Following a public forum held by the LWV of Midland and discussions with LWVUS, the LWVTX decided to oppose the legislation that failed to pass the legislature.

The bill would have mandated the use of assured isolation (above ground) storage, an alternative to burial. Following the failure of the bill, the governor used the pocket veto to remove the second- year budget for the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority. The Agency's functions will be transferred to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. The issue of low-level nuclear waste disposal will be an important interim issue as the state continues to look at the need for a low-level waste disposal site, the type of disposal that can be used, and licensing and permitting issues.

2001. The LWVTX worked with other groups to defeat HB 3420 Permanent Management of Low Level Radioactive Waste Act, which would have created privately operated, for-profit waste disposal facilities in West Texas, left the state with liability, and possibly led to contamination of the Ogallala Aquifer. A number of serious questions were raised that helped bring about the bill's defeat: site selection, liability, kind, source and amount of waste, problems of cleanup, and a total lack of public participation in addressing the concerns raised during the process.

2003. The 78th Session will be known as the one in which Texas finally, after many years and legislative sessions, adopted a low-level nuclear waste disposal bill (HB 1567) that was signed by the governor. One of the bad aspects of this bill will be the acceptance of mixed waste, which means a combination of hazardous waste and low-level radioactive waste, in particular federal mixed waste. The final bill kept the 6 million cubic yard cap on total federal waste, but increased the B and C cap to 600,000 cubic yards. Texas is now in line to become the dumping ground for the hottest low-level radioactive waste, even waste that is not allowed at the low-level site in Utah. The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality will permit a private facility and will begin writing rules for the permitting in mid July.

The League was not successful in killing or modifying the low-level radioactive waste disposal bill, but the positive aspect is that we worked very well with members of a coalition, Beyond Nuclear Power. The LWVTX suggested improvements would have prohibited a private company from holding the license for long-term management, prohibited importation of out-of-state waste for storage, used assured isolation (above ground) storage instead of below ground burial, minimized waste transport, kept waste near the site of generation, and increased the role of the public in decision making.

2005. The LWVTX held a press conference on February 28th in Austin with Representative Mike Villarreal, Representative Pete Gallego, Sierra Club, and Public Citizen to express support for the representatives' legislation concerning the importation, storage, and disposal of low-level nuclear waste in Texas. HB 1656 (Villarreal) directed the governor-appointed Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact Commission to contract to accept waste only from the initial compact states (Texas, Vermont, or Maine). This would amend the existing law to close what is known as the compact loophole. As currently written, the existing law allows the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact Commission, representing Texas and Vermont, to enter into an agreement by majority vote with any person, state, regional body, or group of states to import low-level radioactive waste into the compact facility. The Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact Commission would consist of six commissioners from Texas and one commissioner from Vermont.

HCR 85 (Gallego) requested that the lieutenant governor and the speaker of the House of Representatives create a Joint Interim Committee to study issues relating to the importation of radioactive waste into Texas, and that this committee submit a full report including findings and recommendations to the 80th Texas Legislature in January 2007. Recent actions by the Federal Government and requests by a private company, Waste Control Specialists, applying to the Texas Commission of Environmental Quality for a license to dispose of low-level radioactive waste in West Texas have brought to light the expansiveness of Texas law when it comes to the importation, storage, and disposal of radioactive wastes. Currently two state agencies, the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality and the Texas State Department of Human Services control the management and disposal of low-level radioactive waste. The Federal Government has reclassified the by-product from concentrating highly radioactive ore from the Congo as 11-e-2 waste, a low-level radioactive waste classification. This waste is managed by the Texas State Department of Human Services. Waste Control Specialists is in the process of requesting an amendment to their current Hazardous Waste License to bring this waste to West Texas. The 11-e-2 waste is in addition to the low-level radioactive waste allowed by HB 1567 (2003) permitting the disposal of both the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact and Federal Government waste by a private company in Texas. Since passage of that legislation another possible low-level radioactive waste stream has developed. A multinational company, Louisiana Energy Services, has applied for a license from the Federal Government to operate a uranium enrichment facility near Eunice, New Mexico. This facility would produce low-level radioactive waste that could be imported a few miles east into West Texas for disposal.

The issue is complex to begin with and has become more complex due to actions by the Federal Government, a for-profit private company, and the expansively written legislation from last session. Neither HB 1656 nor HCR 85 passed.

2006. The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality is reviewing the application for the Andrews County low-level disposal site.

2007. The LWVTX achieved goals from the last three legislative sessions with the passage of SB 1604. The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality will regulate activities associated with storage, processing, and disposal that relate to uranium mining and radioactive waste, including activities at the permitted low-level radioactive disposal site in Andrews County.

2011. HB 1504 and SB 1605 passed in the 82nd Texas Legislative Session, relating to low-level radioactive waste disposal at the Waste Control Specialists Federal Waste Control Facility being constructed in Andrews County. While the bills were a mixture of protections of the health and safety of people and the environment, many aspects are not healthy or safe for either. On the whole, the legislature opened Texas and the site to the liabilities of out-of-compact waste in a significant way that is ultimately expensive and unsafe for Texas.

SB 1504 (Seliger) allows out-of-compact radioactive waste to be imported with certain restrictions. It includes an annual limit by volume and curies for imported waste, sets a total limit on how much of the site's capacity may be used for imported waste, directs the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality to study the anticipated capacity of the dump site, and clarifies the authority of the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality related to importation. Additional sections of the bill dealt with other matters.

Improvements made in SB 1504 due to advocacy.

- The capacity study date was changed to 2012 from 2014.
- The bill was amended to ensure that Waste Control Specialists must amend their license to accept out-of-compact waste.
- A financial assurance study, which includes assessment for unplanned events or accidents to protect the State of Texas and local governments' budgets, was commissioned.

The LWVTX worked for improvements to SB 1504, but was not successful in all areas. Points that need to be addressed include: (a) a capacity study before beginning importation of low-level radioactive waste since the three results of existing studies are so varied, (b) a transportation study to examine emergency preparedness and liability to the state and local governments for accidents resulting from increased shipments of radioactive waste on highways and railways, (c) tighter limits that spread importation over the expected lifetime of the site, (d) clarification of the ratemaking process, and (e) a full study of dangers to nearby groundwater because the results of existing studies are inconsistent.

SB 1605 (Seliger) provides stronger guidance to the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact Commission, stating that it shall operate and be funded independently of the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality and requiring that bylaws be in place prior to the commission reviewing import applications. However, this bill eliminates all six of the current Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact Commissioners, giving Governor Perry authority to fill the vacancies midway through the original terms of his first six appointed commissioners.

The LWV sponsored a forum with six panelists for legislators, their aides, and the LWVTX and community members on February 8, 2011, in the Capitol to provide information about the issue. The forum was well attended and appreciated.

Other legislation that pertained to hazardous waste. Senate Bill 329 (Watson and Chisum) that passed will have television manufacturers take back and recycle obsolete televisions, keeping toxic materials such as lead and mercury out of Texas landfills and water sources passed. This bill is one of the rare environmental victories during the 2011 Texas Legislative Session. The League spoke in support of this and other recycling legislation.

2013. The 83rd Legislature was generally a success for the environment and conservation. Several laws were passed that help reduce hazardous materials being released: legislation dealing with clean energy development, water conservation, and significant increases in state funding to state parks and clean air programs. Numerous bad bills failed that would have rolled back environmental regulations and curtailed citizen participation in environmental decision making. Stopping and slowing the release of hazardous materials help create a cleaner Texas environment.

Compared to other states, Texas ranks 4^{th} in total amount of toxic releases into water and 5^{th} in releases into the air. Texas ranks 4^{th} in the amount of recognized cancer-causing carcinogens released into the air and 5^{th} in releases into the water. Texas ranks 1^{st} in the amount of hazardous waste generated.

Some legislation with benefits to public health and the environment are the expansion of the successful Texas Emission Reduction Program and the renewal of the Texas Chapter 313 economic development program, which will allow Texas to continue being the nation's leader in wind power. Each will help with reducing hazardous materials released into the air and water.

In terms of the state budget, significant gains were made in funding essential environmental programs, including using dedicated environmental funds for their intended purpose and not diverting them or allowing them to build up to help balance the state budget. While the legislature ultimately did little to address the problem with dedicated funds across the board, some improvement was made in using parks and clean air funds, which had accrued tens of millions in unspent fund, for their intended purpose.

In other legislative areas, there was mixed success in oil and gas regulation. Positive measures passed included improvements to gathering line safety in rural areas, increased fines for pipeline violations, increased funding for the Railroad Commission, and the setting of regulations for saltwater pipelines. A good resign-to-run provision in the Ethics Commission Sunset bill, which would have prohibited Railroad Commissioners seeking statewide office from collecting campaign contributions from the energy companies they regulate, was vetoed by the governor. And a good Senate bill dealing with water permitting for hydraulic fracturing failed to advance in the House. In addition, a number of good bills dealing with beverage container recycling, paint take-back, and diverting electronic waste from landfills were derailed by industry groups.

Two bad bills, SB 347 and SB 791, dealing with uranium mining and radioactive waste storage were passed into law. One measure ends the ability of citizens to bring meaningful challenges on production area authorization permits for uranium mining. The other significantly increases the concentration of radioactive waste allowed to enter the Andrews County radioactive waste dump without taking adequate precautions to protect public health and safety around the site and on Texas roadways. The bill allows far more radioactivity to come to the site sooner and produces far more revenue for Waste Control Specialists by eliminating the annual caps on volume or curries at the site. This could allow an increase in radioactivity and allows for three times the waste to be stored on the site and transported across Texas. One section of the law appears to allow the executive director of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact Commission to modify the license without requiring a public hearing or public review, and another section appears to allow a huge fee waiver.

It is important to note that all eight of the nation's low-level radioactive storage dumps have leaked and the cleanup costs have ranged from $750 million to over $5 billion. The bill states that when the environmental radiation and perpetual care account reaches $100 million, fees charged to the company to ensure funds for cleanup are suspended.

2019. Several bills were filed in the House and Senate regarding the transportation and storage of low-level and high-level radioactive waste, carcinogens, and solid waste facilities. We would have supported all but two bills, but most were not even given a committee hearing. The five bills that got a committee hearing were SB 1021 (Seliger) OPPOSE, HB 2269 (Landgraf) OPPOSE, HB 4089 (Blanco) SUPPORT, HB 1391 (Bohac) SUPPORT, and HB 1435 (E. Thompson) SUPPORT. We gave testimony on the two we opposed: both bills passed their committees but were never voted on in their houses. HB 4089 and HB 1391 were left pending in their committees.

One bill did pass both houses and was signed by the governor: HB 1435. This bill requires state environmental officials to actually visit a proposed facility that will store, process or dispose of municipal solid waste before issuing or renewing a permit. It takes effect on 9/1/2019.

We gave testimony on May 30, 2019 to the Texas Low-level Radioactive Waste Disposal Compact Commission regarding Waste Control Specialist's transportation and storage process and site in Andrews County. We also testified on October 17, 2019 before the Environmental Protection Agency in opposition to their proposed policy amendments to their New Source Performance Standards for the Oil and Gas Industry. Both testimonies are posted on the LWVTX website.

C. Public Participation

1986-1988

Promote public understanding and participation in decision making as essential elements of responsible and responsive management of our natural resources.

LWVTX Action

1994. Commenting on proposed compost regulations (see Environmental Protection and Pollution Control above), the League objected to the circumventing of the public participation component during the rule-making process.

1995. In recent years, public participation has emerged as a focus of the LWVTX advocacy efforts in the area of natural resources. During the legislative session, the League testified in favor of a measure that would establish the independence of the Office of Public Interest Council of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission and ensure adequate public representation on the Office of Public Interest Council. We testified against a measure that would have weakened the Office of Public Interest Council duties. Both bills died in committee.

A law enacted in 1995 directed the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to develop criteria to determine who is an affected person/party in the permitting/hearing process. The LWVTX will monitor to determine if rules are proposed that would limit public participation in permit hearings.

Public participation issues led the League representative to Task Force 21 (see Environmental Protection and Pollution Control above), along with representatives of other public interest groups, to resign from that advisory council in 1995. These representatives felt the advisory council's decisions had been reopened and undermined during the legislative session. The League also objected to legislative action that resulted in loss of expense reimbursements for representatives to groups such as Task Force 21.

1997. Public participation in the environmental decision-making process was one of the LWVTX two priority issues during the 75th Legislative Session. The League, working with environmental and consumer groups, helped draft more than a dozen different pieces of legislation that would have increased public participation in environmental decision making, but none passed and most never left committee. A bill directing the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to do an annual enforcement report that will allow enforcement comparisons over a 5-year period was the only League supported public participation bill signed into law. Some bills that the League opposed passed: a cost benefit analysis bill, also known as paralysis by analysis, and the Pine Island Bayou Storm Water Control District bill. The latter was considered a local bill although it will affect a federally protected ecosystem, the Big Thicket.

1999. As in 1997, public participation in environmental decision making was high on the LWVTX legislative action list and, and as in 1997, again met with mixed results. On the positive side, an anti-contested case hearing bill, considered to be Public Enemy Number One, ended up as a bill that effectively enhances public participation by providing earlier notice and protection of the hearing process that is streamlined but retained. Upon hearing the serious criticisms of the original bill, the sponsor invited proponents and opponents of his original bill to sit down, discuss their differences, and try to mold a compromise. Representative Uher was successful, and the bill was signed into law.

To quote our lobbyist, G.K. Sprinkle, "We made a difference." We can point with pride to the fact that we made legislators look at the issue of funding the travel of the public on key Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission advisory committees. The League succeeded in incorporating a rider allowing the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to fund travel for public members to two key advisory committees.

A bill, supported by the League, that requires the responsible party to report accidental discharges or spills that may adversely affect a public or private source of drinking water within 24 hours. It provides the opportunity for public participation and notification, passed, and was signed into law.

On the other hand the Right to Know Right to Act Agenda did not fare well although early, timely notice was incorporated into the bill discussed above. The establishment of an independent Office of Public Interest Counsel at the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission and the environmental justice issues involved in the siting of landfills remain two important issues that have not been put into law.

The governor signed a law that will prohibit the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission from requiring computer modeling of air pollutant emissions from concrete batch plants if the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission does some modeling in establishing a standard exemption for such plants. This move which will increase the difficulty for the public in using valid scientific data to protect the air.

2001. As in the past few sessions, the LWVTX continued to lobby hard in the area of public participation in environmental decision making. Since the close of the 76^{th} legislative session, the LWVTX has been a member of the Public Interest Sunset Working Group and later a member of the Alliance for a Clean Texas. The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission Sunset/Reauthorization bill contained a number of changes that strengthen public participation in environmental protection, including:

- Cumulative impacts will be considered in issuing permits, an important environmental justice provision.
- Anonymous citizen complaints will remain anonymous.
- Timely responses by the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to complaints received during nonbusiness hours is now required.
- Citizen access to information and avenues for influencing permitting and enforcement decisions are now available. For example, all advisory committee meeting minutes, pending permit and enforcement actions, and compliance histories and violations by repeat offenders must be posted on the agency website.
- The role of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission executive director in contested case hearings is now limited to solely providing administrative information for the record.
- The mission of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission has been changed to bring balance to the role of economic development.

Another bill that strengthened public participation shifts the notice requirement for multiple plant air permits from the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to the applicant for the permit, requires that the applicant publish notice statewide, and requires that the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission provide an opportunity for a public hearing and submission of public comment.

The biggest disappointment was the legislative failure to create an independent Office of Public Interest Counsel at the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. However, a senate interim committee has been appointed to look into this issue that the League and its coalition partners have lobbied for during the past several sessions.

2003. As we have for a number of sessions, the League continued to follow the progress of reform of the Texas Commission on Environmental Office of Public Interest Council. Created by the legislature in 1977 to represent the public interest, the Office of Public Interest Council was the subject of intense scrutiny during the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission sunset review process in 2001. Legislation was filed to establish the independence of the Office of Public Interest Council, give the Council the right to appeal commission decisions to courts, and allow the Council to make recommendations to the legislature and participate in advisory committees. Advocates argued, "Only with similar access to trained legal staff and technical experts that those seeking permits have, can people effectively participate in agency decisions that have a direct impact on the health, safety, and environment of their community." In order to provide this level of expertise, the budget must be adequate to fund a technical staff or hire consultants to evaluate permit applications and other public interest issues that come before the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

Although the effort to make the Office of Public Interest Council independent passed the Texas House but ultimately failed, progress was made in protecting public participation. The sunset legislation authorized the Office of Public Interest Council to use outside technical support and to recommend needed legislative and regulatory changes. It directed the executive director to ensure that advisory committees, work groups, or task forces be used, and that these groups have balanced representation. It further directed the legislature to complete an interim study on the need for an independent Office of Public Interest Council.

The Interim Joint Committee on Natural Resource Public Interest Council charges were to examine (a) the authority of the Council (including the authority to appeal decisions of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission), (b) the resources needed to carry out the function of the office, and (c) the relationship of the office to other public assistance efforts in the agency.

The Alliance for a Clean Texas, and the LWVTX, a member of the Alliance, urged the legislature to adopt the recommendations proposed by the Interim Joint Committee. The Interim Joint Committee report recommended that the Texas Legislature:

- Give the Office of the Public Interest Council an independent budget, including $100,000 annually for outside technical expertise.
- Allow the Public Interest Council to appeal rules packages, if it appears that they were adopted without proper legal procedure or exceed the authority of the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality.
- Allow the Public Interest Council to appeal when the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission has substantially amended a proposal for decision from the State Office of Administrative Hearings and appeal is necessary to serve the broad public interest.

Although a number of bills were introduced, none of them passed. We will monitor the Office of Public Interest Council and wait for another session in which to reintroduce and support these proposed improvements.

III. Social Policy

A. Early Intervention for Children at Risk (Child Health)

1994

Support policies and programs that promote the well-being, development, and safety of all children. These include: child abuse/neglect prevention, teen pregnancy prevention, quality health care including nutrition and prenatal care, early childhood education, developmental services emphasizing children ages 0-3, family support services, and violence prevention.

LWVTX Action

2009. The governor's veto of House Bill 130, despite House and Senate passage of research-based, enhanced quality legislation, ended statewide coalition efforts to advance a full-day, high-quality prekindergarten policy. The veto did not eliminate the $25 million funding to the Public School prekindergarten expansion program, which will go to the state's existing prekindergarten grant program. This was the largest appropriations increase for prekindergarten in the nation.

Additional legislative oversight and contracting transparency passed for the State Center for Early Childhood Development. Increased funding was obtained for Texas Early Education Model, Early Childhood School Readiness Programs, and School Readiness Certification System. Plus, the passage of HB 635 (Guillen) allows Texas Head Start programs operated by school districts or community-based organizations to qualify for federal grant funding, such as the E-Rate Program that provides discounted access to technological and informational services in the classroom.

Other bills that passed include the following:

- SB 68 (Nelson) requires the Department of Family and Protective Services, before adopting school-age program minimum standards, to convene a temporary work group to advise the Department of Family and Protective Services regarding the proposed standards.
- SB 90 (Van de Putte) allows adoption of the Interstate Compact on Educational Opportunity for Military Children.
- SB 95 (Van de Putte) prohibits the sale or use of unsafe children's products; providing a civil penalty.
- SB 282 (Nelson) funds a grant program to provide nutrition education to children.

2017. Numerous cross-agency bills were proposed with only three bills overcoming political stalemate:

- HB 2039 created an early childhood teacher certification to teach students in prekindergarten through Grade 3.
- HB 674 set limits for our-of-school suspensions for students in prekindergarten through Grade 2 and permits school districts to implement positive behavior management strategies.
- HB 357 expanded prekindergarten eligibility to include children of seriously injured or fallen first responders.

The Texas Legislature cut appropriations for prekindergarten, eliminating the funding for the 2015 High-Quality Prekindergarten Program. Instead, legislators passed a budget rider simply directing all school districts to comply with the program quality standards using a portion of the Foundation School Program kindergarten entitlement, totaling $236 million statewide for the High-Quality Prekindergarten Program. Educators recognize the need for high standards, but the enforceability of the rider is in question. The best way to drive improvements is through high standards coupled with additional funding to support additional district investment in quality teachers, full-day options, reduced class size, or other improvements.

Legislators failed to improve (a) the transitional Temporary Assistance for Needy Families services, (b) nutrition standards in childcare, (c) a review of the Texas Workforce Commission subsidized childcare program, (d) a staff to child ratio and a group size incident reporting of licensed childcare study, (e) licensed before- and after school programs promoting healthy eating and physical activity, and (f) a task force to coordinate the multiple agency study of parent engagement education programs provided. The legislature also failed to reverse the 2015 therapy cuts for children with disabilities with a funding compromise to provide only a 25% restoration.

2019. Prior to the opening of the 86th Texas legislature, the Dallas Morning News published a series of articles on individuals covered by Medicaid Managed Care. These articles detailed poor administrative practices and inadequate oversight, resulting in negative medical outcomes and even death. As a result, various legislative committees held hearings and multiple bills were introduced related to Medicaid Managed Care. Most important for child health, HB 342, the Children's Health Coverage Bill, attempted to achieve 12 months of continuous coverage for children eligible for Medicaid. This was voted out of the House, but the bill and its provisions died in the Senate. Also related to maternal and child health, HB 25 authorizes a pilot program to allow medical transportation program services to a child if the child's mother is a recipient of Medicaid during a pregnancy, regardless of whether the child is also a recipient of Medicaid. Without this bill, a mother might not be able to take her newborn baby with her when she goes for post-partum care. This bill was passed by both the House and Senate and signed by Governor Abbott. HB 2099, designed to prevent managed care companies from switching medications or other treatments for non-medical reasons, died in a Senate Committee. HB 4533, which tightens Medicaid oversight, was passed and signed into law; SB 1207, which changes the appeals process and is meant to ensure fair hearings, was also signed into law.

Also prior to the legislative session, the Texas Mortality and Morbidity Task Force provided recommendations to reduce the high maternal mortality rate in Texas. The Task Force recommended increased access to health services for women on Medicaid. HB 744 attempted to extend Medicaid coverage to eligible women for one year after the birth of a child; this bill passed the House but was not taken up in the Senate. HB 253 requires development of a post-partum depression strategic plan, and SB 750 requires development of a treatment network. SB 748 requires a report on maternal mortality and morbidity in Texas.

B. Gun Policy

1990, 1994, 1998

Protect the health and safety of citizens through limiting the accessibility and regulating the ownership of handguns and semiautomatic weapons. Support regulation of firearms for consumer safety. (Position in Brief)

The League of Women Voters of the United States believes that the proliferation of handguns and semiautomatic assault weapons in the United States is a major health and safety threat to its citizens. The League supports strong federal measures to limit the accessibility and regulate the ownership of these weapons by private citizens. The League supports regulating firearms for consumer safety.

The League supports licensing procedures for gun ownership by private citizens to include a waiting period for background checks, personal identity verification, gun safety education, and annual license renewal. The license fee should be adequate to bear the cost of education and verification.

The League supports a ban on "Saturday night specials," enforcement of strict penalties for the improper possession of and crimes committed with handguns and assault weapons, and allocation of resources to better regulate and monitor gun dealers.

LWVTX Action

1993-95. Using this position several local Leagues opposed passage of legislation allowing Texans to carry concealed weapons. A concealed weapons law was enacted in 1995. The law required would-be weapons carriers to undergo training and be licensed by the state.

2001. Several gun control bills worked their way through the 77^{th} Legislative Session. Legislation, which did not pass, would have banned gun possession by juveniles convicted of felony-level crimes. Other legislation supported by the League, which also didn't pass, related to background checks of all sales at gun shows.

2003. There was a great deal of interest in who should be allowed to carry handguns and whether or not to allow gun permit holders in other states to carry handguns in Texas. The League strongly opposes the new law that took away the power of the cities to have gun-free zones on designated municipal property. Courts, schools, and racetracks were exempted.

2015. Texas continues to encourage the ownership and use of guns. Gun laws passed this session include an open carry law which allows concealed handgun license holders to carry a gun visibly and a campus carry law that allows concealed handgun license holders to carry their weapons on public school colleges and universities.

2017. There were over 200 bills filed this session with the words, handguns, firearms, or weapon. A good bill that is now law. HB 2359 made the discharge of a firearm in a public place illegal.

The ugliest bill that is now law.

- HB 1692 (Hefner, Bonnen of Brazoria, Dutton, Raymond, Huberty, et al.): Would not allow a school district, open-enrollment charter school, or private school from prohibiting a person, including a school employee, who holds a license to carry a handgun from transporting or storing a handgun or other firearm or ammunition in a locked, privately owned or leased motor vehicle in a parking lot, parking garage, or other parking area provided by the district or charter or private school, provided that the handgun, firearm, or ammunition is not in plain view. Died in Calendars Committee. Amended to SB 1566 on its second reading.
- SB 1566 (Kolkhorst, King): Several House members led a valiant effort to remove the amendment from SB 1566 on its third reading, but were unsuccessful. Passed and signed by the governor. Opposed by the Texas Association of School Boards.

Bad bills that are now law.

• SB 16 (Nichols, Huffman, Bettencourt, Burdwell, Buckingham et al.): Decreased the fee for the issuance of an original or renewed license to carry a handgun.

• SB 263 (Perry, Springer, White, Shaheen, Oleverson et al.): Removed the requirement that applicants to obtain or renew a handgun license be able to demonstrate the minimum proficiency of operating a .32 caliber or above handgun. Proponents argued that Texans should not be prevented from obtaining a handgun license because of physical injury or handicap or preferences for a caliber weapon.

Bad bills that did not pass. HB 375 and HB 1911 would have allowed persons eligible to purchase a handgun to carry without a license. HB 375 died in House Homeland Security & Public Committee; HB 1911 died in chamber.

2019. Several laws will go into effect that weaken gun regulations in Texas, yet not a single gun safety law was passed last session. We testified in favor of HB 86 (Martinez), creating a criminal offense for the reckless discharge of a firearm, but the bill died in House Calendars committee.

We also supported HB 316 (Howard) which would have required the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) to develop and implement a campaign designed to encourage firearm safety and improve public awareness on the topics of: 1) prevention of firearm accidents involving children, 2) suicide prevention and 3) the safe handling and storage of firearms. This bill was met with cries that the campaign would indoctrinate gun owners into giving up their "God given second amendment rights." This bill also died in the House Calendars Committee.

The Governor vetoed HB 1168 (Anchia), which would have prevented an airline employee from possessing a weapon in an airport operations area.

Bills we opposed that passed: HB 302 (Paul) allows open or concealed carry in apartment complexes regardless of the owner's wishes. HB 1177 (Phelan) which allows persons to carry a handgun during a declared disaster and in a shelter.

The governor has stated that there will be no special session to address mass shootings in Texas. Inaction is not a solution for Texas families and communities. So for now, we must look to our federal leaders for a solution.

PRIMARY ELECTION » MARCH 1, 2022

Governor » Lieutenant Governor » Attorney General » Comptroller of Public Accounts » Commissioner of General Land Office » Commissioner of Agriculture » Railroad Commissioner » Texas Supreme Court » Texas Court of Criminal Appeals » State Board of Education

EARLY VOTING: February 14–25, 2022 » ELECTION DAY: March 1, 2022. Polls open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

» EMPOWERING VOTERS. DEFENDING DEMOCRACY.

» VOTING IN TEXAS PRIMARIES

The upcoming Primary Election is extremely important for Texas!

Primary Election: Texas has open primaries, which means all Texas voters can participate.

- The Republican and Democratic Parties each choose their candidates in a primary election.
- The Libertarian and Green Parties each choose their candidates in a party convention.
- Since many districts in Texas heavily favor one party over the other, the primaries often determine the winner of the General Election!

Even if you do not strongly identify with any political party, you can and should carefully consider the candidate choices and participate in one of the primaries or conventions. Note: Once you have voted in one party primary or convention, you cannot vote in another party's primary or convention, and you can only vote in that same party's runoff election.

General Election: Voting in one party's primary election, convention or runoff election does NOT commit you to vote for a particular party or candidate in the General Election. You can still vote for any candidate of your choice, regardless of party, in the General Election.

» BE A TEXAS VOTER!

The League of Women Voters of Texas fights for the freedom of ALL Texans to vote. Your vote is your voice ... below are the ways to exercise your right to vote. Whichever way you choose to vote, be sure to first check your voter registration status at VoteTexas.gov! You must be registered before you can vote!

» VOTE BY MAIL

If you applied to vote by mail . . .

- Ballots are mailed out 30 to 45 days before an election or 7 days after the county election office receives an application.
- · Be sure to:
 - Mark your ballot using a black or blue pen;
 - · Place your ballot in the ballot envelope and seal it;
 - · Place the ballot envelope in the carrier envelope;
 - Complete all information on the carrier envelope, seal it, and sign the flap of the carrier envelope;
 - Pay attention to the voter ID requirements.
- Mail in your ballot as soon as possible. It must be received by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day.
- New: Track your ballot online at VoteTexas.gov!

If you want to hand deliver your vote by mail ballot . . .

- You may hand deliver your marked ballot in person to the county election office on Election Day while polls are open.
- You must show your photo ID when delivering the ballot, and sign a form.

» VOTE EARLY IN PERSON

- You may vote early at any voting location in your county.
- Find polling places at VOTE411.org or on your county election website.
- If you have a disability, you may request to move ahead of other voters in line.
- If in line before the poll closing time, you must be allowed to cast a ballot.

» VOTE ON ELECTION DAY

- In some counties, you can vote at any polling place.
 In other counties, you must vote at your precinct.
- Find polling places at VOTE411.org or on your county election website.
- If in line before the poll closing time, you must be allowed to cast a ballot.

» VOTE IN PERSON USING CURBSIDE VOTING

- If you are physically unable to enter the polling place without personal assistance or likelihood of injuring your health, you may ask that an election officer bring a ballot to your car.
- After you mark your ballot, give it to the election officer or hand it to a companion to deposit in the ballot box for you.
- It is best to call ahead so election officials will expect you!

» VOTE EVEN IF YOU ARE A SUSPENDED VOTER

You can still vote if your voter registration is in suspense! "Suspense" means that your county voter registrar needs to confirm your voting address.

» VOTE A LIMITED BALLOT IF YOU HAVE MOVED BUT NOT RE-REGISTERED

If you have moved to a new county and have not re-registered in the new county by the registration deadline, you may be eligible to vote a limited ballot in your new county. A limited ballot is one that allows you to vote on candidates and measures that are on the ballot for both your former county and your new county, such as statewide and national races. Voting a limited ballot is only available during early voting at the main early voting polling place.

» VOTER ID: WHAT TO TAKE TO THE POLLS

- · Texas Driver License
- Texas Election Identification Certificate
- Texas Personal Identification Card issued by the Department of Public Safety (DPS)
- Texas Handgun License issued by DPS
- US Military Identification card containing the person's photograph
- US Citizenship Certificate containing the person's photograph
- US Passport (book or card)

Note:

- IDs may have expired up to four years.
- Persons 70 years or older may use an expired ID, regardless of expiration date.
- ID address does not have to match the voter registration address.
- The name on the photo ID should match the voter registration card or be "substantially similar." If the names don't match exactly but are substantially similar, the voter will initial a box for a similar name when signing in to vote.

Registered voters without photo ID, who cannot reasonably obtain one, may sign a form (described below) and present the original or a copy of one of the following documents with the voters name and address to vote a regular ballot:

- Texas voter registration card
- Certified birth certificate

- Current utility bill
- · Bank statement
- Government check
- Paycheck
- Any other government document such as an out of state driver's license or expired Texas driver's license.

The form to be filled out by registered voters without a photo ID is a "Voter's Declaration of Reasonable Impediment or Difficulty." The voter must mark on the form one of the following reasons for not providing a photo ID:

- · Lack of transportation
- · Disability or illness
- Lack of birth certificate or other documents needed to obtain an acceptable form of photo ID
- · Work schedule
- · Family responsibilities
- Lost or stolen identification
- Acceptable form of photo ID applied for but not received.

Voter Harassment

- Election officials cannot question a voter about the use of an ID type.
- Poll watchers may never question a voter about Voter ID issues.
- If you are harassed, call the Election Protection Voter Hotline!

GOVERNOR

Four-year term. The governor is the chief executive of the state. The governor appoints members to boards and commissions; appoints statewide executive officials, and, when vacancies occur, state judges and district attorneys; delivers the State of the State address; provides guidance to the legislature; calls special sessions of the legislature and sets the agenda. The governor can veto legislation (including a line-item veto on appropriations), sign legislation, or allow it to become law without their signature. Current salary: $153,750

» Michael Cooper (D)

Qualifications: I was the President of the Southeast Texas Toyota Dealers association when I secured the naming rights of the Toyota Center. It is we're the Houston Rockets play. My team had great confidence that I could secure the more than 100 million $ contract.

Elections: I was arrested in Washington DC fighting for voter suppression bills that are now Law. As Governor I will beto those bills and call special sessions to revoke those bills.

Power Grid: It is common sense Governing as we just do the required maintenance. The current Governor is so focused on not working with a Democratic President. We should do repairs beyond what the federal Government requires. The same oil and gas companies made millions on Texans that donated 1 million in to his campaign.

Health Care: Again I have skin in the game as I arrested protesting in the streets of DC, against the heart beat bill. As a person that studied the HIPPA LAWS as I achieved my Masters in Psychology I found out that your medical issues are private and no one else's concerns. As Governor I will work to over turn that law.

Immigration: It is the federal Governments job to secure the boarder. We can work alongside them, but we should not spend 250 million dollars on a fence that does not work. We need to spend any extra money or donated money on teachers pay raise, repairing Dilapidated schools and money for pre-K for all children. We should make all remaining non-citizens - citizens sooner than later.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

If a State or local official is not acting in kind towards the citizens, I believe we would never had integrated schools if it were not for the federal Government forcing Governor Wallace to allow Blacks in all white schools. In Texas we are run by a Republican Party does not recognize all people equal. The federal Government should pass the John Lewis voters act to help.

» Joy Diaz (D)

Qualifications: Learned about public service from missionary parents who served people who lived in garbage dumps in MX City Former public school teacher & public radio reporter who learned about the intricacies of TX from the stories of Texans Graduated UT's LBIWCS

Elections: In a Joy Diaz administration, we will ensure that everyone who is entitled to vote, has access to safe and secure elections. Recent restrictions in Texas affect families like mine. My husband is a naturalized US citizen - the perfect target for some of the state's recent voter purges that only serve to intimidate and even suppress the vote. Those laws have to go.

Power Grid: We need to ensure fines to companies that don't winterize are not symbolic — meaning, fines are not cheaper than winterization. At the moment, they're a cheap loop-hole. Texas' focus ought to be - first - to protect the lives of Texans. The interest of for-profit companies should be second. To ensure oversight, the PUC board can't be made up solely of political appointees.

Health Care: As a woman who has gone through all her reproductive cycles & as the only woman on the Dem ticket running for governor - my goal is for every woman in TX to have access to an array of options - from free and easy access to contraceptions to - if necessary - abortions. She and her doctor are the only ones who can decide over her reproductive life. The disrespect stops now.

Immigration: The Constitution establishes the federal government controls the border - therefore immigration has been and always will be a federal responsibility. But, Texas has a role to play. We need to partner with both the US and MX governments. At the moment, TX has not been a helpful partner. Instead, state policies have contributed to the chaos for political gain.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

Only extreme circumstances merit the intervention of the federal government in state matters. The same is true for the state overpowering local governments. By "extreme", I mean emergencies such as natural disasters or circumstances in which public health or human rights are threatened. During COVID, TX has overpowagainst the wisdom of health experts.

» Beto O'Rourke (D)

Qualifications: Beto O'Rourke is a fourth-generation Texan, born and raised in El Paso where he has served as a small business owner, a city council member and a member of Congress. He founded Powered by People, a Texas-based voting rights and service organization.

Elections: We can't have fair, safe, and secure elections if our laws are designed to make it harder for communities of color to vote. We must repeal SB1 and then pass online and same-day voter registration, establish nonpartisan redistricting commissions, require the convenient and fair allocation of voting sites, and expand eligible forms of voter ID. Power Grid: To ensure power for all Texans we must weatherize all elements of the grid – including gas supply, connect to the national grid, provide backup generation at critical facilities like nursing homes, invest in targeted energy efficiency programs, starting with low-income Texans most in need of ratepayer assistance, and provide immediate relief and protection for ratepayers.

Health Care: We should trust Texas women to make their own reproductive health care decisions. If elected governor, Beto will immediately work to repeal SB8 and the dangerous system that places a bounties on the heads of anyone who supports a woman in deciding her own future.

Immigration: We need predictability, order, and the rule of law at our border. We need a governor willing to collaborate with, not work against, the federal government to enforce our immigration laws and update those laws when they don't meet the challenges of today.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

The divisions of authority between state and federal officials and state and local officials, are described in the federal and Texas constitutions (and subsequent statutes), respectively. An elected official's authority should be limited when the official acts in excess of their constitutional and statutory authority or otherwise violates the constitution or law.

» Rich Wakeland (D)

Qualifications: Licensed Engineer & Attorney & Business Owner; Policy Advisor to Commissioner Anderson, Public Utility Commission of Texas April 2013 - April 2018; Retired nuclear submarine Navy Reserve Captain w/ 4 Commands; Power generation and ERCOT expertise.

Elections: Trust but verify! Make registration simple, secure and verifiable. Increase the time period for early voting. Remove restrictions on Church organized voter turnout efforts and restrictions on Church organized voter transportation.

Enable Church based efforts to register their parishioners and deliver them to the polls.

Power Grid: Reliability can be achieved by a balance of thermal & renewable generation coupled with grid and generation testing. Since 2015 ERCOT has lost 3,000 MW of thermal generation while experiencing growth of over 17,000 MW of wind & solar. An 83%-17% thermal to renewable ratio provides reliability and allows Texas to satisfy the EPA's Clean Power Plan goals. Invest in Texas!

Health Care: U.S. Supreme Court Decisions establish the law of the land, whether or not one agrees with the decisions. Attempts by states to subvert or undermine those decisions are a direct attack on the U.S. Constitution. Women must have the right to control their own bodies. Texas women who seek abortions consistent with Supreme Court law should not be denied access by state laws.

Immigration: None, Both party's administrations have been inept at stopping illegal immigration; therefore do not follow the federal government's approach. Immigration is caused by economics. Texas must build an economic wall, not a physical wall. If we make them pay to be in Texas, we will reduce illegal immigration. Don't wait on the Feds, Texas can take its own economic action.

Autonomy of State and Local Government: Federal limiting of State Officials: Only if the health, safety, or welfare of the public is in danger by state official's actions. State limiting of Local Officials: Only if the health, safety, or welfare of the public is in danger by local official's actions. Authority for decisions should be held at the lowest level of government to keep citizens engaged and empowered.

Qualifications: Although possessing no political experience, I am a criminal defense attorney and as such have a very strong personality and strong prescence. My ability to navigate through many jury trials have given me the proper tools and education to be elected.

Elections: We should all want secure yet accessible elections. I believe voter id and poll watching are viable non-restrive options. Also I am not opposed to expanding voter locations IF properly secured and against voter fraud. We all should strive to make voting accessible, yet those elections should be valid and elections with integrity. THOSE elections we can trust as valid.

Power Grid: Power grid needs to be managed by Texans. Texans know Texas and as such Texans should govern over the power grid. It is my understanding that the turbines in certain areas are still not insulated and ready for what happened last year. This is unacceptable. People in charge need to take charge and ensure that protocols are developed and followed; if not consequences result.

Health Care: As a criminal defense attorney, I am bound what is called "The Rule of Law." At this time, Roe v. Wade is the law of the land. Texas has tried indirectly to supplant that decision and it will be interesting to see what the result will be as not everyone agrees with Roe v. Wade. At this time though it is the seminole case on reproductive rights, but that may change soon.

Immigration: State government especially a border state such as Texas should have great authority in enforcing federal immigration laws, hoever, in reality we as a state do not. The Feds normally prosecute illegal aliens. Our hands are tied somewhat in that if we take a position contra to that of the Feds, the Feds threaten and do at times with hold certain state funding; unaccepatble.

LWV

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

Federal government should only limit the authority of elected state officials in very limited and special circumstances as any intervention by the Federal government could lead to an intrusion on the 10th Amendment. As to state government limiting authority, I believe at times it is necessary when the actions and/or policies of local officials adversely affect Texas State.

Qualifications: Current Small Business owner and manager of a $6 million dollar per year business that is growing in size every single year. Former: Texas State Historical Commission; Former Luxury hotel manager. Former Rural Development Specialist Elections: I would propose making our local national guard units conduct fair and secure elections for all counties.

Power Grid: That is a simple question for me. I think we need to improve old electrical grid infrastructure and make it compatible with cuirrent usage demands. Simply put, some of our older lines that went down had never been replaced and when we chose energy deregulation to get cheap electric, companies like Oncor and Texas New Mexico and others stopped investing.

Health Care: I strongly support the idea that Roe must be overturned in the courts and the abortion under any voluntary circumstance should be made illegal. Point blank it saves lives and public money. Immigration: We need a human shield and our national guard should be used as a wall until we can get one built. Point blank—if the Federal government is not going to protect our border then Texans will and if we need to deputize and train Texans to serve and defend our border then I say that we do it.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

Everything boils down to local support and control. Who knows better than local leaders how to manage their local government? Simply put—nobody. That being said, I do believe that County Judges and Mayors should operate independently, as well. They each have their own jurisdiction and they each should be able to make their own judgement calls for their constituents.

sibilities and hold people accountable for their results. I have compassionate and empathetic concern for post Pandemic Texans experiencing hardship. I bring Hope.

Elections: As Texans are allowed to vote by mail, every vote must be validated as true and correct to ensure accurate results. It should be electronically possible to verify the identity of voters. Election laws cannot be passed that would prevent Texans the right to cast a vote in an election, regardless of mailing in a ballot or voting in person at precinct. Power Grid: In order to alleviate power surges on the power grid, additional forms of power must be used to assure that the grid can service our growing population, including more wind turbines and Nuclear power plants. Nuclear energy has proved to be safe and efficient in other states. Infrastructure upgrades to the current power grid should be made for power surges due to weather.

Health Care: I believe there are alternatives to abortion, including many organizations that can assist a woman through gestation and delivery of a child. Adoption is an option. Due to personal religious beliefs, I cannot support the act of abortions. I believe life begins at conception.

Immigration: The federal government has neither the manpower or the ability to stop illegal immigrants from crossing our vast border without cooperation of state law enforcement personnel. People who pass through our border without proper documentation are breaking the laws of immigration and shortcutting the path to citizenship. Illegal immigration is an intentional crime.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

When federal laws are broken by states, federal government has a right to intervene and protect citizens.. The same authority is given to state government to protect the citizens of any municipalities. The system of checks and balances is the cornerstone of democracy and prevents individuals from taking the authority of heir office to detrimentally harm Americans.

» Rick Perry (R)

Qualifications: Originally the founding fathers set up our form of Government for citizen legislators to serve. We need more citizens to step up and less "experienced" politicians. I am qualified for that reason. I believe in the Constitution and will fight for it. Elections: It is extremely easy to vote in Texas. Texans need to have confidence their lawful votes will be counted and be assured that people who commit fraud are punished. Many jurisdictions now cannot be audited because there is no paper trail. We need auditable elections and harsher penalties for vote harvesting and voter fraud.

Power Grid: The deregulation scheme we have in Texas did not work last February. Yes deregulation can drive prices down, but as we saw in the power outage last year it also can be exploited by the politically-connected for profit. We need to ensure our grid is independent, secure, and reliable, and that it serves the needs of the people, not the politically-connected.

Health Care: Killing babies in the womb is not healthcare. Dressing it up as women's healthcare does not change that fact. Abortion clinics don't provide healthcare — they kill babies. Fifty-nine percent of abortions were people in their twenties. Seventy-four percent are black. Abortion is a genocide of a race of people.

Immigration: The Federal Government was created by the States. Texas is a sovereign State that is being invaded by hoards of immigrants that have no desire to make America any better than where they've come from. Texas has a duty to her citizens to secure the border and resist the Federal officials who are trying to undermine that duty.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

This issue is also about sovereignty. The Federal Government has no authority to limit anything in our State without our consent. The States created the Federal Government to serve them not the other way around. There is a reason why the Constitution limits what the Federal Government can do. Local officials should be limited when they act against the will of the people.

Qualifications: 20 year resident of Texas 49 years old Current: Television host, Blaze TV and Blaze Media

Former: Executive with Granger Industrial (Fortune 300 company) Senior church pastor in Georgia and Alabama

Elections: We must ensure legal, valid voter rolls. Texas must focus on in-person voting with absentee ballots utilized when legally necessary. We must not allow the practice of mail in voting or ballot box drops. Polling places must be easily accessible and a valid ID should be required. Ballots are to be counted manually and forensic audits should be utilized.

Power Grid: Our coal plants need to be turned on and not dormant. In our last weather crisis coal could have been utilized effectively and saved lives. Our grid must be maintained and managed properly by directors within the state of Texas. Green energy must no longer be subsidized by taxpayer dollars when they fail. More nuclear should be added when it makes sense financially.

Health Care: I believe that life begins at fertilization and is created in the image of God. Abortion should be illegal in Texas. In the case of a mother's health being placed at risk by pregnancy then there must be physician guided assistance. However that is a statistical anomaly that is extremely rare and should be handled on a case by case basis.

Immigration: State government must establish state sovereignty which includes protecting state borders from illegal crossings. Article 4 Section 7 of the Texas Constitution states that the governor is the commander in chief of the state with direct authority to enforce such immigration.

Autonomy of State and Local Government: In the case of constitutional violations or illegal actions or proceedings.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Four-year term. The lieutenant governor is powerful because of their position as president of the Texas Senate, where they appoint the chairs and vice-chairs of committees; appoint senators to committees; assign bills to committees; and control the Senate's agenda. The lieutenant governor is also a member of several commissions and boards, and serves as governor in the governor's absence. The salary is that of a State Senator when serving as President of the Texas Senate and that of the Governor when serving in that capacity.

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Qualifications: What training, experience and characteristics qualify you for this position?

Power Grid: What further changes, if any, are needed to ensure that Texas has sufficient power in times of extreme weather conditions?

Autonomy of State and Local Government: Under what circumstances should the federal government limit the authority of elected state officials? Under what circumstances should the state government limit the authority of elected local officials?

Health Care: What is your position on reproductive rights and how would you address the economic and health consequences for those who seek and cannot obtain abortions in Texas?

Public Safety: What are some solutions to enhance public safety in Texas? How do we balance these solutions with protecting civil rights?

» Michelle Beckley (D)

Qualifications: I was elected to the Texas Legislature in 2018 and became the first Democrat to ever represent District 65 in Denton County. I said I would fight for healthcare, education, & the environment and did. This led to an improved margin win in 2020.

Power Grid: The 87th legislature did not do enough. Texas needs to reverse the course of deregulation and consider the option of connecting back to the national grid. El Paso & Texarkana did not lose power like the rest of the state, both are connected to the national grid.

Autonomy of State and Local Government: Texas has been controlled by the GOP for over 25 years. State officials are running amuck due to checks & balances that no longer exist. The federal government needs to address the Voting Rights Bills. We saw our freedom to vote diluted as well as extreme gerrymandering in 2021. The state government should not interfere with local health regulations.

Health Care: The attacks on women's healthcare should not continue. I voted against HB8. There should not be $10,000 bounties on women & health professionals. A womans's choice on abortion is between her and her doctor.

Public Safety: I had a city come to me with the issue of a police officer that had been fired with cause now working at a neighboring city. Municipalities should be able to know this information upon hiring or the problems can't be addressed and will continue. Texas needs to look into solutions to address these issues and solve them.

» Carla Brailey (D)

Qualifications: I have served Texas as an educator, advocate, and Texas Democratic Party Vice-chair as a champion of people and working families. Equity in education, economics, opportunity, and justice is the best way to move Texas forward for all people.

Power Grid: We must fully weatherize our grid to prepare for extreme weather conditions. We need to fully accept the recommendations of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and prepare all of Texas for climate change. We must build better oversight, accountability, and transparency to insure Texans from another failure.

Autonomy of State and Local Government: It is the responsibility of each government entity to work together for the benefit of the people that they serve. We live and serve in a representative democracy and to limit the authority of a government to do what is best for the people is taking away their representation.

Health Care: I am in full support of a woman's right to make choices for her reproductive health. We must provide education and access to every woman in Texas to make the best choice for her and her family. We also must support women by advocating for safe abortions across this state and making way for that to happen even under this archaic law.

Public Safety: Every community should feel safe in their own home and neighborhood and experience their civil rights and liberties. We must start with continuous training for our officers with emphasis on inclusion and diversity, including (1) recruiting, hiring, and promoting women in leadership and (2) increasing community-centered policing, particularly in communities of color.

Qualifications: Mike spent his career as a CPA and an auditor at PriceWaterhouseCoopers before becoming a CFO of a Texas energy company, helping create good-paying jobs. His experience as an accountant gives him a deep understanding of how our state's budget works.

Power Grid: For years, our state leaders were warned about the grid's vulnerability and did nothing. As a result, Texans froze, Texans died, and corporations got rich. We must winterize our gas supply, invest in smart grid technology, and increase power storage. We must also ensure that Texas families do not pay more when companies pay less for an unreliable grid.

Autonomy of State and Local Government: If the behavior of any official is inconsistent with our constitutional rights, then it is the responsibility of the federal government, particularly the courts, to step in. That said, local control is key to accountability, and it's at the heart of a healthy democracy. So, as Lt. Governor, I will work closely with duly elected local partners—not against them.

Health Care: Mike will defend our constitutional rights so that women will be masters of their own health and their own destinies. The Principles laid down by Roe v Wade and have guided us for nearly the last fifty years are reasonable and are supported by the vast majority of Americans.

Public Safety: Mike will work to reverse laws that allow criminals to access firearms and put our

Qualifications: I am and have been a Local Precinct Chair in Denton Texas for the last two sessions and have been a delegate during that time as well. I have worked and supported abolition across this nation.

Power Grid: We need to oppose the federal Gov, rules and regulations. Nullification would work just fine.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

I believe Texas needs to oppose the federal Gov and leave the USA. It is time for Nullification to start with while we work on Secession.

Health Care: I am an Abolitionist, Abortion must become a crime. If Abortion becomes a crime 99% of it will go away. The Government is not the parent and people need to be responsible for themselves. Family and churches should step up and help. I believe in equal protection under the law and abortion is murder.

Public Safety: I believe we harshen many of the criminal penalties. Abortion, rape, murder, molesting, and attempted murder should be death penalty crimes. No more housing and parole for death penalty crimes. We need to allow everyone that is not in jail to carry a gun.

» Aaron Sorrells (R)

Qualifications: Successful small business owner with 26 employees and growing. Managed people most my life with corporations and now as an owner. I understand how to manage people, money, andl budgets.

Power Grid: Winterizing the grid is borderline impossible and ultimately won't work because when the roads are frozen, nothing can move on the road. We need to move away from green energy and start utilizing the resources of Texas like Natural gas plants, Clean Nuclear, and coal. No one is going to make those plants though when they are only utilized in an emergency. Too expensive.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

The federal government only has authority delegated to them by the Constitution. Anything outside of that belongs to the State. It's that simple. We no longer follow those rules and that's why we are in this position today.

Health Care: There is no such thing as a reproductive rights. I don't care how the left wants to word it. This is another way to get around the concept of Abortion. Abortion should be abolished. I do not believe we should criminalize the women who still manage to get abortions illegally and instead prosecute the doctors that disobey the law. Public Safety: There are no solutions to enhance public safety. Safety is an illusion. Our government was not meant to keep us safe and protected. It was meant to keep us free. The government needs to stop interfering in our lives and we will have less civil rights problems because most people just want to go to work, live their lives, and be left alone.

» Zach Vance (R)

Qualifications: I am truly a good person who loves Texans and wants to make their lives better and easier. I'm a Marine who will always do the right thing, especially when no one else is looking! And most importantly I believe in bipartisanship and working together.

Power Grid: I believe we can have both affordability AND reliability. Energy companies and gas providers make enough money to ensure that they are prepared and protected from extreme weather WITHOUT additional costs to the consumer. If elected I will charge the "Temporarily Winter Storm Surcharge" on your utility bill to gas providers that posted profits of 20 percent or higher.

Autonomy of State and Local Government:

The balance between Federal, State, and Local control is a tight line to walk. The line breaks though when ANY of the elected officials stop doing what is in the best interest of the whole and only do things to appease their base. I believe most authority should remain under local control, but it depends on the issue. I believe city and county leaders know what is best.

Health Care: I believe in freedom and limited government and that means that lawmakers don't have the right to tell a woman she cannot choose when to become a mother. Instead of focusing on ending abortion, the state needs to focus on giving foster children better lives and make it easier for loving families to adopt a child. Abortions should be easily accessible and affordable.

Public Safety: We need to severely punish violent criminals, thieves, sex criminals, and people who use a firearm to commit offenses. Helping women get out, and stay out, of abusive relationships will be a top priority of mine. As well as severely punishing the offender/abuser while doing a better job of protecting the victims. Texans safety is of the utmost importance to me!

Elections: What is the Attorney General's role in protecting Texans' freedom to vote while maintaining safe and secure elections?

Health Care: What is your position on reproductive rights and how would you address the economic and health consequences for those who seek and cannot obtain abortions in Texas?

Immigration: What is the role of the state government in enforcing federal immigration laws?

Priorities: As Attorney General, what would be your highest priorities for the next four years, and how do you intend to accomplish them?

» Mike Fields (D)

Qualifications: I am a former Harris County Assistant District Attorney, former Assistant Texas Attorney

General and Retired Judge of twenty years. I have a Criminal Justice degree from Texas State University and a Law Degree from St. Mary's Law School. Elections: The Attorney General should ensure that all laws passed concerning voting rights and redistricting pass Constitutional muster. If they don't, the AG should work to see that they do. Health Care: I firmly believe all persons, even those who choose to make the difficult decision of terminating a pregnancy, are "pro-life." Suggesting otherwise is unfair and offensive. Women should have free access to reproductive care and a Constitutionally protected right to make their own reproductive decisions. The AG should fight to make that right a reality.

Immigration: Federal laws should be left to the federal government. The full faith and credit of the United States depends heavily on the consist application of our federal laws. When individual States interfere in the consistent application of our laws, the entire Nation suffers.

Priorities: Texas is seeing unprecedented population and economic growth due, in large part, to our business friendly laws. My highest priority would be to ensure that laws regarding voting, equal rights, reproductive rights and civil rights for all, including the LGBT community, continue to encourage that growth.

» Rochelle Mercedes Garza (D)

Qualifications: I have experience in immigration, family, criminal, and constitutional law. My work has resulted in the "Garza Notice," a requirement that teens in immigration detention have a right to access abortion, reinforcing a constitutional right nationwide.

"election integrity unit" — which is really about enforcing the GOP's voter suppression measures, instead of protecting voting rights — and replace it with a voter protection unit under a fully funded civil rights department. I will ensure voting rights are protected, not undermined, especially for voters of color.

Health Care: Abortion care is health care, and health care is a human right. Reproductive choice is a moral imperative and an issue of racial, economic, and gender justice. I'm committed to restoring abortion access in TX and defending the rights of women and pregnant people anywhere they're threatened. I've defended reproductive rights before and will do so as TX AG.

Immigration: Immigration enforcement falls under federal jurisdiction. As an immigration attorney & border native, I understand the complexities of our immigration system. I have litigated against bad policies, like Remain in Mexico, that have created a humanitarian crisis at the border. Texas' enforcement efforts at the border are unconstitutional, wasteful and only worsen the issue.

Priorities: As AG, I will fight for our Texas families. This means protecting constitutional rights, including voting & abortion rights; consumer protection, so our energy grid doesn't fail; and prioritizing public health, so municipalities & schools can protect people in the middle of a pandemic and our rural communities have the infrastructure they need, like clean drinking water.

» Joe Jaworski (D)

Qualifications: Licensed TX attorney; 30 years' experience in trial/appellate litigation in TX state and federal courts. TX mediator; 8 years local govt. experience: councilmember, mayor pro tem and mayor of Galveston, TX. Mentored by my grandfather Leon Jaworski.

Elections: I will form a voter access unit from the ashes of the AG's fake voter fraud division because TX voters should turn to the AG's office when their voting rights are suppressed. District and County attorneys may initiate fraud prosecution to keep our elections safe, but access is the key. I will ensure principals are registering high school seniors. Elec. Code 13.046(d)

Health Care: I support the Rule of Law set forth in Roe v. Wade and Planned Parenthood vs. Casey. Abortion should remain legal and available before fetal viability outside the mother's womb. Government should get out of the way of family planning education and broad reproductive healthcare access. As Texas AG, I would advocate for these positions in court.

Immigration: State government should partner with the federal government to enforce federal immigration laws. For example, as Texas AG I would dedicate part of my $1.1 Billion budget to hire eight SAUSAs (Special Asst. U.S. Attorneys) to work under the direction of the United States Attorneys for the Southern and Western Districts of Texas to prosecute cartel immigration crimes.

Priorities: On day one of my administration, I will dismiss any lingering lawsuits brought by the Texas AG against the ACA before lunch. I will testify in the 2023 Legislature for cannabis legalization (for jobs, to help our veterans, and to give our police a break so they can fight real crime). I will ensure principals register every 18 year old pursuant to Tex. Elec. Code 13.046(d).

Elections: I am committed to engaging more voters, fighting gerrymandering, providing felons with the right to vote, making election day a federal holiday, providing drive through voting, and opposing voter ID legislation. I would also challenge voter suppression laws using, inter alias, the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Health Care: I will litigate on behalf of organizations that provide safe abortions, end over-policing of women who choose to have abortions, and work to expand accessible healthcare. I will work with law makers to codify the protections offered in Roe v. Wade and side with Texas women against extremist conservative legislation.

Immigration: It is a responsibility of the state government to take actions such as conducting immediate investigations on unfair conditions in detention facilities, fighting against private immigration centers, allowing access of overseers in immigration facilities, and providing more resources such as additional judges, attorneys, translators, and social workers at our borders.

Priorities: My highest priorities are to improve voter protection, ensure women's reproductive rights, and to protect our public schools. I will focus on engaging new voters through community outreach and work towards public financing of elections. I will cooperate with state and federal legislators to codify Roe vs. Wade. I plan to fight for policies like the College Act.

Qualifications: Fresh out of SMU Law School, I became General Counsel at a nationwide financial group involved in hundreds of lawsuits. I jawboned many Sec. of State. Managed two Pro Bono Legal Clinics. General Practice. I believe in balancing Science and Economics.

Elections: The A.G. needs to promote access and justice allowing each citizen to vote and for each vote to count equally. Five years ago, I donated $10,000 to The Carter Center for election monitoring. A.G.'s role is not to subvert democracy wasting millions. A role of the A.G. should be to help unvaccinated disabled citizens get current ID's through home visits so they can vote.

Health Care: U.S. Judge Jack scolds Texas for abandoning abused foster children-all 250 Texas facilities failed; Texas declined billions in Federal tax dollars for basic health care for millions of Texans who then clog our ER's when worried parents could have taken their kids to an Internist. I have protected children in CPS, assisted adopting parents. I support Planned Parenthood.

Immigration: United Methodist ministers got me to start a pro bono immigration clinic, Justice For Our Neighbors, staffed with SMU law students from all over the world. We ethically helped some folks but turned away others. My firm has assisted school Superintendents for years. The immigration system is broken and the border a mess. by mental health treatment; foster care sanctions using churches who have successful people who know how to help; our property taxes. Jail people committing fraud; collect child support.

» George P. Bush (R)

Qualifications: Candidate's response did not meet the criteria as listed in this Voters Guide.

Elections: The AG must ensure that our elections system is fair, just, and secure. As Attorney General, I will rebuild trust with our District Attorneys, lead the charge in prosecuting cases on election fraud and expand our state's election integrity unit.

Health Care: To me, nothing is more important than protecting life in Texas. As a lifelong catholic, where I stand on the issue is very clear. Life is not negotiable. Our children deserve an Attorney General who isn't going to just file lawsuits in the name of life, but one who can file suits and find innovative ways to win on behalf of the right to life.

Immigration: Our Attorney General is the first line of defense against the federal government. As Attorney General, I will: 1) Work with the Governor to deploy more National Guard troops to the Texas/ Mexico border; 2) Toughen criminal penalties on drug smugglers and human traffickers; 3) Finish President Trump's wall and continue building the Texas wall.

Priorities: My top priorities will be restoring integrity back to the Office of Attorney General, protecting our borders and elections, standing up to the federal government to protect Texans' constitutional liberties, and defending and standing with law enforcement. Texans can rest assured that I won't just file suit against the Federal Government, but I'll also win the cases filed.

Current salary: $153,750

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Qualifications: What training, experience and characteristics qualify you for this position?

Rainy Day Fund: What is the optimal amount to be held in the Rainy Day Fund and what is the criteria for usage? What is your opinion on using the fund to pay down the state's debt vs. using it to help citizens that have been harmed by catastrophes?

Taxes: In your opinion, what is the proper balance of tax revenues sources to fairly fund state government, including public schools?

Financial Obligations: What needs to be done, if anything, to ensure that Texas can meet its long-term financial obligations such as infrastructure maintenance, state employee pensions and health care coverage for public school teachers and employees?

Priorities: As Comptroller, what would be your highest priorities for the next four years, and how do you intend to accomplish them?

» Janet T. Dudding (D)

Qualifications: I'm a certified public accountant (CPA) who's spent my adult life in governmental accounting, auditing, administration and even investigations.

Rainy Day Fund: Government Finance Officers Association recommends a minimum of 2 months of regular revenue or regular expenditures be maintained in a rainy day fund. Typically, rainy day monies mitigate the risk of unstable revenues or unexpected expenditures. Natural disasters fall into the second category. The state of Texas' general obligation debt currently is rated Aaa/AAA/AAA.

Taxes: The Texas Legislature added $6.5 billion dollars in funding to public schools in 2019. Yet per a 2021 SPLC report, Texas currently ranks 40th in the nation. New revenue streams are needed. Legalizing adult-use cannabis could bring $1 billion in tax revenue (and decriminalization could save $300 million). Look at "green" taxes to build revenue streams from green energy.

Financial Obligations: Regarding infrastructure, Texas should accept the $35 billion of federal Infrastructure and Jobs Act dollars. With fuel efficient vehicles, it would be interested to look at creating a revenue stream from alternative fuels to maintain roads. Public school employees in all but ~12 school districts do not participate in social security and they should. Find the money.

Priorities: Comptroller has the bully pulpit on how our money is spent. Expanding comp mental health & healthcare to 1.4 million adult Texans saves $100 million in state tax and our property taxes. Work with local governments re broadband as a local utility, keeping the costs down and creating an income stream. Work with state agencies, reduce methane emissions on state property.

Public Affairs (UT-Austin) in the 1980's, then to Law School. I have been a practicing attorney since 1992. Rainy Day Fund: The Rainy Day fund was set up as a tool to smooth out a revenue source: oil and gas related tax collections. The Fund is not designed to correct chronic underfunding of state services. If there is a need for funding then the Legislature should find a way to provide additional funding. As Texas Comptroller, I will not play games with the important duty the position requires

Taxes: The proper balance between tax revenues and the proper funding of state government has been a wrecking ball. Texas officials have played a game of hide and seek regarding tax revenues and the adequate funding of state government for decades, especially including public schools. We need to break out of the secret codes and share information with our fellow Texans.

Financial Obligations: Long-term financial obligations are not filtered through the legislative process, partly because the Legislature does not care, and the Comptroller has been complicit with that intentionality. Building more powerful regional information structures can thwart the inaction of the Legislature. Building long term policy changes requires a sustained regional interest.

Priorities: The Texas Comptroller is the largest public data center in Texas, and we should begin to produce information in a transparent form that enhances every region in Texas. If we understand that there is more power in collaboration than in division, we can begin to build a Texas government that belongs to all Texans. Our Redistricting process should result in compact districts.

crisis, provide food assistance and guarantee public safety.

Taxes: Suppose we focus on boosting Texans entrepreneurship, attracting new business opportunities, eliminating the corporate tax loopholes, and reducing the unemployment rate to under 3%. In that case, the proper balance of tax revenue could be at 145 billion. For the spending budget, 140 billion annually, including public school funding and health care.

Qualifications: I have a BBA in Accounting from Texas A&M and began my career with Dresser Industries in Internal Audit and then worked as Texas Region Controller for GTE Mobilnet. Before starting Total Cellular Technologies later shortened to TC Technologies.

Rainy Day Fund: The Comptroller should seriously investigate a reduction in the state sales tax rate. Texas is blessed with a significant surplus. That equates to taxpayers of Texas paying too much in taxes. A sales tax is the most regressive tax there is and a 1/2% reduction would be a relief across all socioeconomic levels. A healthy reserve for Texas is good, an exorbitant one is not.

Taxes: Current property taxes are out of control. But that is the fault of a fundamentally flawed appraisal district process and local taxing authorities that refuse to lower tax rates to at least offset some of the increase in the tax base. It is unconscionable that Texans are getting taxed out of their homes while Chapter 313 is giving 37.5% discounts in ISD taxes.

Financial Obligations: These are critical obligations Texas has entered into and must be adhered. Even the completely egregious Chapter 313 agreements must be honored even though they will continue to cost Texas Taxpayers a $1billion+ per year until 2037. The Comptroller is derelict in his fiduciary responsibility by not reviewing whether the companies getting these subsidies are honoring their Priorities: The comptroller should be a watch dog on how the financial resources entrusted by the taxpayers to Texas as spent judicially. The legislature sets the spending plans, the Comptroller is in oversight to let the legislature know if the state is getting the best utilization of the taxpayer's dollars. Taxpayers know government needs funding, but not corporate bottom lines.

Qualifications: I have served as Texas Comptroller since January 2015. I began as a member of the Texas House in 2003 and continued my service as a member of the Texas Senate until my election as Comptroller. Working our family farm taught me hard work and integrity

Rainy Day Fund: Texas is blessed to have a strong Rainy Day Fund, which is designed and should be used to smooth out the state's revenues during an economic downturn, to assist in a disaster, and for one-time expenses that are strategic for Texas' economic health and well-being. I fought to manage these dollars more effectively to guard against inflation and protect them for generations.

Taxes: Funding public schools in Texas has been a shared burden split between state funds and local property taxes. Until recently the local share was allowed to grow unchecked creating increased pressure on local property taxes. I helped compress local property tax rates and rebalance the burden between state funds and local taxpayers. But now more must be done to lower taxes.

Financial Obligations: Since practically my first day in office I have sought to shine a light on the state's balance sheet and the need to address our long-term obligations. I fought to address threats to our state's fiscal health and ensure Texas teachers can access quality healthcare. I helped lawmakers pass historic pension reform to put our state on firm footing and avoid credit downgrades.

Priorities: I will continue to focus on the core constitutional duties of my office and that means maintaining my attention on the Texas economy. Navigating the last 2 years has been incredibly challenging, but I have always remained focused on the trends, challenges and opportunities in our state economy. We must fight to keep Texas a place where freedom creates new opportunities.

Priorities: As Land Commissioner, what would be your highest priorities for the next four years, and how do you intend to accomplish them?

» Jay Kleberg (D)

Qualifications: I grew up working on the King Ranch and have spent my whole career in conservation. I served as the Associate Director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Foundation, and now I own a landbased conservation business and work in environmental education.

Allocation of Federal Funds: I would use the GLO's discretion to administer federal funds to ensure that dense, urban areas are not penalized and that damage claims for lower income homeowners and renters are not ignored. I would also send teams into damaged communities to ensure the timely disbursement of FEMA funds and application for longer-term allocation of funds.

The Alamo: The Alamo is a symbol of Texan and Tejano pride and we should honor their contributions to the state. We should also consider the role of early Black Texans and slavery in Texas' history, as well as indigenous groups who inhabited the site for centuries. As for the battle, the GLO should tell the comprehensive story and honor the facts of those historic events.

Coastal Planning: The GLO will incorporate climate change modeling into the Coastal Management Plan, which will increase the standard for all federal and state investment on the coast. These higher standards would be applied to the Coastal Resiliency Master Plan and the $30 billion Coastal Spine. These standards would also maximize investments with GOMESA, NRDA, CEPRA and HUD-CDBG funds.

Priorities: My top priorities for the next four years are to adequately fund our Texas schools through the General Land Office's contribution to the Permanent School Fund, address the effects of climate change and diversify our state's energy portfolio to strengthen our grid, and to prepare for future natural disasters by fortifying our coast and other vulnerable areas of our state.

» Michael Lange (D)

Qualifications: See website. 40 years of small and large business, senior experience. GLO Budget is $3.4 Billion. 800 Staff. Managed large, diversified groups with intensive risk, investment and leadership skills. City Knowledge/Rural Wisdom. Skillset to serve.

Allocation of Federal Funds: Federal Funds Allocation should be prioritized by where people are suffering the most from the disaster. It is never a political decision. It is a human needs decision. Disaster Priorities are based on human needs. When people get hurt by disasters, they need immediate help to rebuild and more. The people who need it the most get it first. Prioritize according to need The Alamo: The Alamo is the Shrine of Texas Liberty and an essential part of the Spirit of Texas. The Alamo Defenders gave up their tomorrows so we could have Better Lives today. Most of the Alamo Defenders were Immigrants, like my family. People forget that. The Alamo is the symbol of Texas, the world knows. To be preserved for future generations.

Coastal Planning: Our Coast is at constant risk. Each disaster can alter the shape of the land, sometimes dramatically. We need to reinforce/enhance the natural barriers that balance nature and the environment. The eco-system is critical and must be maintained. We need to prevent construction that reduces the effectiveness of these natural barriers and erodes the coast. Be prepared always!

Priorities: 1. The Safety of the People of Texas. 2. All People Treated with Equal Respect 3. Be a Man for Others. 4. Work constantly to Better the Lives of All Texans. Ensure Texas Veterans and Gold Star Families have the best state benefits in the nation, my plan TEXAS HAS YOUR SIX. Improve Reading levels in K-12. Currently 45th in the Nation. Unacceptable. Qualifications: My expertise in trauma informed care, crisis management, my in-depth understanding of the legislative process, and the desire for educating my community, is a passion that has equipped me with the necessary skills to perform these duties.

Allocation of Federal Funds: Establish meaningful partnerships with all local governments and develop comprehensive insights on potential strains in our communities, is how we can pro-actively begin to manage and prioritize effectively. Mitigating and allocating relief from a natural disaster will depend on the areas hit, the socioeconomics in that region, and their resources.

The Alamo: When I visit other cities or a different country, and I tour their historical structures and monuments, my initial questions are always, 'how did it get here, who built it, and why?" In essence, the story of the Alamo can only begin at that point due to chronological logic, so by default the story will have to involve explanations on how that evolved.

Coastal Planning: Our Texas Ports alone, have an impact of nearly 1.8 million jobs and generate somewhere around $102 billion in personal income, so the protection of our coastline is imperative for supporting the financial well-being of citizens, and projects along the Coastline must provide the required maintenance, development, and improvements to sustain those areas.

Priorities: Disaster readiness and prevention with fine tuning the logistics involved are paramount. I want to create more programs and initiatives to help provide funding for public education.

Qualifications: Strong science background (B.S., M.S. biology), former teacher, licensed attorney, small business owner, years as community organizer and advocate at Texas legislature, working mom of 2 young children, proven record of fighting for what's right.

Allocation of Federal Funds: State agencies should not play politics with the lives and livelihoods of Texans. Distribution of disaster relief funds should be managed with everyday Texans who need it the most treated as the priority. No Texan should be waiting for years with a tarp roof due to unfair biases, mismanagement, and inefficiency.

The Alamo: History should not be politicized or used by state leaders to score political points. The story the Alamo tells must be a full and honest history based on facts, evidence, and the standard academic understanding. That story includes the perspectives, contributions, and experiences of all individuals involved—Anglo, Tejano, Mexican, Black, and indigenous peoples.

Coastal Planning: There is a lot to be done with our infrastructure in the coastal areas, including better construction to protect and restore our coastline and wetlands in combination with a robust scientific program. I also want to work with other organizations, NGOs, and government agencies that specialize in coastal wetland management, such as NOAA and Project Drawdown.

Priorities: I aim to bring all stakeholders to the table to craft proactive solutions including incentivizing development of renewables, preparing our state for weather disasters, and increasing funding for public schools by maximizing revenue generated by state contracts and advocating for an increase in the amount directed to the Permanent School Fund.

» Victor Avila (R)

Qualifications: As a retired Immigration and Customs Enforcement and Homeland Security Investigations (ICE-HSI) Special Agent, I have the firsthand experience necessary to provide the battle-tested leadership Texas needs to secure the border.

Allocation of Federal Funds: Flood mitigation must be our first priority. For every dollar we spend mitigating flooding or other factors, we save several times that amount in relief, as well as avert the human costs of natural disasters. Furthermore, by lowering the risks associated with natural disasters, we can drive down outrageously high flood insurance in coastal Texas.

The Alamo: I am proud of my Mexican-American heritage. No matter what others may say, the Alamo is a symbol of Texan courage and fortitude. It reminds us there are causes greater than ourselves for which we should be willing to lay down our lives. Recognition of the values that bind our nation together should be used to heal and unify, not to divide.

Coastal Planning: One of the most effective means to mitigate the damage caused by flooding is preserving coastal wetlands. Coastal wetlands also prevent coastal erosion and serve as a habitat to a variety of species. To that end, I plan to prioritize funding provided to the General Land Office through the Coastal Erosion Planning and Response Act (CEPRA) to preserve coastal wetlands. Priorities: We must secure the border by constructing the Texas wall. Construction of this wall is already underway, and the General Land Office is playing a key role as much of the wall is being built on public lands. After years of supervisory experience in the Department of Homeland Security, I have the knowledge and experience necessary to ensure Texas gets this project right.

Allocation of Federal Funds: I would immediately identify what communities were hit the hardest by a storm and also identify which communities have the most daunting path to recovery. We must ensure that these federal funds are going to communities that are directly impacted or are prone to be affected by the next storm on the horizon. Using the benefit of hindsight, we can plan before it's too late.

The Alamo: There will be no reimagining the Alamo under my watch. The GLO is the tip of the spear in defending our rich Texas history we know and love, and I will always fight to protect it.

Allocation of Federal Funds: As Land Commissioner receipt and allocation of funds for natural disasters is very important, since they effect our tidelands, gulf coast, oil & gas industry. Where our state lands and resources are involved, the funds would be prioritized to the areas most affected, such as the gulf coast and wind damage industry and development off shore.

The Alamo: The Alamo is our single most treasure of Texas Independence and the story should continue to be told of the defense needed to allow Sam Houston the time needed to fight the ultimate battle. The story is one of bravery by all the defenders to stall the army of Santa Ana in the fight for Texas independence.

ken and needs to be torn down to the studs. We need to be honest about that fact that Texas agriculture needs the labor. As commissioner, I will advocate to transform to a policy driven by our economic needs and implemented with humanitarian principles and compassion—just like we learned in Sunday School. Water Resources: The Republicans have failed to even try to solve this problem. The Department of Agriculture (TDA) can research & promote sustainable practices and less-thirsty crops, but must work across agencies such as the Land Office, the Water Development Board, local water districts & others, and with the Legislature for a comprehensive plan to protect water quality and supply.

Opportunities: Texas ag can flourish by growing more fruits, vegetables & high-value crops. California produces more than 80% of U.S. fruits and vegetables—too many eggs in one basket. We need to diversify & support small & medium size operators. Cannabis should be legalized & regulated to protect public health & safety giving Texans an opportunity to share in the economic opportunity.

Priorities: Economic survival, rural health care & climate change—and they are intertwined. I will look for opportunities, analyze the data, advocate to the USDA to change counter-productive policies, and help producers find a path to prosperity & environmental sustainability. Failing rural hospitals are an existential threat to rural communities and must be saved.

Immigration: If ranchers and farmers can't hire enough workers to meet market demands, we all suffer. I'll advocate for an immediate expansion of the H-2A visa program, so that we can alleviate labor shortages to help counteract the supply chain constraints faced by all Texans.

Water Resources: Texan farmers and Texan city-dwellers are deeply interconnected. The food, wood, raw materials, and water that comes from our rural environments are critical to the urban lifestyle. As Ag Commissioner, I'll support programs that work with farmers to promote efficiency around their water use, including crop rotations and rotational grazing for livestock.

Opportunities: The Texas Dept of Agriculture oversees rural infrastructure grants and the development of rural internet services. We need roads, bridges, waterways, and internet connectivity in order to have a strong future for our agricultural sector. We must invest wisely so that the State of Texas provides infrastructure for all Texans, but especially ranchers and farmers.

Priorities: 1) Infrastructure 2) Supporting the next generation of farmers and ranchers 3) Access to financial and grant opportunities for rural Texans Our infrastructure is both expensive and slow — livestock trailers stuck in traffic jams because of failing roads and bridges, and slow or no internet in the homes of our young Texans limiting their educational opportunities.

Qualifications: Candidate's response did not meet the criteria as listed in this Voters Guide.

Ethics: Campaigns cost money to run, so all candidates for all offices must raise money. The standards for RRC are no different than any other office. My job is to represent the people of Texas and ensure they have access to cheap, plentiful, reliable energy. Contributions have not and will not impact my dedication to doing what is right for the people of Texas.

Emissions: A clean environment & a thriving oil & gas industry are not mutually exclusive. Since 1970, the six major pollutants regulated by the EPA have decreased 77% while our economy has grown 285%, population has grown 60%, & energy consumption has grown 48%. We've reduced flaring/methane from 2.38% in Jan. 2019 to 0.21% in Sept. 2021 under my leadership w/out overregulation.

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: The RRC recently designated natural gas facilities as critical during energy emergencies and put in place weatherization requirements to ensure our oil and gas assets are prepared for emergencies. We must also ensure we are prioritizing energy generation from reliable sources through eliminating subsidies and preferential treatment for less reliable forms of energy.

Seismic Activity: The Railroad Commission

Ethics: I have not taken any campaign donations from oil and gas, but I also do not have any conflicts of interests. I do not own minerals or royalties, or working interests in wells. I will not allow cronyism to grow in Texas at the RRC and I will not take donations in return for favors down the line! Emissions: Eliminating methane emissions from flared gas and vented gas can be done without implementing further regulations. By repealing the flared gas tax we can eliminate almost ALL of the flared gas in the state! Free market solutions to eliminate flared gas and secure our grid with more electricity is what we will bring if I am elected. Smart regulations benefit all Texans.

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: Texas must audit our Nat Gas power generation critical points and listen to experts hired by the RRC, who are from INSIDE the industry. There are Texans who can help us achieve energy freedom and keep us away from another February disaster. Leadership in Austin must listen and have a PLAN in PLACE. Our base-load power must be secured. We can't allow another black out!

Seismic Activity: We must monitor all seismic activity in the Permian Basin closer, & especially monitor damage to taxpayer infrastructure. If damage is being done that will cost property owners and taxpayers money, then we must re-evaluate the system of disposing SWD fluid & make necessary changes to protect the production of oil and gas as well as our property & infrastructure from harm.

Ethics: I'm not accepting donations because our current regulators are bought by the industry they are charged with regulating. Plain and simple - the current regulators have enriched themselves and their friends at the expense of Texans. We're having earthquakes and losing our freshwater aquifers. Texas must handle or the federal government will intervene. End crony capitalism!

leak prevention. We should incentivize alternative uses (such as cryptocurrency mining). And we have to hold bad actors accountable. Climate change will be the least of our concerns if we don't fix our groundwater and seismic issues.

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: Natural gas facilities are vital to maintaining the integrity of the Texas grid. We need to consult with experts on how to properly winterize facilities and ensure we do not have a repeat winter where Texans die. But we cannot foist this expense on the taxpayers either.

Operators should not be able to opt out of vital winterization of natural gas facilities.

Seismic Activity: Seismic activity is a real issue. We need to look at the big picture of what is happening geologically. We are extracting & injecting into different zones millions of barrels of water per day in the Permian Basin alone. We should not be using fresh water for drilling or completing wells. We need to incentivize innovation to tackle this complicated issue.

Ethics: I can't speak for the other commissioners or the candidates that oppose me in this race. I can not be bought.

Emissions: It is very important. We must capture these emissions and mitigate these gasses.

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: What happened this past February with ERCOT must never happen again. Every effort and precaution must be employed to make sure our facilities remain operable and ready to serve the citizens of this great dtste.

Seismic Activity: Great question especially in view of recent earthquakes measuring better that 3.0 in the Gardendale area North and West of Midland, TX. We must limit the depth of SWD's. Lower permitted injection rates. Lower the injection pressure. Daily recording of injection volumes and pressures.

in this role and give Texans the expertise they need to utilize resources and protect jobs for the middle class.

Emissions: In my work experience, I've worked in ways to be the most efficient and resourceful. I would reduce methane emissions by putting it into production instead of being released. If that's not an option, then there are ways to reduce emissions further (like vapor recovery units and ECBs). For me, the real goal is to eliminate waste, which is also good for the environment.

Judges make decisions about fundamental issues that affect all of us . . . family life, education, health care, housing, employment, finances, discrimination, civil rights, public safety, and government actions. It is critical that our judges make fair decisions based upon open-minded and unbiased consideration of the facts and the law in each case. Judges must know the law and not be influenced by any external political and economic factors.

How is the Texas court system organized?

The Texas court system is made up of a statewide network of trial courts and appellate courts. In trial courts, judges and/or juries evaluate the facts and the law and make a decision in a civil or criminal legal dispute. When decisions in most trial courts are appealed, they are sent to an appellate court where judges consider what happened at the trial court, evaluate legal arguments, and then decide if a mistake was made.

JUSTICE, TEXAS SUPREME COURT

Six-year term. A justice is one of the nine-member Supreme Court, which issues final decisions on civil and juvenile appeals, issues certain orders to governmental officials to act and to individuals to appear before the court, and has jurisdiction over orders or judgements of trial courts, if the Supreme Court determines them important to the jurisprudence of the state. » David J. Schenck (R)

Qualifications: I've served as a justice on the state's largest intermediate court. I clerked for the Chief

Judge of the 5th Circuit, led a major appellate practice at Jones Day, am broad certified in civil appellate law, and chair the commission on judicial conduct

Standards: The positive is that the candidate at least have some demonstrable minimal competence and lack of actual record of corruption. It does not, however, require any judicial service experience or address the more critical problems with the initial selection and appointment, which is the manner by which the vast majority of appellate judges initially come to the bench.

Equity: I believe that any system of gov't that targets groups for disparate treatment — whether for malign or benign motives — implicates the equal protection clause. All Texas citizens are entitled to equal access to the courts, and I'm proud to have received the Texas Bar's highest award for promoting access to pro bono legal services to those who cannot afford it.

Ethics: At present, voters are not assured of this and the appearance that donations affect rulings has been demonstrated repeatedly without any meaningful effort at reform—making this issue most critical. I have publicly called for reforms to assure Texans the right to a constitutional, impartial process and have shown by my record that I will not yield or accept anything less.

Other Issues: Until the foregoing is resolved, there is very little of significance that the Court can achieve. Judicial decisions are followed only because — and to the extent — the public accepts that they are based on reason and principle. They've lacked that confidence for over a decade. Separately, the Supreme Court must show that the judiciary is independent of other branches.

ney General; U.S. Government rule of law mission in Iraq; many arguments at U.S. & Texas Supreme Standards: Almost all positive. The Amendment ensures that candidates meet basic minimum standards, and Texas deserves a high-quality judiciary. The only "negative" is that we must be cautious when restricting voters' options. But here, the people themselves prioritized minimum judicial qualifications by ratifying this limitation within our Constitution.

Equity: Ensuring open courts is fundamental to public confidence in our judiciary and to protecting individual rights. The Access to Justice Commission, Texas Legislature, and Texas Supreme Court have made great progress in marshaling public and private support for expanded representation of underprivileged Texans and making judicial proceedings more efficient and comprehensible.

Ethics: That risk diminishes when judges have a sound, stable method of judicial decision-making, like Justice Scalia's. Their analysis can be tested, in case after case, for rigor and consistency. Judges must hold themselves and each other accountable, too. I make the same promise to those who support me and those who don't: I will follow the law wherever it goes in every case.

Other Issues: Among the most pressing work for the Supreme Court will be ensuring, even in times of crisis, and without fear or favor, that the limitations of the U.S. and Texas Constitutions are respected—the lines between different branches of government, between the state and local governments, and between government power and individual liberty.

tion. This approach ensures it's the legislature and voters-not judges-who make the law.

Standards: The changes from this amendment regarding the Court of Criminal Appeals are small. The constitution already required ten years of legal practice. The most notable change is that a lawyer must be ten years removed from any license suspension, but I've never seen anyone run for this court after having his or her license suspended. This change will probably have no impact.

Equity: The criminal justice system provides justice by protecting victims, punishing the guilty, and allowing people to live in safety. We must punish those who prey on the underserved as harshly as we punish other criminals. Everyone should have the opportunity to live in safety. As a judge, I will treat all who appear before me equally and fairly.

Ethics: The only way to elect an honest judiciary is for voters to learn about the candidates and elect men and women with integrity. Every system of judicial selection is vulnerable to corrupt behavior, and judges can be corrupted by forces outside the selection process. One advantage of an elected judiciary is that voters can remove judges who seem corrupt.

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Four-year term. The fifteen-member board decides curriculum, standards, student testing, special education programs, and textbooks for Texas public schools. It also oversees the Permanent School Fund. Members of the board are not paid, but receive reimbursement for expenses incurred in the course of official business.

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Qualifications: What training, experience and background qualify you for this position?

Charter Schools: What is the impact of new independent charter school networks on the funding for local public schools? And is there anything you would do to change that impact?

Inclusive Education: As the developer of Texas public school curriculum, how would you ensure a comprehensive history education that addresses the needs of all students?

Recovery: What can the State Board of Education do to assist local school districts to develop programs so that students who fell behind from the pandemic can recover?

Other Issues: What other issues do you believe will be the most pressing for the State Board of Education?

» DISTRICT 1

» Laura Marquez (D)

Qualifications: I have an MSW and previous experience (7 years) working in public education as a para-educator providing special education and related services to students with disabilities. I currently work in prevention and intervention in early childhood.

Charter Schools: Different funding mechanism and accountability standards for charter schools and districts have effectively created two separate and unequal education systems. To change this, I would deny approvals for any charter applications that have a history of being bad financial practices, and work with legislative colleagues to ensure greater accountability and transparency.

Inclusive Education: I would immediately work with legislative colleagues to repeal harmful anti-CRT legislation while ensuring current polices are not applied more broadly than allowed. I would also partner with education stakeholders to navigate within the scope of current public policy to find alternative mechanisms for supporting inclusive education.

Recovery: In this respect, I would use my background in grassroots networking and community non-profit work to partner with school districts to find ways to develop or utilize existing programs that address student needs in a holistic manner. Especially as students continue to navigate through the trauma and uncertainty of an ongoing pandemic.

Other Issues: We are at a moment in time where education is being positioned at the forefront of partisan politics. Sadly, this has placed every issue faced by the SBOE on tenuous ground. Now, more than ever we must remain balanced and responsible to support schools, students, educators, and the collective interest of the community to ensure an equitable and just education system.

» Omar Yanar (D)

Qualifications: Within my career I have served as a teacher, curriculum designer, administrator and superintendent. I have a M.Ed. from Stanford and a Master in Public Policy from Harvard. I have found innovative approaches that put students and family first.

Charter Schools: It's easy to say that all dollars should go toward local public schools; however some charters are great choices for families. They receive less funding than local districts and with only 6.8% of students in Texas attending charters, the funding impact is minimal. It is important to provide families choice and options while also being judicious about charter approval.

Inclusive Education: As a former social studies teacher, I believe the TEKS as they are currently written allows for a multi-perspective comprehensive view of history. However, I would be open to a deeper dive conversation around that to see what specific historical events we may need to unpack more delicately as a multi-perspective view of history is key to inclusiveness with students.

Recovery: Our middle schools focus on highly underserved students, who are several grade levels behind and accelerate their academic growth by 2-3 years in one school year. We are ranked a top academic growth public school in Texas and these strategies can work across the state. Flexibility of schedule, innovative in-school MTSS and small learning communities are just a few.

Other Issues: The state board should do a deep examination into school culture and mental health. Student performance and attendance are affected when a student is happy, safe and feels their needs are addressed. With bullying and violent incidents on the rise, it's imperative to look at the root cause and design cultures that support student success as well as teacher/staff wellness.

experience at the High School level and have taught at the Adult Education level. I also have a Masters in Education/Teacher Leadership and a Doctorate in Education/Curriculum and Instruction. Charter Schools: New independent charter school networks have created a significant financial impact on local public schools, as these campuses have drawn away a considerable number of students from their local ISD's. To negate the financial loss to ISD's, the SBOE needs to reexamine how an ISD's Average Daily Attendance rate is connected to funding. Inclusive Education: Any curriculum that I would vote in favor of, would have to be based entirely on historical fact. Curriculum presented as comprehensive history, would need to be supported by factual evidence from verified sources. All curriculum that students would be required to master,

Qualifications: I have over a decade of teaching would need to be free of bias, opinions of the author, and political agendas.

Recovery: The SBOE needs to provide common sense programs that measure a students ability to master grade level content and not serve as a box to be checked off by an ISD for completion. Programs similar to Credit Retrieval could temporarily be set up to help students across all grade levels, attain and demonstrate the needed skills to pass to the next grade.

Other Issues: Standardized testing and school choice are pressing issues for the SBOE. Some students suffer from testing anxiety and the SBOE needs to discuss alternative methods to assess these students. Parents also should decide what school is best for their child, and the SBOE needs to find a way to give parents a voice, without taking away a local ISD's funding.

Charter Schools: Charter schools draw students away from local public schools, resulting in stranded costs. When a charter draws students away, the public school may not be in a position to decrease staff or reduce facility costs simply because it now has fewer students. The public school must make do with less per-pupil revenue. I support increasing the Compensatory Education allotment. Inclusive Education: I believe in facts. I would reject textbooks and instructional materials with subjective interpretations of history. I am against Texas SB3, which removes requirements to study specific works by minorities and women. I support expanding ethnic studies - and making these courses count as social studies credits - to ensure students can get a comprehensive history education. Recovery: Ensure teachers are (1) paid for all recovery programs (2) granted fewer admin duties and more teaching time (3) recognized for recovery service on evaluations. Qualifications: After graduating from Brown University, I began my career in St. Louis, Missouri as a Teach For America Corps Member serving underprivileged students. I returned home to serve our very own, as school board president and various state-wide positions.

Charter Schools: It is difficult to assess impacts on funding for local public schools without taking into consideration the full multi-faceted funding mechanism in the state. My priority as a member of the SBOE is to ensure that there is a leveled playing field and that we are making decisions that are fair and equitable for every school system and student across the state of Texas.

Inclusive Education: SBOE should not sanitize versions of our history. It's deeply misleading to downplay historical conflicts or scars around ideology, race, class, gender, and immigration because all are central to our state and nation's rich histories. I will ensure that curriculum standards are curated from the bottom up, prioritizing the voices of parents and students in District Two.

Recovery: Some school districts are already altering programming by offering instruction during breaks and inviting targeted students to "Rebound Academies" focusing on those with larger achievement gaps, and SBOE should replicate this programming across the state. I will also listen to educators across District Two with an open mind on innovative ways to further remedy this issue. Other Issues: We are experiencing an exodus of professionals leaving education due to stress and workloads, exacerbated by the pandemic. Qualifications: My background as a naturalized citizen has given me a unique perspective to see how important it is to have a strong basic education. As a Licensed Professional Engineer, I am uniquely qualified in solving problems using strategic collaborations.

Charter Schools: Charter school networks are eligible to receive a share of the available state funds for student enrollment. Local public schools receive both state and local tax revenue funds. Charters schools do not have a negative impact on the available funding for local public schools and in general, state aid decreases for a district if its need decreases or its tax base expands.

Inclusive Education: Curriculum development for schoolchildren should be undertaken to facilitate the general diffusion of knowledge. This means that a comprehensive history education should include classical history which enables students to reach beyond partisan differences by drawing on the shared roots of our civilization. We must promote the content of the history and meaning of the work.

Recovery: COVID-19 has presented unprecedented challenges for schoolchildren, parents and educators alike. House Bill 4545 established new requirements for accelerated instruction for students. Now more than ever the State Board of Education need to listen to educators and work with parents to meet students unique educational needs. The Board should pursue grants to help districts.

Other Issues: Texas has one of the nation's largest and fastest-growing public school enrollment counts-approximately 5.5 million. The cost of educating such a large population is tremendous and the Board will need to make important fiscal decisions in relation to the new Permanent School Fund Corp (SB 1232). Inclusive Education: I believe that Texas public school children should be taught American History, World History, Texas History and most importantly The Constitution of the United States of American. I would work to make sure public schools get adequate funding to address the needs of their students by making sure the public schools in my district have would they need to be equally successful.

Inclusive Education: This is extremely important to me. I think to ensure history education is implemented properly, a panel of current educators and practitioners must be created that will help develop this curriculum so that our students are experiencing inclusive education. The panel should be comprised of persons from every creed, race, gender, and lived experience.

Recovery: The State Board of Education can create a task-force comprised of businesses with high level technology and highly educated staff to work together with educators to double-down on the instruction and resources needed to fill the gaps. Companies such as Apple, Microsoft, and HP, have the resources and man power to provide support to our students recoup the learning lost.

Charter Schools: The addition of new independent charter school networks has the potential to decrease resources to public schools that are in some cases already resource challenged. My goal is to minimize the impact to funding of all schools that are focused on truly educating our students. Inclusive Education: Regarding history, I would work with the board to ensure that all students regardless of demographic would be represented when studying history. The first step to accomplish is to get all stakeholders in the same room on the same page.

Recovery: My approach to helping students catch up from the impact of the pandemic is to reestablish accountability for students, parents, teachers, and administrators alike. To recover, this must be a team effort. The State Board of Education can set reasonable guidelines to help drive programs to ensure all parts carry their load.

students in need of additional support may not have access to it. For example, may mean the difference between hiring a full-time speech therapist or contracting limited services.

Inclusive Education: America and Texas have rich and complicated histories. The Texas history curriculum should reflect that history. The TEKS should be objectively written and research-based by history teachers, so students learn the facts of our history.

Peace Corps Chad, Fulbright Scholar, Prof & Dir. Media Studies TXState, past Special Asst. to President, TXState for student retention, ran NEH, TCH teacher workshops

Charter Schools: Texas pits charters against local neighborhood schools, funding charter students 100% with state funding; local public schools get about 40% from state per pupil & remainder from property taxes, creating resentment & inequities. Local schools take all kids; charters send money out of state to management. Let's increase teacher pay instead of encouraging a duplicate system.

Inclusive Education: I'll urge content experts we've picked to produce inclusive, accurate standards that provide guidance, examples of important issues & freedom to address diversity & dissent. Follow student-led interests & community or service-based projects to encourage inclusive civic engagement. Teach about reliable sources, sound research methods, critical thinking, and civil discourse.

Recovery: SBOE can urge governor to give federal aid intended for education to Texas schools. Have $48.3 billion Permanent School Fund seek ways to direct earnings to needy districts for remediation, tutors, teacher pay, summer & after school, online access, & universal Pre-K. Ranking 39th in state spending per pupil, Texas uses money on admin & testing, rather than students needs.

Other Issues: We must educate the public & calm hysteria over manufactured crises. Fears about critical race theory & sex education have been cynically used to stir up censorship movements. This distracts from students' need for engaging civics, accurate history, science (particularly climate science), & age-appropriate, comprehensive sex education. Qualifications: I am the only candidate with firsthand experience at all levels of our TX education system from being a teacher aide, a district English teacher, a PD coach, community organizer - to now a strategic and technical advisor to Texas school districts. Charter Schools: Currently, the student-based funding formulas that our TX education system operates around create a false dichotomy between public charter networks and district schools. As an advocate for quality community-based schools, I see emerging work in the state where district schools can access more local and state funding through innovative partnerships and smart policy making. Inclusive Education: As the first Asian American on the board. I would advocate for our curriculum to include Asian American Studies, in addition to African American and Mexican American Studies, and for requiring Ethnic Studies for all so that students not only see themselves in their curriculum, but also learn across lines of difference and develop a more tolerant and inclusive generation.

Recovery: As a Board member, I plan to be a connector and facilitator to districts across the state to replicate what is working, reimagine what isn't, and leverage our federal and state emergency funds for districts to build back our educational infrastructure better. Districts across TX are doing innovative and resilient things to both protect our students and accelerate recovery.

Other Issues: The SBOE has the responsibility of ensuring our school boards have adequate training and support in the current contexts they face. I plan on empowering our local leaders by providing responsive and results-driven support to school board members and district leaders to center our students, drive for equity, and endure disruptive political wind shifts and adult interests.

Qualifications: I am a gay Latino, a first generation college student, a current educator, a high performing principal, and I have over 11 years of expe-

Charter Schools: New charter schools must not decrease the per-pupil funding for traditional public school students. ISDs should present to the SBOE evidence of negative impacts on their per-pupil funding. Charter schools should state in their impact statements any intentions to grow enrollment capacity so that traditional public schools can temper their expansion decisions.

Inclusive Education: I will push back against efforts that eliminate diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) in state standards. The standards should ensure that the history about people of color is not white-washed. I will advocate to ensure that a demographically diverse group of teachers create and provide feedback on standards.

Recovery: A post-COVID world should include equity and achievement in conjunction with adaptability in the use of process standards. I will pass strong teacher and principal certification and learning standards. These standards will help prepare teachers for all types of learning environments, not just the traditional teaching and classroom model. Other Issues: Schools should use a DEI lens when teaching the standards. I will ensure that this is a requirement. Qualifications: PhD Physics, UT Austin. BS Chemistry, BS Physics, UC Irvine. Taught physics at UT and Texas State U. Coauthored a quantum mechanics textbook. Did microelectronics R&D. Devised progressive school choice. Wrote a Texas bill to let kids keep textbooks.

Charter Schools: I devised progressive school choice in the 1980s to attract billions of private dollars per year into Texas K-12 education, maximize public education funds for children who attend public schools, and empower parents, including poor parents, to reject mediocre schools and choose safe schools that better serve the individual needs, abilities, and interests of their children.

Inclusive Education: The best way to improve K-12 education is to implement, or to enable voters to adopt, progressive school choice statewide or district wide. Parents may consider many things when choosing schools, including statistical results of statewide academic tests given at all schools that receive public education funds. I would vote to improve curricula and raise test standards.

Recovery: The SBOE should acquire low cost math, science, and other textbooks for children to keep permanently. Children may then easily review at home their familiar books from previous years. Authors and teachers may reduce review material and focus on new material. Top education systems follow this practice. Four Texas House bills were based on my proposal; I wrote 2009 HB 2959.

Other Issues: I found errors of roughly $752,000,000 in an unaudited Permanent School Fund schedule of investments issued by the Texas Education Agency and would lead PSF oversight. I found that incorrect scores on statewide math and science tests were issued to hundreds of thousands of Texas children; the TEA failed to correct the scores, issued false statements, and ill-served Texans.

Qualifications: There is no candidate for Texas State Board of Education who cares more about watermelon-sized titties than does presidential historian Robert Morrow. I also am the president of the Lyndon Baines Johnson Institute for the Study of Presidential Crime.

Charter Schools: I don't know that that impact is, you tell me? Whatever it is, I am completely opposed to charter schools. However I do support Texas high schools having "hot teacher" bikini contests every spring as a way of improving morale among the students. Charter school funding should go to supporting that. Pole dancing and twerking should be worked into the curriculum.

Inclusive Education: Candidate's response did not meet the criteria as listed in this Voters Guide. Recovery: Wish them well. Tell them "good luck" in the future. I have a plan to let the University of Alabama have a recruiting station embedded into every 6A high school in Texas. As for Texas A&M they should be forced to start transsexual, lactating linebackers in the spirit of "diversity, equity and inclusion."

STEM program: I support teaching kids how to fart in Morse Code.

Other Issues: Sex education is a big one for me.

» Will Hickman (R)

Qualifications: Will Hickman, a Republican from Houston, serves as the current member of the State Board of Education representing District 6. He has 5 degrees in engineering, law, and Spanish, and over 20 years work experience.

Charter Schools: Hickman is Pro-School Choice, and believes parents should choose the best option for their kids: home school, private school, public charter school, magnet, or zoned ISD schools. Hickman was awarded the 2020 Charter Champion Award from the Texas Public Charter Schools Association. He believes the current system where schools are funded by attendance works well. Inclusive Education: Hickman is against CRT and SEL, and in favor of RRR (reading, writing, and arithmetic). For him, the goal of Texas education is to prepare all students for their own goals the day after graduation: enrolling in college, starting their career, starting a business, or enlisting in the military.

Recovery: Will Hickman is a parent with three kids in public schools. He is against school closures, virtual learning, vaccine mandates, and mask mandates. Closing the gap starts with opening every school, finding all the kids, and getting them back in the classroom.

Other Issues: Will Hickman is chairing the adhoc Flight Plan Committee with SBOE colleagues from North, East, and West Texas. This committee is looking around the state for how different ISD's implement the requirements of TEC 28.016, for college and career exploration in middle school, and deciding what the best options are for replacing existing SBOE career and college classes.

» Mike Wolfe (R)

Qualifications: I am a Child Support Officer & Native Texan, a graduate of Houston Christian High School & The University of St. Thomas; I attended Ave Maria School of Law & served as a Juvenile Supervision Officer, Associate Teacher & Harris County School Trustee.

Charter Schools: Strong competition is a good thing. Charter Schools foster a healthy level of competition which makes for a better educational experience for our kids. Public Schools should not just automatically have free reign to do whatever they want to do. Parents should have a choice in where they send their kids to be educated. Including charter, private, public and home schools.

Inclusive Education: Candidate's response did not meet the criteria as listed in this Voters Guide. Recovery: The first step to helping students who fell behind due to the Wuhan Virus would be to end mask mandates and lockdowns across all school districts in Texas and throughout the United States. The best way to recover from the Virus is to promote school vouchers and charter schools and home schooling and whatever forms of education are available and let parents pick the best.

Other Issues: Being born with 2 paralyzed vocal chords and a collapsed lung, I know what it means to be without a voice. I know that parents and kids need a voice in the process. Parents are the decision makers and School Board Members need to learn that. I'm an active member of Houston's Second Baptist Church, I have 2 nieces age 8 and 14 who attend Montgomery County Public Schools.

cation up to the University where I acquired Masters of Engineering degrees(18yrs). Also I'm a Son of a Teacher of 36years and Father of 3 Public School attendees Charter Schools: It may have slight impact on the local public school funding gasping for more funding from their insufficient budgetary allocation before.

However, Charter Schools independent existence is unstoppable due to Teachers Union remote teaching options in Pandemic era & Parental burdens of getting their Children sound Education.SBOE will checkmate this by funding the delinquency Inclusive Education: When Students don't learn a comprehensive History Education, they tend to bastardized history and becomes History themselves. Recovery: SBOE Should provide more funding for students that fell behind due to the pandemic & increase educators wages or incentivize Teachers who volunteered to set up after school hours programs for such vulnerable Students so they will be able to catch up on their educational abilities on the delinquent subjects. Focus should be on curriculum that addresses the deficient subject

Other Issues: The SBOE will have to find viable ways to bridge the Students funding deficit in the Public Schools, Find a way to stop the high dropped out rates, Review the Curriculum with emphasis more on STEM Education in compliant with the global demands, Review the Educators Wages and set the Teachers Student classroom Ratios to 1:16 to enable Student learning and Teachers attention

ing school districts in Texas. Under my leadership we built 9 new schools, lowered taxes, 98% graduation rate, and start our teachers at $63,000/yr with benefits.

Charter Schools: There is a need for school choice in poor minority neighborhoods. Most Texans have school choice because we can move to pick the school that will provide our children with a great education. Too many parents that do not have that option. We can do better by bringing school choice to low income minority neighborhoods to provide an equal opportunity education for every child Inclusive Education: History education is not about needs or feelings. History is a set of facts that are necessary for children to learn so we can build on successes and not repeat mistakes. It is important we teach the rich history of America and Texas and the contributions by different cultures that make us great and also the great contributions America and Texas have made to the world.

Recovery: The SBOE can streamline teacher certifications to ensure every classroom has a certified teacher. Also, we need accurate education data that follows the student so we can quickly identify deficiencies and trends. I would also like to see more Instructional Coaches in our schools to provide support for our teachers and individualized instruction for struggling children.

Other Issues: We must ensure that every child in Texas has an Equal Opportunity Education. We can achieve this by replacing equity audits with opportunity audits, bringing school choice to neighborhoods where the schools are failing to educate children, and increase classroom transparency to foster parent / teacher relationships for student success.

» Danny Surman (R)

Qualifications: I am the only candidate in this race for State Board of Education that is a teacher. I taught US History to 8th graders for 5 years in Galveston, and I now work as an Instructional Coach in Dickinson ISD mentoring other history teachers.

Charter Schools: While the impact of charter school funding on public schools is not directly clear, too often school finance in Texas is a race to the bottom. There should not be a question of funding for charter schools affecting public finance or vice versa. The state contribution to public education must go up to ensure achievement for all students, regardless of charter funding.

Inclusive Education: Social studies educators in Texas must teach the facts as they happened. Critical race theory should not be the way those facts are taught. The United States has a diverse history, and students should see themselves in that history as it happened. Teachers must continue to have a strong voice in the revision of the social studies standards to ensure the facts are taught.

Recovery: I hesitate to force another initiative onto school districts that is implemented out of compliance rather than belief in the program. Schools must stop chasing the latest shiny object. We have a rigorous set of standards (the TEKS) that holds students to high achievement. Teachers and schools know the best practices to raise student achievement to meet those standards.

Other Issues: The State Board of Education reviews standards written by the State Board of Educator Certification (SBEC). School districts rely too much on alternative certification programs that teacher candidates rush through in just weeks. We need to raise pay for higher qualified teachers certified through an established institution of higher learning.

Qualifications: -4 years military leadership development training -Law degree (JD) -8 years teacher certified -More certification areas than any other candidate -Student experience at 4 universities, 4 community colleges, 3 elementary, and 4 secondary schools -Etc.

Charter Schools: Charter schools compete and collaborate with local public schools for state perstudent grant funding. Charter grants result in higher average contribution from state budgets on students in that school district's boundaries. Higher state contributions increase the community's share of the state budget as compared to areas with similar student population without charters.

Inclusive Education: To be inclusive and address needs, focus on application—not trivia. I reviewed Texas Administrative Code Title 19, Part II, Chapters 110-130 Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS), so I advocate for replacing "understand" with "apply," "identify" with "choose," "discuss" with "demonstrate," and similar replacements to emphasize USING knowledge and practical skills. Recovery: The Board can promote implementation of templates for model recovery programs that are already developed, vetted, and optimized for best practices. Existing recovery resources recommend many of the same principles and guidelines that already work well: -Assign support staff -Provide mentorship -Offer a range of choices -Allow scheduling flexibility -Focus long-term -Etc. Other Issues: The SBOE approved a Long-Range Plan for Public Education in 2018 but did not publish updated legislative priorities for 2021, and I would want to improve some. Qualifications: I am a former educator, husband and father with a graduate degree (MBA) in management. I have always been passionate about education and I wish to continue serving the students, parents and educators of District 11.

Charter Schools: Because funding is based on student enrollment, as students move from public schools to charter schools, they take their student allotment with them. The SBOE should advocate for equitable, fair and transparent funding of our schools and keep that in mind when approving new charters.

Inclusive Education: As a former educator and social studies teacher, I became very familiar with the TEKS. As a general principle, curriculum and instructional material should be based on fact and inclusive of the good, the bad and the ugly. The SBOE should be inclusive curators of history, ensuring that the identities of all students are included, not just the identities of a few.

Recovery: The SBOE can adopt instructional materials that are relevant and inclusive to help re-engage disconnected students. The SBOE also needs to spur strategies in schools that address the mental health needs of students as they cope with the disruptions and loss brought about by the pandemic. Other Issues: The SBOE should work to ensure that they are transparent in their decision making while getting feedback from its customers: educators, parents, and students. I will work to ensure that the voices of parents, educators, and students are solicited and acted upon.

» Rebecca Garcia (R)

Qualifications: I worked with children teacher assistant in private and public schools for over 12 years.

I am an active mother of four and grandmother of fourteen that has been active in their education. Charter Schools: The charter schools are competition for the federal education dollars; However, they offer a superior product to our students. No, I believe funding should follow the student whether public or private education.

Inclusive Education: Students should be taught about American or Texas History in our Education. Our responsibility is to teach true history, of the country and the contribution of all people make in the country.

Recovery: The school can promote peer to peer tutoring, and study groups for a subject. Provide for additional teacher assistance to help with interactive study. Provide some Saturday school study.

Other Issues: Safety for students and staff. Students need to be taught in the different learning styles, adequate for each individual. Students need to be taught the basics.

» Patricia "Pat" Hardy (R)

Qualifications: One does not need to be a teacher to be on the Board but it helps. With many years of experience as a classroom teacher and inside administrator in public schools, I came with a wealth of knowledge. Being an incumbent has increased that knowledge.

Charter Schools: Charter schools impact local districts if they draw students away from the district, creating lower enrollment, the same impact if a student moves out of district. The vast majority of growth in charter schools is due to expansions of existing charters and not from granting new charters. The method of finance for charter schools has been determined by the Legislature.

Inclusive Education: The state social studies standards are inclusive. Realizing that our state school population is now minority majority, the Board needs to ensure that the standards are factual as well as sensitive to our changing demographics.

We are the only state that offers two ethnic studies courses for state credit. Next year we will add a third ethnic studies course.

Recovery: The state legislature addressed this in the last session by sending funding to districts for remediation for the students with gaps resulting from Covid. The effectiveness of remediating students after a full day of class concerns me greatly. I would support a temporary change in the STAAR testing, making it solely diagnostic thus removing the report card pressure.

Other Issues: School safety concerns me greatly. Much volatility is resulting from bullying situations. I think that building a more secure sense of community and respect for all students might be something that could be folded into the soon to be revised Social Studies TEKS. As a board we need to delve into the pros and cons of virtual schooling. Districts were not prepared for Covid.

Qualifications: In my profession, I solve incredibly complex problems through simple and effective solutions. Also, I am a community leader who has worked extensively with all levels of government to bring in resources and improvements for our community's education.

Charter Schools: Charter schools take away funding from our taxpayer funded public school systems, and due to their independent status, are not very transparent. They will require an additional layer of accountability to be effective and that cost brings no value to our taxpayers. I will deprioritize the new approvals of Charter schools and will increase oversight on the current charters.

Inclusive Education: I understand that history is a collective experience that our forefathers have transmitted to us. It is extremely important to learn from that experience so that we don't repeat the mistakes of the past and are able to plan for a better inclusive future by using history as a guide. Our nation's history needs to be taught as is, with facts, and with absolutely no omissions.

Recovery: Arrange for a temporary spike in funding so that local school districts can hire additional teachers and also invest on additional remedial materials to facilitate an unprecedented rapid academic recovery.

Other Issues: Bring parity to teachers' salary. Texas is significantly behind in teachers' salary from the national average. Set a high priority to modernize the curriculum for STEM, arts, environmental sciences, critical thinking, health sciences and sports. The State Board of Education should do everything they can to shield the teachers from unreasonable and confusing legislation.

Qualifications: High school physics teacher for Fort Bend ISD & Dallas ISD. Curriculum writer for secondary science in FBISD, as well as assistant principal intern. I've earned multiple awards for district wide top testing scores. Today I am a parent, and PTO member.

Charter Schools: I do not believe that charter schools pose a major threat to the public school system. A fiscal challenge, perhaps, but not such a negative impact that a school district will immensely suffer. We are putting an enormous amount of tax payer dollars in public schools, so parents should be able to direct their student and their money to whichever school they choose is best.

Inclusive Education: I do not believe in discounting any merits made in history. Along with any great accomplishment, disparity and hardship played a crucial role in its development. Teach history unvarnished, acknowledge that very sensitive issues still exist today, but avoid any manner of instruction that establishes division.

Recovery: Initially, reengage disconnected students that feel lost or too far behind by providing them with support and interventions to cover lost ground. Break out groups for small group tutoring in the morning for those students who have been identified as needing help. Outside of school provide students with access to learning technology and engaging learning material.

Other Issues: Teacher retention is a huge issue. I do not believe in continuously raising the starting salary for entry level teachers. Those available funds should be either spent on veteran teachers, or on programs for new teachers still in their first 5 years, or a more cost efficient incentive program. Money is a temporary fix - teachers need to feel valued, supported, & respected.

Qualifications: I have been in the education field for over 20 years. I have served on local school district committees that have recommended textbook adoptions and established curriculum guidelines. Charter Schools: The local public schools are receiving 100% of the funds allocated towards the students enrolled in their schools.

Qualifications: I have over 23 years of teaching practice and experience. This experience includes classroom teaching, tutoring, homeschooling, mentoring, the founder of a small Frisco homeschool program, summer STEM science youth camp program, and facilitator.

Charter Schools: On average, charter schools receive $676 less per student than local public schools, and receives no local revenue. Charter schools receive 100% of funding from Texas state sources, and is the only funding they receive. Local public schools receive both local property tax revenue, and state sources. I would not change that impact.

Inclusive Education: In the name of Inclusive Education, many children think socialism is good, and few know the difference between thinking and feeling. I will defend the civil liberties and rights guaranteed to every child, and ensure the development of a history curriculum that is untainted by any political agenda, and teaches all students our American national heritage.

Recovery: This year Texas students' math test performance dropped from 50% of students meeting their grade level in 2019, to only 35%. The State Board of Education can assist local school districts by developing programs that invest most ESSER resources into math and reading programs that accelerate learning and supports all students and teachers.

Other Issues: Other issues I believe will be the most pressing for the State Board of Education is to address the overreach of influence and control of our local school districts by the taxpayer funded lobbyist groups TASB and TASA, the moral corruption of Comprehensive Sexual Education, and the invasive teachings of emotional and behavioral control through Social and Emotional Learning

Charter Schools: Every student/parent deserve options if trapped in a poor performing public school. Charter schools are currently the PUBLIC OPTION. Charter schools are utilized by 6.7% of Texas students, but 20% of funding, therefore charters must perform. SBOE and the legislature need to do an in depth study of charter school performance to determine effectiveness and/or other solutions Inclusive Education: SBOE is reviewing all Social Studies in 2022. Appointing Highly Qualified Content Advisors and Work Groups is mandatory. TEKS must be carefully scrutinized. Comprehensive History is comprehensive history for all Texas students. The knowledge students in Texas classrooms NEED is the same for all students in all social studies [civics] classes. Education techniques may vary.

Recovery: C19 Closures plus typical summer slide averaged 5.7 months learning loss for 2020 school year. Instructional material must be changed to assist accelerated learning. High quality tutoring must be used to accelerate closing learning gap. Billions of dollars have been allocated for Texas schools. SBOE and TEA must be flexible to allow school districts to make local choices

Other Issues: SBOE has authority to review local school board training. SBOE should investigate if local board training might improve relationships and understanding between all stakeholders. All Texas voters are encouraged to vote in the General Election!

The November 2022 General Election will determine who will lead us at the state level, represent us in Congress, rule on important civil and criminal cases, set the Texas school curriculum and run our cities and counties. All the races will have an impact on the lives of Texans. As you know, the League of Women Voters of Texas is working hard to make sure Texas voters have the information on candidates they need to make informed decisions.

Texas no longer has straight-ticket voting. So, voters in Texas cannot check one box to vote for one party's full slate of candidates. Instead, voters mark a box for their candidate choice for each race in which they want to vote. Candidates representing a party are identified with a letter following their name: "R" for Republican, "D" for Democrat, "L" for Libertarian, or "G" for Green. Candidates in many local elections are nonpartisan and do not represent a party.

 - If somebody assisted you with the application or witnessed your signature or mark, they must complete the section provided on the application.
 - 3. Return your completed application as soon as you can.
 - The application must be received at least 11 days before Election Day.
 You can:
 - Mail the application to the County Election Office, addressed to the Early Voting Clerk, OR
 - Hand deliver your application to your County Election Office.
 - 4. When your ballot arrives, mark and pack it:
 - Mark your ballot with a black or blue pen.
 - · Fill out the ovals completely—do not mark with X's, checks or circles.
 - Put your ballot in the ballot envelope and seal it. Put only one ballot in each ballot envelope.
 - Place the ballot envelope in the carrier envelope—wait to seal the carrier envelope!
 - 5. Fill out the carrier envelope with the following information:
 - · Your ID numbers
 - · Your TX Drivers License or TX Personal ID number, AND
 - The last four digits of your social security number.
 - Your contact information, in case there's an issue with your ballot.
 - · Seal the carrier envelope in both places, then sign over the flap.
 - If an assistant helps you complete the ballot, they must fill out the required information in the space provided on the carrier envelope.

- If you're unable to sign, your witness must fill out the required information in the space provided on the carrier envelope.
- 6. Return your ballot as soon as you can!
 - Your ballot must be received by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day. You can return it using one of the following:
 - Mail your ballot by the U.S. Postal Service, using two stamps if you are not sure. You can also use FedEx, UPS or DHL to return your ballot. OR
 - Hand deliver your ballot in person to your main County Election Office on Election Day while the polls are open. You must show a photo ID. OR
 - · Vote in person instead:
 - Take your mail ballot to your polling place during early voting or on Election Day to vote a regular ballot.
 - If you lose or forget your mail ballot, you can vote using a provisional ballot.
- 7. Track your ballot at VoteTexas.gov!

» VOTE EARLY IN PERSON

- You may vote early at any voting location in your county.
- Find polling places at VOTE411.org or on your county election website.
- · If you have a disability, you may request to move ahead of other voters in line.
- . If in line before the poll closing time, you must be allowed to cast a ballot.

» VOTE ON ELECTION DAY

- In some counties, you can vote at any polling place. In other counties, you can vote only at your precinct.
- · Find polling places at VOTE411.org or on your county election website.
- . If you have a disability, you may request to move ahead of other voters in line.
- · If in line before the poll closing time, you must be allowed to cast a ballot.

» VOTE IN PERSON USING CURBSIDE VOTING

- If you are physically unable to enter the polling place without personal assistance or likelihood of injuring your health, you may ask that an election officer bring a ballot to your car.
- After you mark your ballot, give it to the election officer or hand it to a companion to deposit in the ballot box for you.
- · It is best to call ahead so election officials will expect you!

» VOTE EVEN IF YOU ARE A SUSPENDED VOTER

You can still vote if your voter registration is in suspense! "Suspense" means that your county voter registrar needs to confirm your voting address.

» VOTE A LIMITED BALLOT IF YOU HAVE MOVED BUT NOT RE-REGISTERED

If you have moved to a new county and have not re-registered in the new county by the registration deadline, you may be eligible to vote a limited ballot in your new county. A limited ballot is one that allows you to vote on candidates and measures that are on the ballot for both your former county and your new county, such as statewide and national races. Voting a limited ballot is only available during early voting at the main early voting polling place.

» VOTER ID: WHAT TO TAKE TO THE POLLS

- · Texas Driver License
- · Texas Election Identification Certificate
- Texas Personal Identification Card issued by the Department of Public Safety (DPS)
- · Texas Handgun License issued by DPS
- · US Military Identification Card containing the person's photograph
- · US Citizenship Certificate containing the person's photograph
- · US Passport (book or card)

Note:

- · IDs may have expired up to four years.
- Persons 70 years or older may use an expired ID, regardless of expiration date.
- · ID address does not have to match the voter registration address.
- The name on the photo ID should match the voter registration card or be "substantially similar." If the names don't match exactly but are substantially similar, the voter will initial a box for a similar name when signing in to vote.

Registered voters without photo ID, who cannot reasonably obtain one, may sign a form (described below) and present the original or a copy of one of the following documents with the voters name and address to vote a regular ballot:

- · Texas voter registration card
- · Certified birth certificate
- · Current utility bill
- Bank statement
- · Government check
- Paycheck
- Any other government document such as an out of state driver's license or expired Texas driver's license.

The form to be filled out by registered voters without a photo ID is a "Voter's Declaration of Reasonable Impediment or Difficulty". The voter must mark on the form one of the following reasons for not providing a photo ID:

- · Lack of transportation
- · Disability or illness
- Lack of birth certificate or other documents needed to obtain an acceptable form of photo ID
- · Work schedule
- Family responsibilities
- · Lost or stolen identification
- · Acceptable form of photo ID applied for but not received.

» VOTER HARASSMENT

- Election officials cannot question a voter about the use of an ID type.
- · Poll watchers may never question a voter about Voter ID issues.
- · If you are harassed, call or text Election Protection at 866-687-8683!

» LEAGUE VOTERS GUIDE POLICY

- For the races covered in the Voters Guide, all candidates on the ballot with opponents are invited to participate.
- · Unopposed candidates are listed, but not invited to participate.
- Candidate replies are printed without editing or verification. The League assumes no responsibility for the content of the candidate responses.
- Negative references to opponents (including officeholders) or specific persons are not allowed.
- If the League determines a response does not meet the criteria listed in this Voters Guide and, if time allows, the candidate will be contacted and given an opportunity to reword that response. If not changed, in place of a response that does not meet the criteria, the Voters Guide will state "Candidate's re sponse does not meet the criteria listed in this Voters Guide."
- Videos that do not comply with the criteria listed in this Voters Guide are removed.
- Links to websites that are not official campaign websites or social media pages are removed.
- The Voters Guide is organized by office, with candidates listed by party, including the names of unopposed candidates. For primary and runoff elections, the order of the parties is alternated each election year. For general elections, the parties are listed in ballot order.
- Candidates with no photo in this Voters Guide did not submit a photo by the print deadline.
- Candidates who do not respond to our questionnaire by the print deadline are listed with the notation "No response received by the print deadline". If submitted after the print deadline, their information may be found at VOTE411.org.

GOVERNOR

Four-year term. The governor is the chief executive of the state. They appoint members to boards and commissions; appoint statewide executive officials, state judges and district attorneys when vacancies occur; declare special elections to fill vacancies in certain elected offices; deliver the State of the State address; provide guidance to the legislature; call special sessions of the legislature and set the agenda; and serve as commander-in-chief of the state's military forces. The governor can veto legislation (including a line-item veto on appropriations), sign legislation, or allow it to become law without their signature. Current Salary: $153,750

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Gun Safety: What steps, if any, should be taken to curb gun violence in our communities?

Economy: What can be done at the state level to address the high rate of inflation and other economic challenges faced by Texans?

Power Grid: What can be done to ensure that Texas has sufficient power during extreme weather conditions?

Elections: Considering the high rate of vote-by-mail ballot rejections in the 2022 Primary Elections, what changes, if any, are needed to election laws?

Immigration: What is the role of the state government in addressing immigration at the border?

Abortion: How would you address the economic and health consequences for those who cannot obtain abortions in Texas?

» Greg Abbott (R)

No response received by the print deadline

» Beto O'Rourke (D)

Gun Safety: I will always prioritize the lives of our children and the safety of our fellow Texans over any special interest. As governor, I will fight for bipartisan, commonsense gun safety measures that the majority of Texans agree on, like raising the minimum age to purchase an assault rifle to 21, implementing universal background checks, and establishing a red flag law system. Economy: I'll lower property taxes by closing the loopholes that allow wealthy corporations to push their tax burden onto homeowners and small businesses. I'll reduce energy bills by fixing the problems with the Texas power grid, investing in energy efficiency, and providing direct bill assistance. And I'll raise the minimum wage to $15/hour so that hardworking Texans can afford to support their families.

Power Grid: To prevent another deadly blackout and lower Texans' skyrocketing electricity bills, I will connect Texas to the national grid, weatherize all elements of our energy infrastructure, invest in energy efficiency, build out more transmission and storage capacity, and establish mechanisms to prevent energy companies from price gouging ratepayers.

Elections: I will ensure every eligible voter in Texas can freely and fairly cast their ballot, including by repealing onerous and purposefully confusing vote-by-mail procedures, implementing online and same-day voter registration, guaranteeing easy, equitable access to polling places, and establishing independent redistricting commissions to end gerrymandering.

Immigration: The state government should provide local communities the support they need to respond to migration flows at the border in a safe and orderly fashion. That can include support for migrant processing, shelter, and transportation—as long as it is done in a way that reflects our values, upholds U.S. asylum laws, and refrains from wasting taxpayer dollars on political stunts instead of solutions.

Abortion: I will fight to repeal Texas' extreme abortion laws that endanger the lives of women and make no exception for rape or incest. I will also strengthen investments in women's health and family planning programs to increase access to contraception and cancer screenings, and combat Texas' maternal mortality crisis by expanding Medicaid and increasing pregnancy Medicaid to one-year postpartum.

Campaign Website: https://www.betofortexas.com

» Mark Tippetts (L)

Gun Safety: To meet Texans' security and education preferences, I support a school choice system so all Texans can afford to send their children to private, public, or home school. Cut taxes and government spending to create a more vibrant economy that draws people away from criminal activity. Curb drug war-related violence by legalizing marijuana.

Economy: As a Libertarian, I'm in favor of reducing government spending and lower taxes at all levels. Inflation is caused by the federal government printing more money to cover its massive spending which devalues the dollar. Currently a few insiders grant targeted tax cuts and incentives to get businesses to move here. Instead, I support taxing all businesses at the same, but a lower rate overall. Power Grid: I built a hydroelectric plant in Belize, Central America and know that bad decisions by government regulators have caused our power grid problems and outages. We need to get the governments out of the energy management business so one bad decision-maker can't harm the entire state. We need to eliminate the current taxes and subsidies on all forms of energy and allow new nuclear generation.

Elections: The Republican and Democratic parties passed laws imposing new fees on Libertarians which make it harder for Libertarians and others to run for office. I helped file lawsuits to overturn these bad laws. Republicans and Democrats shouldn't get to outlaw competition. Let the people decide who to vote for. I support efforts that make it convenient to vote, while protecting election integrity.

Immigration: It's nearly impossible to immigrate to America legally. We could end most illegal immigration by enacting a good comprehensive immigration policy, making it easier for honest, hardworking people to come work and live here legally. Reform requires federal action. Instead of seeing foreigners as a problem, we should welcome them as potential friends, business partners, and customers.

Abortion: Recognizing that abortion is a sensitive issue, and that people can hold good-faith views on all sides, I believe that government should be kept out of the matter, leaving the question to each person for their conscientious consideration. A group of mostly men legislators should not be able to tell my daughters what they can and can't do with their bodies.

» Delilah Barrios (G)

Gun Safety: Retailers must limit the amount and frequency of sales of guns and ammunition. The police budget should be limited as well and resources should go towards housing, childcare, education, gardens, transportation etc. I am a supporter of community police because the police criminalize poverty and mental health.

Economy: We need to halt all fossil fuel subsidies. We should use those funds for universal healthcare and a living wage. We also need public transportation, sustainable farming and renewable energy. Free education and work programs in high school would help boost job growth. As well as a just transition. Legalizing marijuana would boost our economy too.

Power Grid: Making all utilites publicly owned, investing more into wind and solar and expanding our grid to neighboring states or countries for better reliability.

Elections: Several changes are needed. I support ranked choice voting and also proportional representation. I support same day voting registration and voting mail, we need better protections for voters to have their voices heard.

Immigration: The role of our state is to be good neighbors. To have compassion and offer opportunities both here and in Mexico. We rely heavily on the exploitation of the global south. I would like to see Texas make ammends and speed up the immigration process while also supporting Mexico's economy as well. A sustainable partnership would be ideal.

Abortion: Statewide single payer would eliminate the insurance companies ability to cause harm to patients. I would enact a law that would provide protection to patients and providers. Anyone deliberately interfering with patient care due to religious or other will face a 50k+ fine plus jail. This is only a short term solution while we set up statewide single payer and better patient rights for autonomy.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Four-year term. The lieutenant governor is powerful because of their position as president of the Texas Senate, where they appoint the chairs and vice-chairs of committees; appoint senators to committees; assign bills to committees; and control the Senate's agenda. They are also a member of several commissions and boards, and serve as governor in the governor's absence. Current Salary: As Senate president: $9,612 plus $190 per diem. When serving in the governor's absence: that of the governor.

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Economy: What can be done at the state level to address the high rate of inflation and other economic challenges faced by Texans?

Elections: Considering the high rate of vote-by-mail ballot rejections in the 2022 Primary Elections, what changes, if any, are needed to election laws?

» Mike Collier (D)

Gun Safety: As Lt. Governor, I will work with community leaders and law enforcement to raise the age to purchase a firearm to 2l, universal background checks, safe storage requirements, and a waiting period to buy a semi-automatic firearms. These actions must be undertaken before the start of the next school year because the time to stop the next school shooting is now.

Economy: Over the last eight years, Texans have faced skyrocketing property taxes. Thanks to tax loopholes, Texans are paying more so that corporations can pay less. I will close those loopholes in order to bring down taxes for folks across the state and make corporations pay their fair share.

Power Grid: As a lifelong businessman and energy expert, I will make fixing the power grid amongst my top priorities. I will work to bring down energy bills for Texans by investing in producing more energy, investing in energy storage and smart grid technology, and establishing emergency tie-ins to the national power grid.

Public Education: As Lt. Governor, I will work tirelessly to fund our local schools. I am opposed to efforts to divert taxpayer dollars to unaccountable, private school vouchers that would raise our property taxes and defund our schools, especially hurting rural Texas.

Elections: Texas voters who make a good faith attempt to cast a ballot should not have their voice silenced due to discriminatory and opaque election laws past by the Texas Legislature. If I led the Senate as Lt. Governor, I would undo the suppressive changes made by SBI and improve the ballot cure process. Abortion: Under current law, all abortions are banned in Texas, including in cases of trans or insect. As Lt. Governor, Lwill work to codify the protections of cases of rape or incest. As Lt. Governor, I will work to codify the protections of Roe v. Wade into the books of law—returning the power to make decisions to doctors and their patients, as well as invest in pre-natal and maternal healthcare for women across Texas.

» Shanna Steele (L)

Gun Safety: I support the Second Amendment. Ending the war on drugs, treating addiction, and improving economic conditions would curb gun violence. Economy: Legalizing marijuana and eliminating property taxes would be a good start to increasing the GDP and improve the economic challenges faced by Texans. Power Grid: There are several hydroelectric power plants that used to be connected to the power grid that are no longer in operation. By fixing these power plants and other parts of the power grid infrastructure we will be on the right

Public Education: Parents should be able to choose the school that best fits their child's needs.

Elections: The changes needed start with removing the duopoly created by the Democrats and Republicans who make it difficult for those who want to vote. [Candidate's response does not meet the criteria listed in this Voters Abortion: I would remove state government from healthcare decisions that should be made between doctors and their patients. In addition, I would like to make the adoption process easier for those who choose adoption over

ATTORNEY GENERAL

Four-year term. The attorney general is the chief law enforcement officer of the state; represents the state and state officials in legal matters; issues opinions; oversees collection of child support; administers the crime victims compensation fund; enforces the open records/open meetings acts; approves public bond issues; and enforces consumer regulations. Current salary: $153,750

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Elections: How would you protect Texans' freedom to vote while maintaining safe and secure elections?

Ethics: How can voters be assured that campaign donations will not impact how the Attorney General interprets and enforces the law?

Children's Health: Do you believe the government should become involved in healthcare decisions made for children by their parents and physicians? Please explain.

Immigration: What should be the role of the Texas Attorney General regarding immigration law and policy?

Priorities: What would be your highest priorities for the next four years, and how do you intend to accomplish them?

» Ken Paxton (R)

No response received by the print deadline

» Rochelle Mercedes Garza (D)

Elections: As Attorney General, I will dismantle the wasteful "election integrity unit" - which is really about enforcing the GOP's voter suppression measures, instead of protecting voting rights - and replace it with a voter protection unit under a fully funded Civil Rights Division. I will ensure voting rights are protected, not undermined, especially for voters of color.

Ethics: We must bring about fundamental change in the office of the Attorney General. I'm running for Texas AG to restore integrity, transparency and trust to the office. That means ending the culture of corruption and pay-to-play politics. As AG, I will not be beholden to powerful industries; instead I will answer to the people of Texas and respect the rule of law.

Children's Health: As a parent, I am deeply committed to ensuring the office of the Attorney General protects all Texans. Decisions about the health of children are extremely personal, and should only be made between parents, physicians and the child, when appropriate. Politicians have no place in the decisionmaking process about a child's medical treatment.

Immigration: Immigration enforcement falls under federal jurisdiction. As an immigration attorney and border native, I understand the complexities of our immigration system. I have litigated against bad policies that have created a humanitarian crisis at the border. Texas' enforcement efforts at the border are unconstitutional, wasteful and only worsen the issue.

Priorities: As AG, I will protect the rights of all Texans. I'll root out corruption and bring back integrity and transparency to the AG's office. I'll create a Civil Rights Division to protect the safety, privacy, and dignity of Texans, and I'll prioritize consumer protections to hold bad actors accountable. Most importantly, I will fight to restore abortion rights in Texas.

COMPTROLLER OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

Four-year term. The comptroller is the chief financial officer of the state; collects state taxes and fees; pays the state's bills; provides revenue estimates to the legislature; certifies the budget; reports the condition of the state's finances; and provides economic development assistance to local governments and private businesses. Current salary: $153,750

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Rainy Day Fund: What is the optimal amount to be held in the Rainy Day Fund? How would you balance paying down the state's debt vs. responding to urgent needs?

Taxes: What is the proper balance of tax revenues sources in order to fairly fund state government, including public schools?

Financial Obligations: How can we ensure that Texas meets its long-term financial obligations such as infrastructure maintenance, state employee pensions and health care coverage for public school teachers and employees?

Priorities: What would be your highest priorities for the next four years, and how do you intend to accomplish them?

» Glenn Hegar (R)

Rainy Day Fund: Texas is blessed to have a strong Rainy Day Fund, which is designed and should be used to smooth out the state's revenues during an economic downturn, to assist in a disaster, and for one-time expenses that are strategic for Texas' economic health and well-being. I fought to manage these dollars more effectively to guard against inflation and protect them for generations. Taxes: Funding public schools in Texas has been a shared burden split between state funds and local property taxes. Until recently the local share was allowed to grow unchecked creating increased pressure on local property taxes. I helped compress local property tax rates and rebalance the burden between state funds and local taxpayers. Our strong economic recovery now puts us in position to do more.

Financial Obligations: Since practically my first day in office I have sought to shine a light on the state's balance sheet and the need to address our long-term obligations. I fought to address threats to our state's fiscal health and ensure Texas teachers can access quality healthcare. I helped lawmakers pass historic pension reform to put our state on firm footing and avoid credit downgrades.

Priorities: I will continue to focus on the core constitutional duties of my office and that means maintaining my attention on the Texas economy. Navigating the last few years has been difficult, but I have always remained focused on the trends, challenges and opportunities in our state economy. We must fight to keep Texas a place where freedom creates new opportunities for families and businesses to thrive.

Campaign Website: https://glennhegar.com

» Janet T. Dudding (D)

Rainy Day Fund: Government Finance Officers Association recommends a minimum of 2 months of regular revenue or regular expenditures be maintained in a rainy day fund. Typically, rainy day monies mitigate the risk of unstable revenues or unexpected expenditures. Natural disasters fall into the 2nd category & Texas ranks 1st in these. The state of Texas' general obligation debt currently is rated Aaa/AAA/AAA.

Taxes: Find new revenue for Charter & 313. Texas Legislature added $6.5 billion dollars in funding to public schools in 2019. Yet per a 2021 SPLC report, Texas currently ranks 40th in the nation. New rev streams are needed. Legalizing adultuse cannabis could bring $1 billion in tax revenue (and decriminalization could save $300 million). Look at "green" taxes to build revenue streams from green energy.

Financial Obligations: Re infrastructure, accept & leverage federal dollars. With fuel efficient vehicles, look at creating a revenue from alternative fuels to maintain roads. Public school benefits: employees in all but ~18 school districts do not participate in social security and they should. Public school employees should have excellent healthcare w/o sharing premium costs. Reduce public school property tax reliance Priorities: Statute defines Comptroller as state's 'sole' accountant. We've never had a CPA as our Comptroller. I will be the watchdog over tax dollars, answerable to Texans not special interests. As a hurricane survivor, climate-disasters are personal to me and I will work to mitigate the root cause as well as our risk exposure through SECO. Expand broadband by partnering with local govt utilities & coops.

Campaign Website: https://www.janetdudding4texas.com/

» V. Alonzo Echevarria-Garza (L)

Rainy Day Fund: I would suggest sic months of operating expenses is a good start. However, this depends on the mitigating policies implemented by the state.

Taxes: I don't believe there is, strictly speaking, a proper balance that policy makers should adhere to, or fix to fairly fund state government or public schools. The question is not the balance amounts, but what mechanisms are in place to adapt.

Financial Obligations: budget analyst and policy makers must utilize the social discount rate in performing cash discounting of projects, and cost benefit analysis. Priorities: The highest priority is to implement policies that may improve operations, optimize benefits, and offer flexibility in dealing with financial challenges. These policies will not only improve conditions in four year, but beyond my own term in office.

COMMISSIONER OF GENERAL LAND OFFICE

Four-year term. As head of the General Land Office, the commissioner manages state lands, including oil and gas properties (which supply funds to the Permanent School Fund) and the Alamo. The commissioner chairs the Veterans Land Board, which administers programs for Texas veterans, and is responsible for environmental protection of Texas' coast. Other state boards chaired include the School Land Board and the Coastal Coordination Advisory Committee. Current salary: $140,938

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Allocation of Federal Funds: When federal funds for natural disaster relief are allocated, how would you ensure that communities with the highest needs are prioritized?

The Alamo: As the head of the agency that manages the Alamo, what story should it tell?

Coastal Planning: What measures would you implement to restore and protect the Texas coast, wetlands, and structures along the coast to minimize damage from major storms?

Priorities: What would be your highest priorities for the next four years, and how do you intend to accomplish them?

» Dawn Buckingham (R)

Allocation of Federal Funds: When catastrophe strikes the Texas coast, I'll be there every step of the way to help Texans recover. I grew up in a small town along the Texas coast, so I know firsthand just how devastating a major hurricane can be and what people need in its aftermath. As Land Commissioner, I'll make sure the GLO is fully prepared to respond to catastrophic storms that impact our coast.

The Alamo: I am, and always have been, a champion for the preservation of our Texas History. As a State Senator, I laid down the legal challenge to keep the Cenotaph in its rightful place out front. Our Alamo should tell the story of Texas' revolution and of course the battle at the Alamo itself.

Coastal Planning: Our coastal communities deserve a Land Commissioner that is as tough and resilient as they are. As a state senator, I am proud to have supported measures to fund flood mitigation, prepare for construction of a coastal spine, and more. Investing in coastal infrastructure to mitigate the effects of hurricanes is just smart. We can save lives and protect property with these investments. Priorities: I'm running for Texas Land Commissioner to improve the lives of all Texans and protect the Texas we know and love for future generations. As the first female Land Commissioner in history, my priorities are unleashing Texas oil and gas production, keeping our communities safe by securing the border, and protecting the Permanent School Fund to ensure that every child has a great public education.

Campaign Website: https://www.dawnbuckingham.com

» Jay Kleberg (D)

Allocation of Federal Funds: Centering the voices of communities most impacted by natural disasters and least-supported by our government is a priority for my campaign and will continue to be a priority for me as commissioner. As Land Commissioner, I will emphasize the reformation of disaster relief and recovery programs at the General Land Office. This will ensure Texans most affected have the proper funding.

The Alamo: The story of the Alamo is as far reaching and complex as Texas itself. The Alamo is a symbol of Texan and Tejano pride and we must honor those contributions to Texas. It's also important to consider the role of early Black Texans and slavery in our history, as well as indigenous groups who inhabited the site for centuries. All of these groups should have input in the conversation on the Alamo.

Coastal Planning: An example of measures I support is the nearly $30 billion investment in protection measures for the Texas Gulf Coast, including a coastal storm barrier in Galveston and beach restoration efforts on South Padre Island. As Land Commissioner, I would prioritize projects like these and work with all stakeholders to secure funding for these projects and other disaster mitigation and recovery efforts.

Priorities: Reforming the GLO disaster programs to ensure all Texans can recover from the last storm and prepare for the next one. Expanding carbon storage opportunities by opening leases in Texas' submerged lands. Responsibly expanding renewable energy production on state lands to diversify our revenue base. Reforming and modernizing the Veterans Land Board to expand and improve Veteran services in Texas.

COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE

Four-year term. The agriculture commissioner's principal job is promoting Texas' agricultural products. In that capacity, the commissioner facilitates trade and marketing of agricultural products; regulates weights and measures; regulates pesticide use and application; certifies organically produced products; administers the National School Lunch and School Breakfast programs; provides financial help to farmers; and helps solve issues related to natural disasters. Current salary: $140,938

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Inflation: What can be done to help Texas farmers face rising costs and supply chain disruptions?

Water Resources: As water resources become more scarce, what would you do to balance the needs of farmers and the growing demands of urban areas?

Opportunities: Should Texas diversify its agriculture to include cannabis, biofuels or other crops? Why or why not?

Priorities: What are the three most challenging issues for Texas farmers for the next four years, and what are your plans for dealing with number one on your list?

» Sid Miller (R)

No response received by the print deadline

» Susan Hays (D)

Inflation: Accurate analysis of supply-chain choke points followed by government action to alleviate them. For example, the meat packing industry is a Wall Street-driven, near-monopoly with ranchers having to pay to reserve time to process their cattle. I will aggressively draw down federal dollars to help Texas entrepreneurs open and expand local operations which will in turn keep those profits in Texas.

Water Resources: The Republicans have failed to even try to solve this problem. The Department of Agriculture (TDA) can research & promote sustainable practices and less-thirsty crops, but must work across agencies such as the Land Office, the Water Development Board, local water districts, & others, and with the Legislature for a comprehensive state plan to protect water quality and supply. Opportunities: Yes. As a cannabis attorney I understand the best way to legalize & regulate to protect public health & safety giving Texans an opportunity to share in the economic opportunity. Texas ag can flourish by growing more fruits, vegetables & high-value crops. California produces more than 70% of U.S. fruits and vegetables — too many eggs in one basket. We need to diversify & support

Priorities: Economic survival, rural health care, & climate change—and they are intertwined. I will look for opportunities, analyze the data, advocate to the USDA to change counter-productive policies, and help producers find a path to prosperity and environmental sustainability. Failing rural hospitals are an existential threat to rural communities. Texas must expand Medicaid to

RAILROAD COMMISSIONER

Six-year term. The Railroad Commissioner is one of the three-member Texas Railroad Commission. The commission regulates the oil and gas industry, gas utilities, pipeline safety, safety in the liquefied petroleum gas industry and surface coal and uranium mining. It has no regulatory authority concerning railroads. Current salary: $140,937

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: What further changes, if any, are needed to ensure that Texas has sufficient power in times of extreme weather

Emissions: How important is the impact of methane emissions on climate change? What are effective ways to reduce methane emissions in the oil and gas industry?

Seismic Activity: How can the Railroad Commission reduce the risk of seismic activity or earthquakes caused by water disposal from oil and gas drilling?

Ethics: Since candidates for Railroad Commission often raise money from the oil and gas industry, how can citizens be assured that campaign donations will not influence how commissioners regulate that industry?

Emissions: Oil and gas production and a clean environment are not mutually exclusive; the six-major pollutants regulated by the EPA have decreased by 77% over the last 50 years. The current Administration's methane rule and natural gas tax could shut down oil and gas production in Texas which would kill jobs, harm our economy, increase costs to consumers, and reduce the reliability

Seismic Activity: The RRC has in place some of the most stringent rules on disposal wells — the type of wells some link to earthquakes — in the country.

» Wayne Christian (R)

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: During Winter Storm Uri, wind generated less than 6% of our electricity despite averaging 23% during 2020. Natural gas generated 67% of our electricity during the storm despite averaging only 46% in 2020. The RRC has designated natural gas facilities as critical during energy emergencies and put in place weatherization requirements to ensure even better performance in future.

Ethics: I have never allowed a political contribution to influence my decisions in

» Luke Warford (D)

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: Strengthening our energy infrastructure is my number one priority because it is unconscionable that Texans have to live in fear that their power will go out the next time it gets cold. I will establish a clear, substantive, and enforceable weatherization standard, identify critical gas producers, and ensure preparations for the next major storm are actually completed. Emissions: Methane emissions play a large role in climate change, and the Railroad Commission has a tremendous capacity to address climate change by reducing methane emissions while strengthening the Texas economy. I will accomplish this by enforcing existing regulations, limiting the number of flaring exemptions the Commission grants, identifying and plugging methane leaks, and capping orphaned wells.

Seismic Activity: The Railroad Commission's lackluster approach is responsible for the recent increase in seismicity in West Texas. And now, their response to what is happening is unscientific and out-of-touch with the realities on the ground. The Commission should work with affected communities and experts in the water disposal industry to develop a science-based response to the increase in seismic activity.

Ethics: My only priority will be to serve the people of Texas. This job is too important, and the stakes are too high to be influenced by the oil and gas executives we're supposed to be regulating. Last winter's storm is a prime example, where over 700 people lost their lives because the Commission failed to hold the gas producers that fund their campaigns accountable.

Campaign Website: https://lukewarford.com

» Jaime Andres Díez (L)

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: The RRC has taken good steps to fix issues concerning critical infrastructures designations with ERCOT and weatherization requirements. However, there continues to be issues with data management, transparency, and with outlining how they will deal with repeat non-compliance. Regarding repeat weatherization non-compliance, I think the RRC should consider waiving the maximum fine of $1 million.

Emissions: Reducing methane is the most effective strategy for dealing with climate change. Imposing restriction on flaring will reduce methane in TX, but will increase overall methane emission. Flaring/barrel in TX is amongst the lowest in the world. Flaring restrictions will cause forced closure of wells and increases in foreign (less-green) extraction. Solution: Bitcoin mining pays operators to not flare Seismic Activity: There's no one-size-fits-all-solution since seismic activity resulting from water disposal varies greatly due to local geologic formations. However, the RRC must recognize that local entities have a disproportionate share of the risks and limited $ benefit. I would favor moving authority downwards to allow local officials, who are more responsive to local voters, to determine the risk/trade-offs.

Ethics: I pledge that I will only serve one term. Once elected on November 8th, I will stop fundraising. Also, if it ever comes up that as Commissioner I need to vote on an issue that pertains to some donor or associate, then I will recuse myself from that vote.

Campaign Website: https://www.vote4diez.com/

» Hunter Wayne Crow (G)

Natural Gas Facility Weatherization: I would recommend that we invest taxpayers money toward the development of Renewable Energy Technology such as wind, solar, geothermal, conservation and small-scale hydroelectric. Once we have one or more of these methods fully utilized. We would be able to supply a vast amount of energy that would able to resolve the State of Texas current energy demands.

Emissions: Methane is the second most abundant anthropogenic GHG after carbon dioxide (CO2), accounting for about 20 percent of global emissions. Methane is more than 25 times as potent as carbon dioxide at trapping heat in the atmosphere. I will support the enactment of bans on hydraulic fracturing for natural gas and oil on the local, state and federal level and also ensure not further damage occurs.

Seismic Activity: I will support measures that will make Hydraulic fracturing in any form illegal. I will also support shutting down any drilling rig that would be considered to be located in unstable areas of Texas. I think if we ended the United States dependents on fossil fuels we would not have these problems any longer.

Ethics: I can't speak for the other candidate's but as the Green Party Nominee for the Texas Railroad Commission. I will say candidate's in my party are typical disallowed from accepting any PAC, Super-PAC, or corporate contributions. Most Voters do end up supporting Green Candidates due to them having no connections or ties to the oil and gas industry and among other things.

JUSTICE, TEXAS SUPREME COURT

Six-year term. A justice is one of the nine-member Supreme Court, which issues final decisions on civil and juvenile appeals, issues certain orders to governmental officials to act and to individuals to appear before the court, and has jurisdiction over orders or judgments of trial courts, if the Supreme Court determines them important to the jurisprudence of the state. Current salary range: $168,000 to $201,600

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Ethics: Since judicial candidates solicit donations and raise money to be elected, how can voters be assured that campaign donations will not impact how judges interpret the law and/or review lower court decisions?

Standards: Texas requires that candidates for this Court be licensed in Texas for at least 10 years and have no suspensions or revocations in that time. What are the positive and negative impacts of this requirement?

Equity: What can be done to improve access to justice for all, including persons or groups who may be underserved?

Other Issues: What issues do you believe will be the most pressing for the Texas Supreme Court?

» PLACE 3

» Debra Lehrmann (R)

Ethics: As Senior Justice on the Supreme Court of Texas, & after many years of judicial service, I have a proven record of fairly and impartially applying the law in every case. It is critical that we consistently & rigorously apply the rule of law across the board, to supporters and non-supporters alike. The risk diminishes when judges employ sound & stable methods, as I have for many years. Standards: This Constitutional Amendment raised the basic minimum requirements for this office. Because Texans deserve a high-quality judiciary, these standards are essential. But, they are not rigorous enough. I have over 3 decades of judicial experience & have received many awards for exemplary judicial service. Lawyers & non-lawyers have recognized my scholarly, consistent & responsible approach.

Equity: If justice is denied to one individual, it is denied to all. During my tenure on the Court, we have made great progress in improving access to justice for all persons, regardless of financial means. We have devoted much time & effort towards increasing public & private support for expanded representation of underprivileged Texans. Proud of these efforts, I intend to expand upon this work.

Other Issues: Regardless of the subject matter, enforcing the rule of law in a consistent, scholarly, methodical, impartial & fair manner is of utmost importance. As the overseer of the 3rd branch of government, the Court must also ensure that rules governing our court system, and members of the Bar & Judiciary, serve the public in an efficient and just manner. These Court responsibilities are essential.

Campaign Website: https://Justicedebralehrmann.com

» Erin A. Nowell (D)

Ethics: It is incumbent on judges to conduct themselves in a manner that leaves no doubt as to their integrity and fairness. Judges should take steps to avoid both impropriety and the 'appearance' of impropriety. This could include not soliciting campaign donations from individuals with cases pending before them and/or recusing themselves from hearing cases where a ruling could be questioned. Standards: Licensing and conduct requirements help to ensure that the individuals elected to be judges have the requisite experience and character to serve the individuals in their courtrooms. The only negative impact of this requirement may be the exclusion of candidates with extensive practice outside the state of Texas. Nonetheless, these qualifications help instill faith in the judiciary.

Equity: First, we need to increase the individuals in the pipeline who are available and willing to assist those in underrepresented communities – in every level of the judicial system. We also need to support (with both work and money) programs and initiatives that seek to provide equal justice access for all. Other Issues: The U.S. Supreme Court has increasingly divested itself of jurisdiction over issues it has determined belong to the individual states. Examples include gerrymandering, voting rights, and a woman's right to bodily autonomy. Accordingly, these issues will continue to arise within our state courts. As new laws are passed, interpreted, and even contested, the Texas Supreme Court will be Ethics: They cannot, we see evidence of justice for sale on a regular basis.

Standards: The positive is obvious, we need experience on the bench. The negative is the clear restriction on the rights of voters to make the decision without arbitrary restrictions.

Equity: We must continue to support and improve the IOLTA program and the pro bono efforts of the local bar associations.

Other Issues: The Jury system has been under attack in Texas for years. Powerful special interest groups have funded judges who believe they are in a better position than juries to decide questions of fact. We must continue to push for a system in which judges decide questions of law and juries decide questions of fact.

» Rebeca Huddle (R)

Ethics: I have authored over 400 reasoned judicial opinions. This body of work demonstrates my fidelity to the rule of law. My opinions explain why I decided each case as I did and show that I apply the law fairly, in every case, regardless of who the parties or lawyers are or whether they contributed to my campaign. My record also shows I have ruled against campaign contributors many, many times.

Standards: Supreme Court Justices should be experts in Texas law, with long experience. They must be persons of integrity and strong moral character, with sterling reputations. Texas's licensure requirements weed out unqualified candidates, and I support them. Their only negative impact is that lawyers who are new or have been disciplined cannot serve. But that is appropriate in my view.

Equity: The Court's Access to Justice Commission works to expand access to free legal services. More lawyers should volunteer pro bono (free) representation of poor Texans, and courts should encourage and recognize lawyers who do. Technology can also help. The Supreme Court now permits Zoom hearings in routine hearings, so Texans can participate in court proceedings without missing a day of work.

Other Issues: Court backlogs are a pressing issue in some big-city trial courts. If criminal judges don't move dockets, dangerous offenders roam the streets instead of facing punishment. If civil judges don't move dockets, Texas families and businesses wait too long for resolution. I believe Texas judges must always be accountable to the people and dispose of cases responsibly, but as promptly as possible.

Campaign Website: https://www.rebecahuddle.com

» Amanda Reichek (D)

Ethics: While there is always the possibility of influence, strict limitations on judicial campaign contributions along with campaign finance disclosure requirements provide safeguards against abuse. This possibility is also why it is imperative that we elect and retain judges with unimpeachable integrity and a demonstrated commitment to fair play and their oath of office.

Standards: The positive to this requirement is that in theory it is designed to ensure a qualified judiciary. The negative is that in practice it doesn't. Many attorneys have practiced over 10 years and have never been inside a courtroom, and many have practiced fewer than ten years and have more courtroom experience than some attorneys see in a lifetime. But disciplinary requirements ensure integrity.

Equity: Increased access to pro bono services, more funding and resources available for legal aid organizations, simplifying the filing process, and removing other artificial barriers to accessing the legal system.

Other Issues: A slew of "hot button" issues that implicate some of our most basic liberties which counsels quick resolution, but at the same time are emotionally-charged and complicated.

» PLACE 9

» Evan Young (R)

Ethics: First, all Supreme Court decisions are published, so our rulings can be tested for consistency, legitimacy, and sound reasoning. Second, the Judicial Campaign Fairness Act strictly limits how much judicial candidates can receive from individuals, firms, and PACs. No source can be more than a small percentage of a judicial campaign's funds, which helps reduce even the appearance of undue influence. Standards: Texas deserves the highest quality judiciary. These basic standards, which the voters wisely approved by constitutional amendment, promote competence. One risk, though, is that some voters may assume that anyone who meets these minimum requirements is automatically qualified. Longevity and a lack of formal discipline is not enough. Voters must remain fully engaged to elect the best Justices.

Equity: Ensuring open courts is fundamental to public confidence in our judiciary and to protecting individual rights. The Access to Justice Commission, Texas Legislature, and Texas Supreme Court have made great progress in marshaling public and private support and resources for expanded representation of underprivileged Texans and making judicial proceedings more efficient, comprehensible, and fair.

Other Issues: Among its most pressing work, the Supreme Court must ensure, even in times of crisis, and without fear or favor, that the U.S. and Texas Constitutions' limits are respected—the lines between different branches of government, between the state and local governments, and between government power and individual liberty. The Court must make sure that the law is followed, wholly aside from politics.

Campaign Website: https://JusticeEvanYoung.com

» Julia Maldonado (D)

Ethics: In my case, I know that my obligation is to follow the law and to serve all of the residents of the state without regard of any campaign donations made to my campaign. As a district judge, I have a record of integrity and ethics that will continue when elected to the Supreme Court, I have never allowed any campaign donation to influence my decisions which are always in accordance with the law.

Standards: The positive impacts are, the experience practicing, learning about different areas of the law and improving professionally. It is important that the judges, charged with the interpretation of the laws have the utmost ethical behavior and no record of misconduct. The negative impact regarding the length of time is that young lawyers are unable to participate at this level of the judiciary.

Equity: Increase funds for nonprofits who provide services for low-income Texans, ensure that there are educational materials in different languages regarding the court processes. Motivate big firms to provide pro bono services and create partnerships with law schools so that law students can hone their skills while providing much needed legal help under the supervision of their professors.

Other Issues: Equity and access to justice are two of the most pressing issues. We have to ensure that the rights of every Texan are protected and that everyone, regardless of their socio-economic status, has access to justice. The justices have to ensure that Texans feel confident with the Court's actions at all times.

» VOTING FOR JUDGES IN TEXAS

Although in some states, judges are appointed, in Texas most judges are elected.

Judges make decisions about fundamental issues that affect all of us such as family life, education, healt care, housing, employment, finances, discrimination, civil rights, public safety, and government actions. It is critical that our judges make fair decisions based upon open-minded and unbiased consideration of the facts and the law in each case. Judges must know the law and not be influenced by any external political and economic factors.

How is the Texas court system organized?

The Texas court system is made up of a statewide network of trial courts and appellate courts. In trial courts, judges and/or juries evaluate the facts and the law and make a decision in a civil or criminal legal dispute. When decisions in most trial courts are appealed, they are sent to an appellate court where judges consider what happened at the trial court, evaluate legal arguments, and then decide if a mistake was made.

» Jesse F. McClure, III (R)

Ethics: Judges take an oath to rule impartially, and should remove themselves from a case when they cannot. Voters should educate themselves about all candidates for elected office, including judges, and evaluate their track records and campaign promises. Since I have not knowingly received campaign money from a party appearing before me, voters can be sure that contributions have not influenced me. Philosophy: I follow the text of the constitutional provision or statute in question. It is rarely, if ever, proper for a judge to depart from the plain, original public meaning of the text. When dealing with "non-textual" issues, I strive to bring common sense to my decision making, always keeping in mind that vindicating the rights of the citizen is paramount.

Standards: The positive impact of the requirement is that it helps promote experience (and ethical conduct) so that Judges have sufficient experience in the law before making very important decisions that effect the life and liberty of the litigants before the Court. The negative impact could be that a very qualified, but relatively inexperienced lawyer is unable to join this Court.

Equity: In the criminal justice system, indigent defendants at the trial court level are appointed counsel, and we need to ensure that such counsel are competent, fairly compensated, and have reasonable caseloads. In the civil system, other states have experimented with allowing non-lawyers to handle certain matters - an innovation worth evaluating to allow greater access to Texas

» Robert Johnson (D)

Ethics: The truth? There is no way voters can be one hundred percent certain campaign donations will not impact judicial decisions. That's why I favor a system that provides for equal public funding for judicial elections, just as I support a nonpartisan judiciary. A judge's decision should be based on legal precedent. If you vote for me, I promise to decide cases according to the law. Philosophy: My judicial philosophy can be summed up in three words: Less is more. The less a judge attempts to impose his or her will on judicial decision making the more consistent our application of the law will be. Ultimately, this job is not about me or my opponent. This job is about you and all of our fellow Texans. I will remain focused on upholding the letter and spirit of the law as it is written.

Standards: The Court of Criminal Appeals is the highest appellate court in the state concerning criminal matters. This court hears only criminal cases. Judges who serve on the highest criminal court should also have the highest level of experience in practicing criminal law. I have, nearly, two decades of criminal law experience. While ten years is adequate, I believe two decades is better. Equity: I believe our State Bar has set high standards for the representation of indigent and underserved persons/ communities, but we can do more. We should incentivize pro bono legal services for large law firms by providing discounted bar dues and continuing legal education fees for those who show a set minimum number of indigent defense hours. Our justice system is only as fair as it is

Four-year term. The fifteen-member board decides curriculum, standards, student testing, special education programs, and textbooks for Texas public schools. It also oversees the Permanent School Fund. Members of the board are not paid, but receive reimbursement for expenses incurred in the course of official business.

» QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES

Charter Schools: What is the impact of independent charter schools on the funding for local public schools? And is there anything you would do to change that impact?

Inclusive Education: As the developer of Texas public school curriculum, how would you ensure a comprehensive history education that addresses the needs of all students?

Teacher Certification: Are you in favor of replacing the current teacher exam process? Why or why not?

Other Issues: What other issues do you believe will be the most pressing for the State Board of Education?

» DISTRICT 1

» Michael Stevens (R)

Charter Schools: In order to negate the financial impact of charter schools, two things need to be changed. First, the SBOE must increase the rigor of their vetting process, to ensure that pop up schools are not approved. Secondly, in order to keep schools fully funded, we need to fund them based off of their enrollment numbers and not based on average daily attendance.

Inclusive Education: In order to ensure a comprehensive history education that addresses the needs of all students, I would advocate for a Social Studies curriculum that is based on historical factual evidence. Additionally, I would support curriculum that provided students with an overview of our nations history from the perspective of all those who were part of that history, not just a Eurocentric point of view.

Teacher Certification: Yes, I am in favor of replacing the current teacher exam process. The current exam process should be streamlined to test a candidate over scenarios that are directly applicable to the grade level they want to teach. Other Issues: The SBOE needs to consider removing STAAR testing as a requirement for graduation.

Charter Schools: Independent charter schools divert crucial resources away from public schools. Charter schools do not have public oversight of how money is spent & are not held accountable and to the same standards as public ISD's. I would work to ensure that compliance with state quality standards, governance requirements, and financial accountability is created, monitored & held to the same standards as ISD's

Inclusive Education: History should be taught to incorporate diverse perspectives and acknowledge that historical events are affected by race, ethnicity, culture, religion, education, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, disability, and personal experiences. An effective history builds on students' capacity for research, reasoning, generating logical arguments, and critical thinking.

Teacher Certification: I support measures to ensure that Teachers are highly qualified SBEC certified. Being a certified SBEC teacher means that a teacher has undergone the rigorous process of completing an approved Texas Educator Preparation Program sanctioned by the state of Texas. When working with students, standards for the teaching profession must be at the highest level and sanctioned by the state.

Other Issues: Other issues that are most pressing will be to create significant efforts for teacher retention, and solutions to our state's test-based accountability system. Class size limits need to be re-evaluated, and a more inclusive curriculum that focuses on the social emotional learning needs of our students need to be in place.

Charter Schools: Charter schools have a positive impact by creating competition and alternatives to Public Schools, but they are still regulated by SBOE.

Inclusive Education: Truth should be taught. We do not need to re-write history. We need to teach world history, US

History and Texas History with the truth about our History. We were founded as a Christian nation. Slavery and Domination of the American indians was an awful chapter in our countries history. Other countries have been far worse. We were one of the first countries to ban slavery. America is exceptional!

Teacher Certification: I dont feel adequately informed on this issue to respond. I want qualified, caring teachers to teach our children to be life-long learners.

Other Issues: Isssues I believe will be relevant. School safety is a priority, I think the Guardian plan has merit. CRT has no place in Texas Schools. Boys are boys, Girls are Girls. No confusion should be allowed in locker rooms, bathrooms, or in sports.

Campaign Website: https://Kengmorrow.com

» Marisa B. Perez-Diaz (D)

Charter Schools: Because charter schools receive state funding based on ADA, but no local tax revenue, the fiscal impact on traditional public schools varies depending on location of the charter school. More pertinent is the unilateral authority the Commissioner of Education has on the expansion approval of charter schools. The over saturation of charter schools in communities leads to more serious funding impact.

Inclusive Education: I will continue to work with subject matter experts (K12 practitioners and historians) who would: a) contribute content that is diverse in representation (i.e. individuals, communities, and events that have been absent in standards but have played pivotal roles in the history of the US); b) provide guidance about pedagogy, methodology, and content for implementation considerations.

Teacher Certification: At a time when teacher recruitment and retention efforts are in dire straits, it would not make any sense to move forward with a full-on replacement of the exam process which could potentially establish additional barriers to classroom teaching. That said, I would support an updating of the certification process, specifically regarding the expectation of pre-service classroom time.

Other Issues: The SBOE will continue to approve standards for K-12 curriculum, which should be influenced by facts, peer reviewed research, and inclusivity. Additionally, major responsibility for the PSF has moved to a corporation, currently comprised of 5 SBOE members & 3 governor appointed individuals. That governing body must continue to require 5 elected SBOE members for continued democratic representation.

Charter Schools: As a parent & certified teacher all I know is public school. The impact of charter schools increasing in number is largely due to the lack of valuable resources & parental rights. Raising the bar, strengthening the curriculum standards, & recommending the most educational texts will ensure a quality public education. I support parents' choice because we all want what's best for our children. Inclusive Education: As a multi-ethnic & retired military family, my diverse children being taught proper Reading, Writing, Science, Math, Civics & History is crucial for their success. Inclusive Education should never involve identity politics & personal agendas. The SS TEKS need revision, I recommend subject matter experts & work groups that include SBOE observers to provide the best framework, scope & sequence.

Teacher Certification: Teachers have a lot on their plate, especially in our current education climate. The SBOE opposed the EdTPA contract, and I agree with the decision, because the proposed substitute certification tests used by SBEC are not as comprehensive or desirable as the existing exams. As a teacher in TX, the current certification exams I took were rigorous & rendered the proper measurement & evaluation.

Other Issues: Communication & transparency with constituents & parents is a must & adheres to Ed Code Ch 26 Parental Rights & Responsibilities. Adopting engaging & high-quality materials & establishing curriculum standards centered on instruction that promotes a growth mindset & essential skills in Reading, Writing, Math, Science & Civics lends to meaningful learning & helps a child reach their American Dream!

» Rebecca Bell-Metereau (D)

Charter Schools: Most charter schools take in money from tax payer funding for education that goes out of state, and they enroll significantly fewer special ed students with serious disabilities than traditional public schools do. Washington Post notes that "Rocketship has a narrow curriculum" on "reading, math, and test prep," and teachers are not prepared, with high turnover. Texas policy favors them unfairly.

Inclusive Education: Teachers trained in inclusive education should make those decisions, and the state should fund schools well, in order to help all of our students. We have tried on the board to include all students, but the Republicans blocked our efforts to find a compromise on history curriculum, voting to put off having a review of the curriculum until after 2025, so we're operating on outdated biased history.

Teacher Certification: The current certification needs improvement, but I voted to put off making training more difficult because of the teacher shortage. Once we have more teachers willing to teach, we should revisit plans to change to a more rigorous certification system. For the time being, we need to allow multiple ways to qualify for certification; we shouldn't punish teachers who stop teaching out of necessity.

Other Issues: The influence of radical groups that disrupt the process of curriculum revision, without studying the changes being proposed, are a big problem. They fixate on a few items that they dislike and then manage to flood emails, testimony and meetings, convincing some to toss out curriculum created by hardworking teachers who volunteer their time and expertise. This discourages future volunteers.

Charter Schools: I am in favor of school choice. Any student who is not present in class in their local ISD school reduces the funding for that school, whether they are absent, home school, private school, charter school, or somewhere else. We need to ensure that local ISD schools are the best education option for the families in the area.

Inclusive Education: I drafted and the SBOE adopted a new K-8 social studies framework that has two years of world, US, and Texas history in grades 3-8, as well as enhanced K-2 content. We will work with work groups to prepare K-12 social studies TEKS to prepare all Texas students for their future.

Teacher Certification: Yes, although I joined all of my SBOE colleagues in vetoing the new edTPA exam, I have not talked to anyone who loves the PPR. I am in favor of multiple high quality portfolio exam options, and increased accountability for low quality alt-cert providers.

Other Issues: The most important issue for me is Texas 60% CCMR numbers. I have chaired the ad-hoc Flight Plan committee which is updating the TEKS for a new flight plan course to replace the existing career exploration and college prep courses. A flight plan is essentially an IEP for every child. Please reach out if you would like more details willhickmancampaign.com

Charter Schools: Charter schools receive substantially more money per student than public schools. In addition, the average charter school has MANY fewer special education students than the local public schools in their neighborhood. I would vote against approval of any new charters school applications that come before the Board until the rules have changed to make it more equitable Inclusive Education: As a history and government teacher, I try to bring in other perspectives to every unit. Every student in Texas deserves to see their ancestors represented in the curriculum taught in Texas classrooms. I would bring in diverse teachers and historians to help develop the curriculum and vote FOR their changes.

Teacher Certification: I don't believe the test is a good indicator of preparation for the classroom. However, The suggested portfolio is classist. It is too extreme and would cost several thousand dollars to complete. Perhaps a scaled-down version that would do more to show preparation for the classroom but not exclude so many people would be best.

Other Issues: The social studies curriculum approval being put off until 2025 is a huge problem. In addition, the science curriculum needs to include climate change and we need comprehensive see education in our health classes and Health needs to be a required class to graduate in every district in the state not just those that choose it.

Charter Schools: Voucher programs would siphon away funding for public education to charter schools, which spend more on administration but pay teachers less. Charter schools also are not required to educate students with disabilities, do not require teacher certification, and may close with little notice. I support policies that have for-profit schools be paid for by parents who choose to go that route.

Inclusive Education: Every student needs to learn the truth when it comes to historical events, including facts that may be difficult or challenging. Otherwise, we are doomed to repeat the mistakes of the past. For example, there have been proposals in Texas to teach an "opposing view" of the Holocaust; to me, there is no alternative explanation to the facts that led up to this mass murder event.

Teacher Certification: Yes. The current exam, the Pedagogy and Professional Responsibilities exam, is not an adequate test of a new teacher's potential. I support an alternative approach, including more comprehensive teacher training requirements and an improved exam. I feel strongly that a new exam should not be more expensive than the current process, as these costs may create a barrier to entering the profession.

Other Issues: Over the last decade, when adjusted for cost-of-living, Texas spending dropped to a little over $8,000 per student, with Texas ranked 48th out of 50 states. Multiple studies reveal that there is a direct link between perpupil spending and student achievement. Teachers also need to be paid a fair salary that reflects countless hours of hard work of degreed and highly trained professionals.

» Alan Pyeatt (L)

Charter Schools: As parents seek alternatives to public schools, especially in the wake of the Uvalde shooting and other events, the costs for public schools is clearly reduced. As a result, we would expect the public school revenues to reflect that decrease in costs. Inclusive Education: IMHO, our country is experiencing turmoil because we have forgotten our founding philosophy. It is not enough to know that our Founders rooted our government in the theories of John Locke and Algernon Sidney, if we do not know, for example, the goal of government, or what Locke said are the government's three legitimate functions. I intend to ensure that their actual philosophy is taught.

Teacher Certification: I have not yet reached a conclusion on this matter. Other Issues: I believe that it is vital to learn critical thinking skills in school. As a result, I will advocate that every high school student be required to pass a course in applied logic before graduation.

Charter Schools: Public charter schools do not draw property tax funds. Funding for traditional schools allows for the collection of property taxes. The additional per-pupil allocation by the state for charter schools assists in covering the gap in funding. Charters are a choice for parents and students along with private and homeschool. Each educational choice has its own impact within a community.

Inclusive Education: The SBOE oversees the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills by which instructional materials (curriculum) is developed. Local school districts have the legislative right to adopt the curriculum that best suits the needs of their students within the community.

Teacher Certification: No I am not in favor of adopting a national program for teacher certification. I am in favor of developing a program that is specific to Texas that sets high expectations, is implemented with fidelity, and aligns with T-TESS. Other Issues: Legislation, which previously removed the authority of the State Board to approve all instructional materials, should be re-written to require that all core content (Math, Science, ELAR, and Social Studies) curriculum MUST be adopted by the SBOE prior to district adoption.

Campaign Website: https://YoungSBOE.com

» Rhett Rosenquest Smith (L)

Charter Schools: Due to: schools becoming "targets of violence," Covid pandemic risk concerns, and financial (tax $) restraints, Texas voters must re-think the funding of our public schools. Texas Libertarians support freedom and choice, and we believe that allowing funding to follow the school choice that each student makes regarding their own well-being will provide the safest, healthiest, and wisest funding use.

Inclusive Education: Our campaign is supports developing curriculum in nontraditional languages, and curriculum re: Spanish Colonial history — late 18th century period (the American Revolution) and 19th century Mexican history that's fundamental to understanding contemporary Texas. Also, millions of immigrants histories, Mexican, African, not forgetting indigenous Native American, Asian & Pacific Island history

Teacher Certification: Teacher exam process seems cumbersome; local decisions are better, if unnecessary bureaucracy can be eliminated we benefit Other Issues: Our campaign will work to provide a "community college (dualcredit) alternative" for every Texas student and family! However, if voters, citizens, and taxpayers like their traditional school system that was in place during this past year (and prefer to keep it) that will be an option, but I will work to disclose the tax dollars required to maintain an outdated educational framework

Charter Schools: There is a great deal of debate about the drain that charter schools have on the regular public school. Logic would tell you there is some drain causing me to be very selective as to which charters I support. When charters provide a unique reason for their existence such as a recent one specializing in Autism or providing a choice in an area where there are only failing schools,, I will support. Inclusive Education: I contend that our SS standards currently ensure a comprehensive social studies education. The SBOE has made a concerted effort to do so. To add to that, we have two state approved electives in ethnic studies, Mexican American and African American Studies and working to add an American Indian Studies and Asian-American Studies within the next two years.

Teacher Certification: Yes. Apparently parts of the current test are weak. I favor working on improving the test but not creating such burdensome test that we lose good teacher prospects due to the cost or something that presents a tremendous time strain on the student teacher. This should be developed in a collaborative effort comprised of colleges of education with a successful track record.

Other Issues: The most pressing at this in time is the adding the civics requirements called for in SB3 into our current SS TEKS. The reviewing of upcoming legislation and possible effects on Texas public schools is time sensitive. Two ongoing responsibilities are assuring quality instructional materials aligned to our standards and reviewing of charter school applications.

Campaign Website: https://hardyforeducation.com/

» Luis Miguel Sifuentes (D)

Charter Schools: Because funding is based on student enrollment, as students move from public schools to charter schools, they take their student allotment with them at a time when our public schools need funding the most. Public schools are the backbone of our communities. I would advocate for equitable, fair and transparent funding of our schools.

Inclusive Education: As a former educator and social studies teacher, I became very familiar with the TEKS. As a general principle, curriculum and instructional material should be based on fact and inclusive of the good, the bad and the ugly. The SBOE should be inclusive curators of history, ensuring that the identities of all students are included, not just the identities of a few.

Teacher Certification: I am in favor of looking at our teacher certification more closely with a continuous improvement mindset. Jumping into a new exam process without fully vetting the new exam would be a mistake. We have to ensure that the new teacher exam is equitable and addresses the current issues.

Other Issues: The SBOE should work to ensure that they are transparent in their decision making while getting feedback from its customers: educators, parents, and students. I will work to ensure that the voices of parents, educators, and students are solicited and acted upon.

Charter Schools: Funding comes from the legislature not the State Board of Education. The SBOE has a veto over the recommendations from the Commissioner of Education. I prefer to see charter schools that fill a niche the public isd's do not.

Inclusive Education: The State Board only writes standards, not curriculum. It is up to the local school districts to determine the curriculum, i.e. how the standards are implemented. It is important that all our students have the opportunity to see themselves in our standards.

Teacher Certification: This is a decision made by the State Board of Education Certification not the State Board of Education. The SBOE has oversight of this board. The current certification is weak and should be replaced however an equitable certification should be investigated to get the best choice for our teachers. Other Issues: I believe the most pressing issue for the SBOE is to regain some authority over the instructional materials approcess. In 2011 SB6 diluted the SBOE oversight of instructional materials and at that point we started to see our scores spiral downward. Districts can now purchase whatever they want with or without SBOE approval. Assessment is another important issue however that is under the commiss

» Alex Cornwallis (D)

Charter Schools: Charter schools cannot generate property tax revenue or hold bond elections to raise funding and, as a result, are fully funded by the state. Charters receive more per student from the state than public school districts and have double the operations costs compared to public schools. Yes, we now have a system that allows charter schools to grow, which is not sustainable.

Inclusive Education: Our history must not be changed or whitewashed. We should set an example for our children by telling them the truth and not hiding the facts.

Teacher Certification: Let us sit with the educators and listen to them first and find out what the barriers are in the current certification process. Then together, design a certification process that will be easily attainable and address the teacher shortage.

Other Issues: Funding our public school system is a significant issue. There are nontax funding sources at the state and federal levels that I will advocate tapping into to fix our public education crisis. This method of funding will not raise taxes.

Campaign Website: https://www.alexforeducation.com/

» Christy Mowrey (L)

Charter Schools: Charter schools receive less funding and spend an average of 2K less per student. Charter schools create competition and introduce innovation in education. I support any effort to give families more options and educational freedom, especially when it means less burden on the taxpayers.

Inclusive Education: History should be taught based on facts, not political opinions. I do not support teaching history through the lens of the oppressed or oppressor. The curriculum should be politically neutral, factual, and appropriate for the age level taught.

Teacher Certification: Due to the teacher shortgage, I would be in favor of alternative options. The teacher exam should focus on the particular subject taught rather than a broad, sometimes trivial, set of questions. Teachers may be very strong and passionate in one area and weak in another. The ability to effectively teach, passion, and creativity are more important than passing an exam.

Other Issues: The State Board of Education will be faced with many difficult and controversial issues. Many members feel the need to appease their political party or special interests when it comes to making decisions. I'm held accountable to the families and children in my district. Every decision will be based solely on if it will benefit children and taxpayers and give more freedom and choice to parents.

Campaign Website: https://christymowrey.org

» Kathryn Monette (R)

Charter Schools: I don't think there is a financial impact taken away from local public schools. They receive less per child and it is up to the charter school to secure a building for teaching. Charter schools don't receive funds from local tax revenue, but they do receive private donations. Charter schools offer families a choice in education and provide other options for students.

Inclusive Education: History is history regardless of culture or background.

The difference is choosing what parts to emphasize and expound on. I believe that all history needs to be taught equally. American exceptionalism should also be taught as well as the Constitution, the Bill of Rights, the Federalist Papers and the Mayflower Compact. They should be taught fairly and non-partisan without political agendas.

Teacher Certification: The teacher exam process is important, but I think also a program like they have in Florida would be advantageous. Florida encourages veterans to be teachers and streamlines the process.

Other Issues: Education needs to be about teaching the core subjects of math, English, writing, science, music, reading, history and geography. All the social emotional learning of the day should be left to parents to teach instead of the schools. Teach character and respect for others instead. No sex ed under 6th grade of any kind in school. Parental rights and transparency of all teaching materials.

Campaign Website: https://KathrynMonette.org

» Aicha Davis (D)

Charter Schools: Please see my recent OpEd in the Fort Worth Telegram, titled "Charter schools' growth need review as it costs TX districts," discussing the funding impact for local isds // Inclusive Education: In my first term, I successfully led the adoption of African American Studies as a TEKS based course available statewide, and now I'm leading Native American Studies. During the current social studies review, I've fought tirelessly for truth and inclusion in each of our courses. I work directly with diverse advocacy groups and experts to better incorporate the cultural richness of America,

Teacher Certification: I am in favor of an exam process that ensures teachers have foundational skills to meet diverse student needs. I also believe exams should be financially supplemented to allow more opportunities to recruit teachers. I voted against EdTPA because of the dismal results in other states. I have concerns with language in the PPR, and look to develop more equitable ways to measure readiness. Other Issues: The SBOE has the responsibility of reviewing resources districts may adopt to accompany TEKS. The process has become extremely politicized, leading to the denial of any resources for elementary health TEKS last year. After the current social studies review, the SBOE will have to review new resources. Previous history books had inaccurate language and did not fairly represent women or minorities.

» Evelyn Brooks (R)

Charter Schools: The level of impact independent charter schools have on the funding for local public schools is not the same for each ISD community. Texas charter schools are open enrollment with no tuition. Charter schools receive state taxpayers' dollars but do not receive any local taxpayers' dollars. All parents have the right to choose the type of educational environment they wish for their children. Inclusive Education: The motto "E Pluribus Unum" served as our nation's first motto meaning "Out of Many One." America's rich history encompasses many ethnicity groups and nationalities coming together to make America the great nation it is today, and should be taught interwoven as one historical strand, as opposed to being taught in separate courses based entirely on race. College courses offer ethnic studies.

Teacher Certification: I am not in favor of replacing the current teacher exam process, because the current process ensures that all teachers complete educational requirements, pass required teacher certification exams and pass a background check. Doctors, pilots, lawyers, and many other specialty professions require these same measures to ensure quality and competence. In all, I earned certification in four states.

Other Issues: I believe the most pressing issues for the State Board of Education will continue to be writing and setting superior academic curriculum standards that are free of political agendas and activism, with the focus of preparing a highly educated society with virtues once again. Of further concern is the Permanent School Fund's ability to guarantee school bonds.

Campaign Website: https://www.evelyn4texaseducation.com/

» Tracy Fisher (D)

Charter Schools: The impact of charters on local funding is monumental as all school funding comes from the same bucket, comprised of state and local taxes. Due to how the State has accommodated charters, they receive an average of $1150 more per student/year than public schools. Their funding comes without the accountability or oversight mandated to local schools. I will advocate for equity and accountability.

Inclusive Education: I will engage highly-qualified education professionals to review and confirm that the content addresses the needs of students from all backgrounds. I will ensure history experts review the current curriculum for complete historical accuracy. I am a fierce advocate for Texas parents, kids, and communities. I am the experienced candidate to prepare our kids for their world.

Teacher Certification: Yes, we need to recruit and build a pipeline of highly-qualified teachers. Their exam process should NOT be financially burdensome. Also, we need to implement an exam for charters. Currently, only 57% of our public ed teachers have degrees in education, and the remainder is alternately-certified. We know, on average, that alternatively-certified and charter teachers have higher turnover rates.

Other Issues: Additional pressing issues I've identified for SBOE: Keep politics out of education; Implement fewer high-priority learning standards to focus on deep learning and what is essential for our kids; Respect local control to meet the needs of all kids; Maintain veto power over new charters, and gain control over charter amendments; Ensure fiscal responsibility over the permanent school fund

Welcome

The League of Women Voters of Texas is a nonpartisan, grassroots civic organization that encourages informed and active participation in government. The League works to increase understanding of major public policy issues and influences public policy through education and advocacy. Membership in the League is open to people 16 and older of all gender identities. With 100 years of experience, the League is one of America's oldest and most trusted civic nonprofit organizations.

Nonpartisanship Policy

The League of Women Voters never supports or opposes any political party or political candidate.

Purpose and Goals

Candidate forums and debates are important venues for furthering the League's nonpartisanship mission. Forums sponsored by the LWV, or in which the LWV participates, must be nonpartisan and must ensure that all participating candidates will be treated fairly and equally.

The purpose of debates and forums is to educate the public about issues, allow face-to-face comparisons of the candidates and their positions, and stimulate and increase voter interest and participation in the election. The forum may address, but not be limited to, issues considered to be of important educational interest to the League and any co-sponsoring organizations. Issues of interest to the general public must be included.

A candidate forum is a live public meeting in which all the candidates for one or more offices present their views in short individual speeches, and then answer questions from the audience. A debate allows the candidates to appear concurrently, in face-to-face confrontations, with opportunities to respond to each other.

Additional information can be found at LWVTexas.org on the Voter Education page under League Management and at LWV.org. Sample invitations, forum guidelines and moderator scripts are provided in the Appendix. Also included is a Memorandum of Understanding template to be used when partnering with other organizations to host a forum. Your League may customize any of these materials, or develop your own.

If a situation related to a debate or forum arises that is not covered in this Guide, contact the state office, or the LWV Texas Chair, Voter Services.

Plan the Forum

Set the date

Choose a date after the filing deadline and before the start of early voting (if it is scheduled in your area) or before the election. These dates can be found on the Secretary of State's website votetexas.gov. The forum may be recorded and presented on YouTube, Facebook, Instagram and/or embedded on your website.

Choose forum platform

Determine whether your forum will be held in-person, using a virtual platform or a hybrid event.

 In-person: An in-person forum must be open and accessible to the public, so choose a place that will not seem to exclude some potential audience. Keep in mind the expected attendance, need for microphones or media equipment, and an appropriate staging area for the candidates and moderator. Check policies for food or beverages if you plan to have them available. Use the Diversity Equity and Inclusion (DEI) Lens Events checklist and the Able-Bodied Privilege and Accessible Event Planning to evaluate locations.

Check your League's insurance policy to be sure coverage is adequate or that a co-sponsor or the facility where the event is being held has sufficient coverage. Contact the LWV Texas if you require a co-sponsor.

- Online: Shifting to a virtual platform can be more inclusive and allow for greater attendance and participation. Choose a platform such as Zoom or Google Meet and educate yourself on its features, including capacity limits, how it integrates with other platforms and the options available for hosts, panelists, and participants to interact. Practice by running through the entire event with all participants, including the candidates. Consider closed captioning and/or translation options.
- Hybrid event: While hybrid events do have the advantage of having the panelists and moderators in the same room, they can result in added costs and technical challenges to the event.
- Other: Some Leagues have forums that are not done before a live audience, such as those recorded in a studio where only League members and the candidates are present. In this case, questions are typically gathered from the community prior to the event using social media.

Resource

 Zoom Best Practices and Sharing (Livestreaming) to Facebook (from the League of Women Voters of Florida)

Consider partnering with a co-sponsor

Co-sponsors must understand that the League cannot waive any of its nonpartisanship policies and procedures. Co-sponsors cannot have endorsed or been affiliated with a candidate or ballot issue, nor should they have any plans to make any future endorsements.

The League should take the lead in contacting the candidates, negotiating disputes, and controlling the format. The League should provide the moderator and timekeeper, or should approve of these in advance.

Co-sponsors may:

- Participate in planning, finding facilities, obtaining TV (perhaps says media since it could be radio, youtube, etc.) coverage, and providing publicity, volunteers and refreshments;
- Publicize the event in their newsletters and encourage attendance; and/or
- Contribute monetarily, but this is not required.

Consider delineating the responsibilities in writing in advance with the co-sponsoring organization(s).

Some groups that may be appropriate co-sponsors include, but are not limited to:

- Local chapter of NAACP, LULAC, AARP, or AAUW
- Chamber of Commerce
- PTA
- Neighborhood association
- Law enforcement association
- Civic club or organization
- Environmental organization or garden club.

In order to protect our nonpartisanship, political parties and political organizations should not be asked to co-sponsor because they have a vested interest in their candidates. It would be allowable to work with them in nonpartisan elections, such as city council or school board, but even then the League needs to avoid being linked with any one party. Any group whose leadership has made public statements for or against any candidate, that is known to support a candidate informally, or that advocates for an issue which is on the ballot, should not be asked to co-sponsor.

Fund your forum

Candidate forums, or public educational forums on public policy issues or ballot issues, are educational and do not advocate for a certain candidate or issue. Money from a League's general fund may be used, as well as donations from co-sponsoring organizations. Do not take or solicit donations from candidates or political parties. Do not sell ads for candidates or issues in any handouts or newsletters.

Determine which races to include

Local Leagues have responsibility for forums for U.S. Representative, State Senator and Representative, regional candidates (including State Board of Education and Courts of Appeals, subject to approval of LWV Texas), and for all local candidates. The Voter Services Shared District Tracking List identifies which League(s) have responsibility for each district. Leagues that share districts may consider co-sponsoring a candidates forum.

Forums affecting statewide offices should not be sponsored by local Leagues without LWVTX Board approval and co-sponsorship.

Consider how many contested races will be on the ballot in your area, and how many candidates are running in each. You may not be able to hold forums for every office. Or you may want to have several forums, either back-to-back on the same day, or on different dates. If possible, include all contested races for the same type of office – e.g., state representative – in the same forum.

- For general elections: Invite all candidates who will be on the ballot for each race included in the forum.
- For primary elections: Candidates running in different party primaries may be asked to appear in different forums, or they may be included in the same forum. You must also decide whether to include only the parties that have primary elections (the Republican and Democratic parties) or to include all parties recognized by the Secretary of State's Office, as well as declared independent and write-in candidates.

Make candidate selection decisions in a transparent, fair and reasonable way, using selection criteria established in advance by your board. It is also helpful to have criteria in place to deal with unexpected situations, such as last minute write-in candidates.

Check the Voter Education section of LWVTX Policies and Procedures Manual (found on the Publications page under League Management at LWVTexas.org) for the policies for Candidate Debates and Forums.

Consider the format and timing

Do you want to have opening/closing statements and Q&A, or an informal "meet and greet" or "candidate fair", where candidates can meet voters individually, talk to them, and hand out campaign information? It may be possible to combine a structured forum, with an informal "meet and greet" or reception before or after.

For a structured forum, plan on an introductory statement (often three to five minutes) and a closing statement (one to two minutes) from each candidate, and add that to the time for questions for each office. The forum should not exceed two hours.

Some Leagues give more questioning time to the higher offices; some do not include the Justices of the Peace and Constables, or just give them time for a short speech.

Decide how to ask questions

Do you want to have questions from the audience, from a panel and/or from a moderator? If you use a panel or moderator, they must have no previous relationship with any of the candidates. If you want questions from the audience, do you want to use written or oral questions? The pros and cons of each method are presented below, but on the whole, written questions provide much more control and allow a broader range of questions, but oral questions allow for livelier discussions. Consider the audience when choosing the method or perhaps a combination of methods.

It is not recommended that questions be shared with candidates prior to the event for the following reasons:

- Responses may have been written by someone else.
- It is informative to evaluate a candidate's ability to respond spontaneously, and to give organized and appropriate responses as would be required if elected to office.
- Candidates need a good working knowledge of the issues and duties of the office which they are seeking. Having the questions in advance may not provide an indication of such knowledge.

You may consider asking the candidates to avoid using their cell phones and any written material when they take part in a forum so they cannot research questions being asked while another candidate is answering. You may provide some note paper with pen/pencil for candidates to make notes during the forum.

Oral questions

Oral questions allow for more active audience participation, but have several drawbacks: The questioner may ramble or attempt to make a speech, may personally attack a candidate, or may ask a question that does not really pertain to the office. Often a certain question triggers similar questions in the audience's mind, limiting time to explore other areas of interest. Sometimes one questioner may dominate as others in the audience defer to them. It can sometimes be hard to hear the questioner, or to understand their point.

If you decide to use oral questions, consider the following suggestions:

- Specify a time limit for asking the question, e.g. 30 seconds.
- Have questioners use a microphone so everyone can hear them.
- Make sure the audience knows the "rules" for questions: addressed to an office, not an individual, no personal attacks, etc. And, be prepared to disqualify a question if it is inappropriate.
- Ask for questions for a specific office, if its candidates haven't had enough "air time."

Written questions

Written questions have several advantages: The audience has time to think of good questions, and to craft them in writing. A range of interests is often reflected in the questions.

With written questions, question screeners can be used to:

- Eliminate or rephrase questions that are inappropriate or poorly written.
- Reword questions addressed to an individual candidate so they apply to all candidates.
- Group questions that are similar or are about the same subject, leaving more time for other questions.
- Write reserve questions to be used if the audience does not submit enough questions to fill the time allotted.
- Prioritize questions so that the more important ones are first.

Televising or recording the forum

Leagues often work with the media to obtain the broadest possible coverage.

- Check with your local television station to determine if they would like to broadcast the forum live or record it for delayed broadcast. Many cities film candidates forums for broadcast on community access cable channels. A media department of a local college may be able to provide technical assistance.
- Newspapers need content for their website and might podcast or webcast a forum as well as advertise it in the newspaper.
- Post the video on your League website, Facebook page or other social media channels. The goal is to reach as many potential voters as possible, so website availability and rebroadcast times should be well advertised.

For in-person, virtual or hybrid events, LWVUS recommends that debate or forum moderators issue a verbal statement at the beginning of the event to this effect: "Recordings of this event, whether they be in-person or on a digital device, may not be used without the express written approval of the League. The League will only allow audio/video of this event to be broadcast in its entirety, except by the media reporting on the event." This statement should also be written in the description of the virtual event.

No part of a candidate's remarks should be edited, and candidates are not allowed to use any part of the forum for campaign purposes. If the recording needs to be shortened for broadcast, League members should work with the film editor to make sure only non-essential portions are edited out. A broadcast can be cut into segments, as long as all segments are available.

For more detailed information, check the policies for candidate debates and forums in the Voter Education section of the LWVTX Policies and Procedures Manual (which can be found on the Publications page under League Management at LWVTexas.org).

Does the Texas Open Meetings Act apply?

The Texas Open Meetings Act, adopted in 1967, requires meetings of governmental bodies to be open to the public, including informal meetings. If a quorum of a governmental body (such as a city council, school board, or county commissioners court) attends a candidates forum, that forum may be subject to requirements of the Texas Open Meetings Act. To constitute a quorum, included are not only incumbents who are candidates participating in the forum, but also any other members of the governmental body who are in the audience.

The act requires public notice of the time, place and subject matter of such a meeting, as well as minutes or tape recordings of the session. The act also permits members of the public to record open meetings with a digital device, tape recorder, video camera or other means of aural or visual reproduction.

The responsibility for deciding whether a forum is an open meeting under the act belongs to the elected officials and their governmental body, not the League or other sponsor of a candidates forum. If the forum is considered an open meeting, the governmental body must provide notice and record of the meeting. The League or sponsoring organization should be in contact with the governmental body to coordinate any arrangements for recording the forum and to ensure that notice of the meeting states that it is a forum with questions being posed to the candidates. If the forum is determined to be an open meeting, the League, whether it is a sponsor or moderator, may not prohibit members of the public from recording it.

The Open Meetings 2018 Handbook on the Texas Attorney General's website, as noted in Resources, has more detailed information.

Prepare for the Forum

Obtain candidate information

During or after the filing deadline, obtain the names and contact information of all candidates from the public official in charge of filing for the election. If you contact the candidates during the filing period, you can ask them to "save the date" and to let you know of any major conflicts for the date. Then, after the filing deadline, do a final check to make sure you have a complete candidate list.

You can obtain candidate filing information from the following officials:

 Primary elections - Contact the county offices of the political parties with candidates in the races being covered by your forum. All statewide offices must file with the state party, as well as certain non-statewide offices such as U.S. Representative, member of State Board of Education, Courts of Appeals Justices, District Judges and District Attorneys, unless their district is composed of only one county. However, most county party officials will have information on those candidates who will be on the local ballot.

- General elections Contact the Secretary of State for statewide offices, and the local Election Administrator or County Clerk for local offices.
- City elections Contact the City Secretary.
- School board elections Contact the school district administration office.
- Other boards and districts Contact the administration office.

Invite the candidates

Send a written invitation, signed by the president of the League or organization, which includes information about the forum, the criteria for participation, debate/forum format and rules, a form of candidate's acceptance of format and rules, and a waiver for League distribution of debate content, including video recordings. (See Sample Documents in the Appendix.) It should be sent to candidates in a traceable form (email with a read receipt requested or USPS with a signed mail receipt).

The invitation should state that only the qualified candidates will be allowed to participate, and no substitutes or stand-ins will be allowed to speak for a candidate. The only possible exception might be the death of a candidate after filing and before the election, when the name will still appear on the ballot. The stand-in could then explain what a vote for the deceased candidate would mean, but would not participate in the question/answer period.

If not all candidates for an office can attend the forum, be sure that you comply with League policies on "empty-chair" debates, as detailed in the Guidelines for State and Local League Debates, the link which can be found in the Candidate Forums section of the Voter Education page under League Management at LWVTexas.org.

In general, you must have at least two candidates for each office participating in the forum if any one or more of the following conditions are true:

- the office is a federal office, or
- the event is advertised as a debate and not a forum or meet-and-greet, or
- the forum is to be broadcast.

In other cases, a single candidate may appear as long as all candidates for the office were invited and the event would not damage the League's nonpartisan reputation by creating the impression that the League favored one candidate over another.

If candidates refuse to participate, the League president may submit a letter to the editor of local/statewide newspapers stating that candidates are expected to participate and if they do not, they are denying the community an opportunity for public education about them and the issues.

Send other invitations

Invite media members to cover the event. Candidates in uncontested races and current elected officials may be invited, as a courtesy, as well as city or school administrators.

Appoint forum officials

- Moderator The moderator should be thoroughly familiar with LWV policies and principles, especially nonpartisanship. The moderator's political views and positions should be generally unknown in order to avoid any appearance of bias or partisanship. The moderator should not be identified as a member of a political party or a friend of any of the candidates. A member of a neighboring League might be asked to serve as moderator, or even a non-League member.
- Timekeeper The timekeeper should keep accurate time with a stopwatch and signal time remaining to the speaker.
- Question Screener If written questions from the audience are used (in-person) or if participants are able to submit questions via the Q&A function (virtual), one or more persons should be appointed to screen the questions before giving them to the moderator or posing them to the candidates (as previously described under Decidehow to ask questions). The screener should have a working knowledge of the issues pertaining to the election.
- Technical Coordinator For virtual meetings, assign someone to recite the technical rules and guidelines, and to be on hand to monitor technical issues.
- Question collectors/ushers For in-person events, these volunteers direct people to seats, pass out question forms, and collect them from the audience during the forum.

Prepare promotional and/or printed material

Arrange publicity through print and other media, including social media, public service announcements on radio and television. Put announcements in League newsletters, on VOTE411.org and in Voters Guides. Send email to co-sponsors and other organizations. Consider signs and banners for the forum venue, and posters or flyers to place in businesses or public places.

For in-person forums:

- Print programs for the audience, with information about the candidates and offices, the forum format, election dates, dates and media channels of recordings, and the League's contact information and nonpartisan policy.
- Print a nameplate to place in front of each candidate, showing the candidate's name and office sought.
- Have Voters Guides, VOTE411.org information such as bookmarks, membership forms and other League publications available during the forum, but avoid any publications that advocate for a certain position.

For virtual events:

- Post voting information and the LWVTX Voting & Elections links in the chat function.
- Include a slide at the beginning and end of the forum reminding participants about voting dates, the League's contact information and nonpartisan policy,

Visit the site

In-person events - Before the event, visit the site to determine the staging. Check the availability of a podium or lectern for the moderator, and tables for the candidates. Determine the arrangement of the candidates, and the placement of panelists, if used, and the question screeners. Consider whether the audio is sufficient; several microphones are preferable to just one. Determine whether the seats for the audience will have to be arranged just prior to the event. If the forum will be recorded, consider where the camera will be placed. Make sure the backdrop is pleasing and appropriate. Check the location of light switches and heater/air conditioner thermostat or fans. Arrange for a table outside the meeting room for the candidates' campaign literature, as well as League literature. Check the availability of restrooms and fire exits.

Virtual and Hybrid Forums - Before the event, the Technical Coordinator should guide several run-throughs of the event, testing audio and visual access for all participants, including at least one practice with the candidates.

Manage the Forum

Set up the room

For an in-person event, on the day of the forum, the Forum Coordinator and other volunteers should arrive early to do the final set up, to place water and nameplates at the candidates' tables and to set up a sign-in table for all attendees. Designate a person to greet the candidates as they arrive, check them off a list, and answer any questions about the format. Have question forms for the audience, and ushers to pass them out and take them to the screener or moderator. During the event, watch to make sure everything is running smoothly.

Regardless of format (in-person, virtual or hybrid), for League record keeping purposes, establish a process to tally the number of attendees, including candidates and their staff, news media, general public, and League members.

Run the meeting

The League President, Forum Coordinator or Moderator should welcome the audience and candidates and explain the purpose of the event and the League's nonpartisan policy. A statement of the importance of voting and participating in government may be included.

The Technical Coordinator should give an overview of the functions of the virtual platform.

The Moderator should explain the format, including time limits and how questions and answers will be handled. He or she should introduce the timekeeper and explain how time limits will be signaled to the candidates. It is important to remind both the candidates and the audience that no personal attacks will be allowed.

The Timekeeper should sit on the front row (or be visible on screen) to be easily seen by the candidates and moderator and should have a stopwatch and some device or sign for signaling the candidates as to their time limits. Signs to indicate time left are better than bells or gavels, which are more disruptive. Establish a procedure for handling "over-run" statements by the candidates.

If the forum has been deemed subject to the Texas Open Meetings Act, the League or sponsoring organization may announce at the beginning that the forum is considered an open meeting and as such is being recorded by the governmental entity and provide information as to how the recording will be available. Anyone who wants to record all or any part of the open meeting should be allowed to do so, according to the provisions of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

If the forum has not been deemed an open meeting, announce at the beginning that mobile phones should be turned off as a matter of courtesy and that unauthorized photographs or videos are not allowed because the FCC requires that a forum must not be edited and must be broadcast in its entirety, except by media reporting on events.

Candidates are not allowed to use or edit the footage for campaign purposes. Realistically, there is no way to guarantee that someone won't capture some video or audio without our knowledge so a disclaimer should also be put in the guidelines for the debate. The League wants to ensure that information is not manipulated to create false or misleading impressions.

The Moderator should introduce each group of candidates and explain the duties of the office, salaries, and term, if these are not available in printed form. He or she should be familiar with the candidates' names, party affiliations, and the order in which they will be seated. The Moderator should have a system of determining the speaking order of the candidates, such as alphabetic or ballot order or by random draw. It is a good idea to vary the speaking order during opening, closing and question responses. One method is to place all names within a container and draw one at a time. Use a separate draw of names for opening and closing statements. When there are more than three candidates, it is suggested that the moderator determine a process to track which candidates have already spoken to a question and which have not, so that no one is overlooked.

After the candidates' opening statements, allow time for the candidates to respond to questions from the audience or panel. Candidates' responses should be timed and can usually be limited to one minute. Questions should be directed to an office or place, or all candidates, but not to an individual.

At the end of the question period, allow each candidate to make a closing statement of a pre-set length, so they may correct any misimpression and/or thank the audience.

The League President or Moderator should make any closing announcements. Thank the candidates and the audience for their attendance and participation, remind them of Voters Guide availability and/or publication date, early voting dates, and media channels where the recording of the event can be found. Also, direct the participants to VOTE411.org. A Sample Moderator Script can be found in the Appendix.

Head off problems and disruptions

The Moderator should be aware of any hot issues that might cause difficulty. He or she must maintain proper decorum, and should not become nervous, angry, rude, or overly casual. Humor often diffuses a tense situation.

In recent years, members of the audience have asked for recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance, or requested some other addition or change to the agenda. If you anticipate this type of request, it's best to determine ahead of time how to handle it. Ask the candidates if they generally have an opening ceremony at their meetings, such as the Pledge of Allegiance. You can either add it to the agenda or be prepared to explain why the original agenda will be maintained.

Find out if there are any candidate activities planned before or after the forum that would require more crowd control measures, such as directions to the meeting place or additional security personnel.

Consider the following tips to help address any unplanned activities or disruptions that may occur:

- Have the Moderator meet with the candidates before the forum starts to re-affirm their understanding and agreement to the rules and format.
- Distribute or email an agenda and/or format rules to all participants.
- Consider having police or security people present at the event.
- Have a number of League members sprinkled throughout the audience to help maintain order.
- Moderators should be prepared to keep their composure and maintain a strong, yet civil tone that exemplifies the respectful discourse expected of Leagues.
- Include a statement like the following in the Moderator's opening remarks:
 "In order to ensure that you have the most time to hear from the candidates running to represent you, we have established the format, time and terms for this forum together.
 All candidates (you might choose to name them) have agreed in advance to the following rules." And then read the agenda and rules or format.
- If there's pushback from the audience perhaps consider a couple of quick options:
 - o "If we hear no objection from the candidates and those assembled, we'll take a minute to do that before we start." (or)
 - o "We are happy to entertain that at the end as time allows."

Evaluation

With the Board and forum workers, conduct an evaluation of how the forum worked, and write down what should be changed in the future. Then send thank-you notes to the candidates for appearing and for running for office. After the election, you may want to send congratulations to the winners, as well as encouragement to the candidates who did not win, thanking them for their participation in the political process. If you have received approval to use the League of Women Voters of Texas grant, file the appropriate project reports to apply for reimbursement.

Moderate a Non-LWV Forum

Many organizations ask the League to moderate their candidate forums. In such cases, the League must still ensure that the forum meets League standards for nonpartisanship and fairness to candidates, i.e.:

- All candidates for the offices are invited.
- All candidates are given equal time and opportunity to make opening and closing remarks and answer questions from the audience.
- Questions, whether written or oral, are based on issues, do not include personal attacks, and are presented to all candidates for an office for response.
- The forum conforms to League policies such as videotaping and placement of candidate materials.

Be sure to provide the organization with a copy of the LWVTX Policy on Candidates Forums prior to agreement to moderate the forum.

The sponsoring organization should meet the same guidelines as a co-sponsor for a League forum; they must be approved by the League Board of Directors and cannot have endorsed or been affiliated with a candidate or ballot issue. The event cannot be publicized as a League forum.

However, the sponsoring organization, not the League, may take the lead in setting the date, arranging a venue, funding the event, providing volunteers and publicizing the event. They may also invite the candidates, as long as the League nonpartisanship standards are maintained. The sponsoring organization and the League should agree on the format of the forum.

The League should provide the moderator, timekeeper and question screener, if possible. Additional volunteers may come from the sponsoring organization.

If the forum is to be broadcast or recorded, League policies on broadcasts must be maintained. Any use of forum recordings requires the express written approval of the League; and the League will only allow audio/video to be broadcast in its entirety, except by the media reporting on the event.

Sample Invitation to Candidates

[Use LWV logo and/or local League letterhead]

The League of Women Voters, a nonpartisan political organization, encourages informed and active participation in government and influences public policy through education and advocacy.

[Date]

To Candidates for:

[Name of office and place]: [names of candidates and party, if appropriate]

Dear Candidates:

The League of Women Voters of [your League] invites you to participate in a public candidates forum to provide information to voters for the coming [give date and type] Election. The purpose of the forum is to educate the public about issues, allow face-to-face comparisons of the candidates and their positions, and stimulate and increase voter interest and participation in the election.

The candidate forum will be [date and time] at [location and address].

[If you will have multiple sessions, state the time of each session and which candidates will appear, as follows:]

We will have two sessions, as follows:

Session 1, [time], for [name of office] candidates Meet & Greet, [time], for all candidates in both sessions Session 2, [time], for [name of office] candidates

Details of the forum and its format are in the attached Forum Guidelines and Participation Agreement.

I would appreciate your response regarding participation in the candidate forum no later than [deadline for response]. You may contact our Forum Coordinator by email or telephone, using the contact information below. As we receive responses, we will update the list of participating candidates on our website [URL for website].

Thank you for your participation.

Guidelines for Candidate Forum

[Name of forum] [date and time of forum] [location of forum]

[description of format, such as the following:]

U.S. Representatives 10:00 - 11:00 Candidate Meet & Greet 11:00 - 11:30 State Representatives 11:30 - 12:30

- 1. Please RSVP by [date and time], so that we can finalize arrangements and distribute publicity for the forum. We will list the candidates invited and indicate whether they are attending, not attending or no response received.
 - If you plan to attend, complete the Participation Agreement at the bottom and email the document to [name and email].
 - If you do not plan to attend, please email your reply to [name and email].
- 2. Candidates invited to participate in the forum:
 - All candidates who will appear on the ballot for the above contested races are invited.
 - Only candidates will be allowed to participate, and no substitute may stand in for a candidate at the forum, either to read a statement or to distribute candidate literature.

[If the forum is subject to rules prohibiting participation by a single candidate for an office, include a statement like one of the following:]

- Note to candidates for U.S. Congress: LWV policies and Federal Election Commission regulations require that in a forum for candidates for U.S. office, at least two candidates in a race must participate; otherwise, a single candidate in a U.S. race can only be introduced at a forum but not speak or answer questions.
 Candidates for U.S. office will be notified if they are the only candidate in the race who has agreed to participate.
- LWV policies require that at least two candidates in each race must participate in this forum; otherwise, a single candidate in a race can only be introduced at a forum but not speak or answer questions. Candidates will be notified if they are the only candidate in the race who has agreed to participate.

3. Unopposed candidates invited to be introduced:

 Unopposed candidates may not be speakers at the forum; however, they may be introduced during the forum and are invited to the Meet & Greet.

4 Sessions:

- Candidates should arrive at least 10 minutes prior to their respective session.
- Candidate literature should be placed on tables provided at the back of the room. It may not be placed on seats or handed out to attendees as they enter or leave the room for the forum. Only small items are permitted in the room (e.g., cards, brochures, flyers), not large signs or banners.
- All candidates will be seated by office sought, in an order determined by a random draw [or other method]. Speaking order will be rotated.
- Each candidate will have up to three minutes for opening remarks, in the order seated.
- Written questions from the audience will be read by the moderator and each candidate for the office addressed will have up to one minute to respond. The speaking order of candidates will rotate.
- Each candidate will have up to two minutes for closing remarks, in the reverse order from opening remarks.
- Candidates may not address questions or remarks to other candidates; all questions will come from the audience.
- All candidates are invited to attend the Meet-and-Greet to talk individually to attendees and distribute campaign materials.
- QUESTIONS? Contact [name, email, telephone].

PARTICIPATION AGREEMENT: I agree to participate in the Candidate Forum [date] and accept the format and rules as presented above. The forum content is the property of the League of Women Voters of [your League] and permission must be sought to rebroadcast the forum in its entirety or to print excerpts. I agree that I will not use any portion of the forum in a political advertisement.

Nonpartisanship policy:

The League of Women Voters, a nonpartisan organization, encourages informed and active participation of all citizens in government and influences public policy through education and advocacy. The League does not support or oppose any political party or candidate.

If forum is an open meeting under Texas Open Meetings Act:

The [governmental body] has determined that this forum is an open meeting under the Texas Open Meetings Act. [Minutes or recording] of this forum will be available [when and where]. Members of the audience are also allowed to tape or record the meeting in an unobtrusive manner.

Taping policy if forum is not an open meeting:

Before I introduce the candidates, please put away your cell phones and cameras. According to League guidelines, candidate forums cannot be taped or broadcast without permission of the League. No portion of the candidate forum may be used as part of campaign materials.

Format of session:

This session will present the candidates for [specify offices]. [(Describe term and responsibilities of each office and introduce the candidates, including any unopposed candidates in the audience.]

[If you anticipate any requests from the audience regarding format or procedures, you may say the following:] In order to ensure that you have the most time to hear from the candidates running to represent you, we have established the format, time and terms for this forum together. All candidates have agreed in advance to the following format. [Include any specific parts of the format that may be problematic.]

To begin, each candidate will have up to 3 minutes for opening remarks. After that they will respond to written questions from the audience. Then each candidate will have 2 minutes for closing remarks.

All candidate remarks will be timed, to ensure equal opportunity for everyone. Our timekeeper is [name] a member of our League. Candidates, she will raise signs to let you know how much time is left. Please stop promptly when your time is up.

The program has a form on which members of the audience may submit a question for our Q&A period. As you listen to the candidates, you may write a question on the form and pass it to the aisle for one of the League members to pick up. Hold up your hand if you need another form or a pencil. Please write questions for an office, rather than an individual. Questions will be screened for appropriateness and grouped by topic.

Candidates' opening remarks:

The candidates are seated, left to right, in the order in which they will give opening remarks. [Describe how order was determined.] Each candidate will have up to 3 minutes, beginning with [name of first candidate].

[Announce the name of each candidate in turn.]

Questions and answers:

We have collected several questions from the audience. Each candidate will have the opportunity to respond to each question. We will vary the speaking order to allow different candidates to speak first, last, etc.

The first question is ... We will give each candidate 1 minute to respond, beginning with [name of candidate]. [It is helpful to provide candidates with a list of the speaking order for each question.]

Candidates' closing remarks:

Each candidate will now have 2 minutes for closing remarks. Candidates, you may want to address any issues that have come up during the questions.

This time we are going to go in reverse order from the opening remarks, beginning with [name of first candidate].

End of Session

This concludes this session of our candidate forum. Thank you to the candidates for your participation and to the audience for your attendance and questions. Please check your program for information about Voters Guides, voting dates and sample ballots. [If multiple sessions] We will have a break during which time you can talk to candidates individually. We will begin the next session promptly at [time].

Subject: question re: "assistance" in filling out ABBM

Thanks for all that you're doing! I shared all the information, clarification and links re: the ABBM and voter registration forms with our Voter Services team which includes Joyce Doyle who also does VDR volunteer work for the local Democrats. We are planning on including a pre-addressed, stamped envelope with ABBM forms & the Tips one-pager we provide at our LWV GOTV events and Joyce asked the question below. IMO providing a pre-addressed, stamped envelope is not the same as helping someone complete the application or mailing for them. Does LWVTX have any guidance/opinion on this specific question?

Subject: Re: information on VOTE411, new forms, new laws etc

Thank you for this great information. We will be doing some Voter Registration soon and of course offer help with ABBM both there and at Dem HQ. Are you sure that it's OK to give out envelopes and stamps? I saw this on the SOS website under instructions for :

- 1. "If someone helped you complete the application or mailed the application for you, that person must complete Section 11. [giving their name and address as an Assistant]
- Affix postage.
- If you printed the application you must place it in your own envelope and add postage."
 It bothers me that he says "your own envelope." Maybe I'm being too suspicious and it just means they won't be supplying an envelope. It would be ridiculous if you couldn't give them an envelope and even a stamp. Did you address the envelope to the elections office?

I'll forward your information on to our VDRs. Thanks. Joyce

1. Introduction

Policies and procedures are operational guidelines to help the League fulfill our mission of empowering voters and defending democracy. Our policies and procedures assist the board in implementing our bylaws. Policies are reviewed every two years by the board of directors, revised as needed, and adopted by the board. Updated Policies and Procedures are shared with Leagues and League leaders by email and online.

Review Process

Biannual reviews are required and include:

- headings are they appropriate?
- placement of items are they in the right place?
- readability does it make sense?
- League links use links from LWVUS or LWVTX whenever possible vs copying and pasting from LWVUS or LWVTX web pages or documents. This keeps information up to date.
- outside links Governmental agencies and resources as needed i.e., FEC, IRS
- accuracy is it true? legal?
- applicability Who does the policy apply to: LWVTX, local Leagues or Leagues at large? Is it clear?
- usefulness is it useful information for the Policies and Procedures or does it belong somewhere else?
- date updates

This Manual is an e-book Only

Because of the League's commitment to the environment, these policies are available electronically with links to pertinent resources. We suggest printing only the page you need in order to support this commitment.

2. Nonpartisan Political Policy

LWVUS: Guidelines for Developing and Implementing Nonpartisan Policy

LWVUS: Criteria for League Participation in Marches & Events

Members of the state, local League boards, and Leagues at large shall adhere carefully to the nonpartisan political policy of the League of Women Voters of the United States (LWVUS).

"The League of Women Voters does not support or oppose any political party or candidate." LWVTX BYLAWS 2021, Article II. Purposes and Policy, Section 2. Policies, a) Political Policy.

State Board

The state board president, the chairs of the advocacy and education committees, the voters service coordinator, and others the public strongly identifies with the state League shall avoid political activities that may give the appearance of partisanship.

A state board member may accept appointment to, or run for, a local political office if:

- the election does not require a party affiliation,
- the board of the local League involved gives approval, and
- the state League board approves

Prospective LWVTX Board Nominees

The Nominating Committee shall explain to prospective board nominees the League nonpartisan political policy. The state board shall explain to prospective off-board appointees the nonpartisan political policy.

League at Large Leadership Team

- League at large chairs/presidents and voter services leaders shall avoid political activities while on the leadership team that may give the appearance of partisanship,
- Other team members who have public roles, such as those who routinely conduct candidate forums, should strive to be non-partisan, and
- If a League at large team member declares for an elective office, the team member shall resign from the team, but may continue to be active in the League and return to the team when appropriate.

Both State Board members and League at large Leadership Team

- are encouraged to vote in the primary of their choice,
- are encouraged to participate in political activities but must first consult the state board if they are in doubt as to whether their activities could compromise the League's nonpartisanship,
- shall not run for office in a partisan race or accept a partisan appointment (except precinct chair),
- shall avoid indicating their political affiliations or candidate preferences at any level of government in the media, including on social networking sites or other public venues that also prominently identify them as a member of the team, and
- shall review and discuss the nonpartisan political policy annually.

Issue Chairs

- shall avoid activities that could compromise League nonpartisanship and
- are encouraged to participate in political activities but must first consult the board if they are in doubt as to whether their activities could compromise League nonpartisanship.

Local Leagues

 Each local League board should formulate a nonpartisan policy that best reflects existing conditions in its League, as well as the political climate and traditions in its community.
 LWVUS: Guidelines for Developing and Implementing Nonpartisan Policy

3. Diversity Policy

LWVUS: Diversity Equity, and Inclusion Policy

LWVTX: https://lwvtexas.org/diversity-equity-inclusion

Commitment to Diversity

LWV is an organization fully committed to diversity, equity, and inclusion in principle and in practice. Diversity, equity, and inclusion are central to the organization's current and future success in engaging all individuals, households, communities, and policy makers in creating a more perfect democracy.

Participation in the League

There shall be no barriers to full participation by members in this organization on the basis of gender, gender identity, ethnicity, race, native or indigenous origin, age, generation, sexual orientation, culture, religion, belief system, marital status, parental status, socioeconomic status, language, accent, ability status, mental health, educational level or background, geography, nationality, work style, work experience, job role function, thinking style, personality type, physical appearance, political perspective or affiliation and/or any other characteristic that can be identified as recognizing or illustrating diversity.

4. LWVTX State Board

LWVTX: LAL Conflict of Interest Form 2020

LWVTX: LWVTX Conflict of Interest Disclosure Form (2020)

Board Meetings

- The president shall determine the dates and places for state board meetings with consideration for the cost of the meetings and convenience of all state board members.
- A preboard compiled from the written reports of on-board and off-board members, to be included in the preboard report, shall be made available before each board meeting.
- Unexcused absences, those not approved by the president, from two consecutive board meetings, or three unexcused absences from board meetings in a biennium, shall be considered a resignation from the board. The secretary shall record absences at the direction of the president. The president shall notify the board member in writing of each unexcused absence.
- The board may vote by email between board meetings, if necessary, and decisions will be ratified on the consent agenda at the next board meeting.
- Board members are serving as members of the League and not in their professional, executive, or administrative capacity.

Board members and local Leagues

- Board members are encouraged to be active in their local Leagues. However, it is expected that the state level of the League will be the primary focus of their League volunteer time.
- Board members should limit attendance at local League board meetings to those occasions when the local League agrees to include the visit on its agenda.

Executive Committee

An executive committee may be created to act on behalf of the state board. Interim decisions that cannot be postponed may be made between regularly scheduled board meetings. Such interim decisions must be recorded and confirmed or revised, at the next regularly scheduled board meeting.

- A. The executive committee shall consist of the president, treasurer, secretary, and the vice presidents.
- B. The president has the discretion to refer items to the executive committee or the full board between the board's regular meetings.
- C. A majority of the executive committee members shall constitute a quorum.
- D. Any interim decision made by the executive committee must be confirmed, or revised, at the next regularly scheduled board meeting and reflected in the official minutes.

Board Nominations

LWVTX: LWVTX Board Nominations web page

• As a courtesy, the state League Nominating Committee should,-prior to naming a nominee for a state board position, notify the nominee's local League president.

• DEI will be considered throughout the nominating process.

Conflict of Interest

LWVTX: LWVTX Conflict of Interest Disclosure Form (2019)

- A. Members of the state board shall not receive compensation, such as salaries or stipends, for services rendered, nor shall they sell professional services or products to the League deemed necessary to carry out the mission of the organization.
- B. The executive director shall not be a member of the state board. (It is considered inappropriate for those earning a salary or fee to be a part of the decision-making body that hires, fires, and determines salary and benefits.)
- C. Members of the state board may accept modest honoraria or gifts for speeches or other activities rendered to others on behalf of the state League. Other honoraria or gifts shall be given to the state League.
- D. In any matter in which a state board member or the member's family has a substantial financial interest, the board member shall refrain from participating in the discussion prior to a vote, refrain from attempting to influence the outcome of a vote, and abstain from voting.
- E. In the interest of openness and transparency, all board members, staff, and issue chairs shall sign an annual disclosure form and include current employment, current service on other boards of directors, and/or family or business relationships with voting or nonvoting LWVTX directors or employees, whether or not deemed a conflict of interest.

5. Advocacy

LWVTX: Guide to Issue Chairs, Action Papers

This policy applies to all advocacy activities based on state League positions in order to influence any branch of state or federal government. The state board directs overall advocacy efforts by adopting goals and choosing legislative priorities; assigning issues; determining how, when, and by whom strategies shall be developed and implemented; entering into litigation; resolving conflicts among local Leagues regarding jurisdiction or action that cannot be settled otherwise; and directing local League advocacy to state government.

Legislative Priorities

- The Advocacy Committee recommends legislative priorities to the board for adoption after reviewing input from members, capitol corps, legislative coordinator, and issue chairs.
- Implementation of legislative priorities is the responsibility of the Advocacy Committee chair, capitol corps coordinator, legislative coordinator, and issue chairs with the concurrence of the president.

Approval process

• All action, testimony, written statements, action alerts and the Capitol Action Report shall have prior approval of the Advocacy Committee chair and the president.

Advocacy volunteer positions

Issue Chairs

- Recommends action supporting League positions in their assigned areas, with approval and guidance of the Advocacy Committee chair and the president, and
- Implements recommendations approved by the Advocacy Committee chair and/or president.

Capitol Corps Coordinator

- Responds to the requests of Issue Chairs, and
- Coordinates Capitol Corps volunteers efforts at the Capitol, at the request of Issue Chairs and the Advocacy Committee chair.

Capitol Corps Volunteers

• Fulfills advocacy actions at the Capitol, as requested by Issue Chairs.

Legislative Coordinator

- Acts on behalf of the state League,
- Maintains an active advocacy presence at the Texas Capitol,
- Promotes priority and active issues, and
- Represents the state League, when needed, at the Capitol, in coalition meetings, and with collaborators and affiliates.

Appointments

Reappointment of current issue chairs and coordinators

- After state convention, the current chair of the Advocacy Committee gathers recommendations from the current president, the incoming president, and others to determine which issue chairs, capitol corps coordinator, and legislative coordinator to recommend to the board for reappointment.
- The Advocacy Committee chair sends an official email
 - reminding the issue chairs and capitol corps and legislative coordinators that their 2-year term is ending
 - o and thanking them for their service.
 - If they are to be reappointed, asks them if they would like to continue.
 - If they are not recommended for reappointment, the email makes it clear that their term is over and thanks them for their service.

Appointment of new issue chairs and coordinators

- At convention and in emails to members, a request for volunteers is made for issue chairs, capitol corps coordinator, and legislative coordinator positions.
- The Advocacy Committee chair reviews issue chair applications, interviews applicants and makes recommendations to the board.

Approval by Board

- At the first meeting of the new board, the Advocacy Committee recommends Issue chairs, capitol corps coordinator, and legislative coordinator for the next term.
- Issue chairs and other positions are recruited, reviewed and recommended as needed by the Advocacy Committee and approved at the next board meeting.
- After board approval, Issue chairs, capitol corps coordinator, and legislative coordinator are sent an email explaining their term of service, their duties and a request they refrain from conspicuous partisan activities during their term of service. They are also asked to fill out a Conflict of Interest form.

Coalitions, Collaborations, and Affiliations

See lwvtexas.org/league-advocacy for a current list of approved organizations

League membership in coalitions, collaborations, and affiliations with other groups shall be approved by the state board.

Joining or resigning from a coalition, collaboration, or affiliation shall be a decision of the board based on the following guidelines:

- After consultation with the issue chair recommending the action, the Advocacy Committee chair must present to the board information about a group, such as purpose, mission, major goals or activities, reasons for membership, and verification or affirmation of its nonpartisanship.
- The League's representative to each group must be identified when the list is presented to the board by the Advocacy Committee chair, or as soon as possible thereafter, and the representative's role, if any, with the group must be described.
- Fees for joining should be carefully examined for merit and reviewed annually.
- If the League commits to expending funds other than for dues, the League liaison must ensure nonpartisanship is maintained in order for the expenses to be covered.

Definition of terms

Coalition

A group with which the League works that is organized around a specific issue or issues and in which the League has an equal opportunity for input into a group's agenda.

Collaboration

A group or groups with which the League may conduct a single activity, like a forum or survey, or a specific reform effort, like a sunset or campaign finance reform.

Affiliation

A group with which the League may lobby and from which the League receives information or newsletters but does not determine the agenda.

Formal statements by League representative

 The League representative to a group of which the League is a member must have the prior approval of the state League president or designee before making any formal or public statement of League position on a specific issue.

Formal statements, emails or letters by a group

- The group shall never use the League's name on statements, letters, press releases, publications, or any other materials without prior League consent. Such consent is required each time the group wishes to use the League name.
- A request shall be approved by issue chair, advocacy chair, and president before the League logo or name is attached.
- If the League disagrees with a majority opinion of the group, a public statement of the League's dissent should be issued.

Partisan activity

If the group in any way participates in partisan activity (i.e., opposing or supporting a candidate or party), then the League shall withdraw from the group.

Action (Advocacy) by Local Leagues, and Leagues at large

Bylaws Article X, Section 3. Program Action

- Local Leagues may act on program only in conformity with positions taken by the LWVUS or the LWVTX.
- Local Leagues, Leagues at large, or members may act on program at the state level in the name of the League only when authorized to do so by the state board.

Policy On Lobbying A State Legislator

If the Advocacy Committee chair grants a local League permission to lobby a state legislator using a Local League position, the following applies:

- The local League can lobby only on a bill affecting their area. If an amendment to the bill changes the scope (no longer local but statewide), the local League cannot lobby for the bill.
- The local League must always specify that they represent their local League when lobbying for the position. If they are asked about the state League position, the local League must tell them the state League has no position on the issue.

• The local League may lobby any local state legislator, but if they lobby a nonlocal legislator, they must inform the Advocacy Committee chair. (If they give testimony in a legislative committee, they shall inform the Advocacy Committee chair.)

Appointments to Public Boards, Commissions, and Committees

The League shall take the initiative in recommending people to serve on appointed public boards, commissions, and committees. The president shall be consulted on all recommendations. The full board shall approve recommendations if time permits. League members shall have priority for League support over other candidates with similar qualifications.

Conflict of Interest

When a League director or off-board chair is appointed to a state board or commission, the state League board shall decide whether or not member shall resign any League position(s) due to potential conflict of interest.

Support or opposition of political nominees

Under very special circumstances, the League may support or oppose political appointments to a state office, agency, committee, or board with the direct approval of the state board. If the board is not to meet in time for the matter to be considered, the board shall be polled by telephone or email. The League may oppose a nominee only when the nominee clearly has no qualifications for the job–not when the nominee merely holds opinions that differ from League positions.

LWVTX: Voter Services Shared District Tracking List 2022

TXGOV: Texas Ethics Commission TXGOV: Texas Secretary of State

The state League, local Leagues and Leagues at large shall follow LWVUS Voters Guide Best Practices.

Local League, League at Large and State League Responsibilities

LWVTX

- A. LWVTX produces a Voters Guide that includes all statewide candidates and/or ballot issues.
- B. This Voters Guide also covers candidates for regional office whose regions cover large areas, such as Courts of Appeals judges and State Board of Education members.
- C. When reproducing the statewide Voters Guide, local Leagues and Leagues at large may exclude those regional candidates who will not be on their local ballot.

Local Leagues/Leagues at large

- A. May produce a Voters Guide that includes candidates and/or ballot issues that are on the ballots in its designated area.
- B. These will include candidates for U.S. representative, state senator, state representative, and county, city, school board, and/or other district elections.
- C. Shared districts

LWVTX: Voter Services Shared District Tracking List 2022

- Certain U.S. House of Representative, State Senate and State House of Representative districts comprise an area that is covered by more than one local League and/or League-at-large. In these cases, it is important that the Leagues coordinate with each other regarding VOTE411org, Voters Guides, candidate forums and interviews with candidates or officeholders.
- For those districts covered by more than one League, only one League per district can be responsible for contacting candidates and entering the sets of questions in VOTE411.org. The Shared District Tracking List designates the lead Leagues for such districts for purposes of contacting candidates and for VOTE411.org.
- If issues arise regarding coordination among Leagues that share districts, the LWVTX Voter Education Chair should be contacted.

Review and approval of local Voters Guides

- Not required if the local Voters Guide covers races and candidates.
- Required if the local Voters Guide is in a pro/con format for local ballot issues, and is published online, on VOTE411.org or in print.
- The local League/League at large should contact the LWVTX Education Chair for approval and supervision before publication.

Producing a Voters Guide

LWVTX: A Guide to Voters Guide 2022

Include the League nonpartisan policy

The League nonpartisan policy should always be printed in a prominent place on the front page of a League voters guide.

"The League of Women Voters does not support or oppose any political party or candidate."

Voters Guide Questions

LWVTX: Voter Services Shared District Tracking List 2022

LWVUS: Are Your Voters Guide Questions as Unbiased as You Think?

LWVUS: Sample Questions for Debates and Voters Guides

- 1. Questions for candidates should be open ended, non-leading, fair, balanced, and nonpartisan.
- 2. Questions should be reviewed by the local board before releasing questions to candidates.
- 3. LWVTX will develop the candidate questions, contact the candidates and enter all candidate information in VOTE411 for the following offices. Local Leagues should not contact candidates for these offices.
 - US Senator
 - Governor
 - Lt Governor
 - Attorney General
 - Comptroller of Public Accounts
 - Commissioner of the General Land Office
 - Commissioner of Agriculture
 - Railroad Commissioner
 - State Board of Education
 - Texas Supreme Court
 - Court of Criminal Appeals
 - Court of Appeals

Local Leagues should coordinate with LWV Texas and adjoining Leagues to cover the offices below using the Shared Districts List. LWVTX will cover when there is not a League assigned to cover.

- US Representative
- Texas Senator
- Texas Representative

Regarding Candidates

Instructions to candidates

As soon as possible after the filing deadline, explicit instructions and questions are sent to candidates in a traceable form (VOTE411, USPS delivered with signed mail receipt, or email request return receipt option). Clearly articulate the ground rules for inclusion in the League Voters Guide. For example:

1212 Guadalupe #107, Austin, TX 78701 www.iwytexas.org 512.472.1100 www.iwytexas.org

- Explain word limitations so candidates know any responses over the word/character limit will be truncated at that number. VOTE411 calculates the word count for candidate responses.
- If a local League is not using VOTE411, include rules for counting/printing word numbers, symbols, abbreviations, dates, caps, boldface, italics. If the answer is cut, it is indicated with slash (///) marks.

Editing

No editing for spelling or grammar mistakes, so candidates cannot say their answers were changed by the League.

No response from candidate

If the candidate does not respond by the print deadline, they will be listed with the notation "No response received by the print deadline". If submitted after the print deadline, their information may be included at VOTE411.org.

References to opponents

- Negative references to opponents (including officeholders) or specific persons are not allowed.
- General references to other political parties may be allowed.
- If a response is deemed to not meet the criteria for the Voters Guide and, if time permits, the candidate may be contacted and given an opportunity to reword the response before the publication deadline.
- If the response is not changed, in place of a response that does not meet the criteria, the Voters Guide will state, "Candidate's response did not meet the criteria listed in this Voters Guide."

Photos of candidates and videos

Photos of candidates may be included as part of a Voters Guide. Videos may be included as part of an online Guide, but must comply with the Voters Guide criteria. However, if a candidate does not provide a response to at least one question, the Voters Guide should not include a photo or video.

Inclusion of candidate rules

These rules should be summarized in the Voters Guide. A copy of the state League instructions to candidates may be requested by contacting the state office.

Unopposed candidates

Leagues should decide in advance whether to invite unopposed candidates to participate in their Voters Guide. Space limitations may dictate their exclusion, but their responses may be important in providing information to the voter, especially in Voters Guides placed on League websites. If not invited to participate, Unopposed candidates should be listed.

Write-in candidates

In statewide races, write-in candidates must file a declaration of write-in candidacy with the Texas Secretary of State, and their names are posted in the polling place. However, their names are not on the ballot, and their responses are not included in the state League Voters Guide.

Local Leagues may develop a policy to include local write-in candidates in their Voters Guide if the filing deadline permits the inclusion of all candidates. This local policy does not apply to regional candidates included in the state League Voters Guide.

Membership ads

A membership ad for the League may be included in the Voters Guide. However, a 501(c)(4) League shall not place membership information funded with 501(c)(3) Education Fund money.

Constitutional amendment or ballot issue Voters Guides

LWVTX: How To Write a Constitutional Amendment Voter Guide

League positions related to Constitutional Amendments or ballot issues must not be included in the Voters Guide. If the League publishes a fact sheet on its position, it should not be distributed so that it appears as a supplement to the Voters Guide.

Publication and distribution of the printed Voters Guide

- Voters Guides may be published and distributed in hard copy and should also be made available online through local League websites, LWVTexas.org, and VOTE411.org.
- Free copies of Voters Guides will be distributed by LWVTX to selected local libraries in areas not served by a local League or League at large. The locations will be chosen based on population density. The LWVTX Board will determine the number of copies for each election based on the probable level of interest. Both English and Spanish copies will be provided to each library.

Candidate Debates and Forums

LWVUS: FAQs League Candidate Forums and Debates

LWVUS: Hosting Virtual and Hybrid Candidate Debates and Forums

LWVTX: 2021 A Guide to Candidate Forums

General for All Debates and Forums

- A. Forums and debates must be nonpartisan and ensure that all participating candidates will be treated fairly and equally.
- B. All candidates for the races included on the ballot must be invited to participate. Only qualified candidates should be allowed to participate, and no substitute may stand in for a candidate.
- C. A letter of invitation should include the criteria for participation, debate/forum format and rules, candidate's acceptance of format and rules, and a waiver for League distribution of debate content. It should be sent to candidates in a traceable form (USPS delivered with signed mail receipt or email returned mail receipt).

1212 Guadalupe #107, Austin, TX 78701 lwvtexas.org 512.472.1100 www.lwvtexas.org

- D. The language of the waiver for distribution should be: "The debate or forum content is the property of the LWV and permission must be sought to rebroadcast the debate or forum in its entirety or to print excerpts. Candidates must agree that no portion of the debate or forum will be used in a political advertisement."
- E. Issues of interest to the general public must be included.
- F. The meeting must be open to the public, in a place that will not seem to exclude some potential audience, unless conducted for broadcast-only purposes or using a digital platform.
- G. Donations from candidates or political parties should not be solicited or accepted.

Live streaming policies and recommendations

- A. Identify the League
 - 1. Display a podium sign with logo or a banner in front of the candidate's table or across the back of the stage showing the League name.
 - 2. Use tent cards or place cards for each candidate with the LWV logo and their name.
- B. Nonpartisan statement
 - 1. The moderator shall provide a very brief introductory and closing message stating the date and name of the LWV and that this is a nonpartisan candidate forum being published unedited.

League Responsibilities for Holding Forums and Debates

LWVTX

- The state League is responsible for organizing debates or forums for statewide offices, such as governor and U.S. senator.
- Since election laws change, the state League will ascertain before each election cycle information regarding any election law changes from the Federal Election Commission (www.fec.gov), the IRS (www.irs.gov), the Federal Communications Commission (www.fcc.gov), and the Texas Secretary of State's office and will consult with local counsel as needed.

Local Leagues and Leagues at large

- Local Leagues need state board approval to sponsor debates or forums involving statewide offices. Where appropriate, the state League will invite local Leagues and Leagues at large to co-sponsor forums or debates involving candidates for statewide office.
- Local Leagues and Leagues at large have responsibility for debates or forums for U.S. representative, state senator, state representative, regional candidates, and all local candidates. Coordinate forums/debates with other Leagues as needed based on Voter Services Shared District Tracking List 2022.

Local Leagues

Local Leagues should have a written forum and debate policy, including rules, procedures and criteria, and it should be reviewed annually. Leagues at large use LWVTX /LWVUS policies. Since election laws change, the state League will ascertain before each election cycle information regarding any election law changes from the Federal Election Commission (www.fec.gov), the IRS (www.irs.gov), the Federal Communications Commission (www.fcc.gov), and the Texas Secretary of State's office, and will consult with local counsel as needed.

Federal Definitions

Federal Elections Commission: FEC regulations for Federal elections

Internal Revenue Service: https://www.irs.gov/

Federal Communications Commission: https://www.fcc.gov/

- The Federal Election Commission (FEC) regulates the conduct of corporate, labor and nonprofit organizations in federal elections, including both 501(c)(3) and 501 (c)(4) organizations.
- Debate FEC regulations define a debate as an event that (a) includes at least two candidates, (b) is staged in a way that does not promote or advance one candidate over another, and (c) allows the candidates to appear concurrently, in face-to-face confrontations, with opportunities to respond to each other.
- Forum The FEC defines a forum or other non-debate candidate appearance as a place, meeting, or medium where ideas and views on particular issues are exchanged.
- The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) regulates radio, television, and cable broadcasters. Under its regulations, a broadcaster that permits a candidate for any public office–federal, state, or local–to use its facilities must provide all other legally qualified candidates for the same office with equal opportunities for use.
- Internal Revenue Service (IRS) rules provide that 501(c)(3) organizations "may not participate or intervene, directly or indirectly, in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office." This prohibition applies to campaigns for public office at all levels-federal, state, and local. A violation of IRS rules could jeopardize the tax- exempt status of the 501(c)(3) organization responsible.

Candidates Participation Guidelines

Candidates must meet the following criteria:

- A. Requirements of the Texas Constitution and/or the Constitution of the United States
- B. All requirements to be on the ballot according to Texas election laws
- C. Demonstrate significant voter interest and support by being nominated by a recognized political party in Texas, raising sufficient funds to require reporting under FEC rules for federal races, or showing that a formal campaign is being waged.

Candidate participation guidelines for federal races

- A. A debate or forum must have at least two candidates for each federal office. An empty chair debate (where only one candidate is present) cannot be held as it can be considered by the FEC as an "in-kind" contribution or providing "something of value" to a federal candidate and thus subject to the prohibitions of federal election laws. A single candidate for a federal office may not be a speaker at a debate or forum. The candidate may be introduced and invited to meet and greet attendees at the end of such meetings; however, the candidate should not remain on the stage.
- B. A debate or forum should not start if only one candidate for a federal office is present. If the debate or forum includes several races, the other races may begin while waiting - for the late candidate.

- C. If a candidate declines, cancels, or does not appear, the debate or forum may proceed if more than one candidate for the federal office is present. If only one is present, the debate or forum for that office must be canceled. The moderator may present any factual reasons given by the candidate without editorial comment. If the candidate who canceled provides a statement, the moderator may read it. If no reason is given, the League should state that it was contacted by the candidate or the campaign and told the candidate would not be able to appear. The League can state that no reason was given for canceling.
- D. Attempts may be made to reschedule the debate or forum.
- E. If a candidate refuses to participate, the League president may submit a letter to the editor of local/statewide newspapers stating that candidates are expected to participate and if they do not, they are denying the community an opportunity for public education about them and the issues.

Empty Chair Guidelines

LWVUS: FAQ's Candidate Forums-Debates

Debates:

LWVUS: Guidelines for State And Local League Debates including "empty chair" debates

Forums:

- LWVTX Empty Chair policy for forums allows candidates in contested races to appear in a forum (not debate) to speak and respond to questions. If only one candidate appears from the field of candidates invited, then acknowledge the absence of the missing candidates and proceed with the forum. (Oct. 2019)
- If only one candidate appears, make a statement that going forward with the forum does not imply endorsement of this candidate. (Oct. 2019)

Debate Locations for State and Local Races

LWVUS: Hosting Virtual and Hybrid Candidate Debates and Forums

For state and local races, the event may be held in any location that is accessible to the public or be live streamed in a format that is widely accessible.

Co-sponsorship for All Debates and Forums

- A. Cosponsors cannot endorse or be affiliated with a candidate or ballot issue and must be approved by League leadership. Any group whose leadership has made public statements for or against any candidate, which is known to support a candidate informally, or that advocates for an issue on the ballot should not be asked to be a cosponsor. An exception can be made if both of the two major political parties (Democrat and Republican) are cosponsors.
- B. The League should take the lead in contacting the candidates, negotiating disputes, and controlling the format for a forum that is cosponsored.
- C. The League should provide the moderator and timekeeper or should approve of them in advance. The moderator should not be identified as a member of a political party or a friend of one or more of the candidates.

Moderating a Non-League Forum

- A. A League may moderate a candidates forum sponsored by another organization as long as the forum conforms to League procedures and principles to ensure a nonpartisan event. The League should provide the sponsoring organization with information about its requirements for candidates forums, including inviting all candidates, allowing equal time for all candidates, placement of any candidate materials, videotaping, etc.
- B. The sponsoring organization cannot endorse or be affiliated with a candidate or ballot issue and must be approved by League leadership. The League should not moderate a forum for any group whose leadership has made public statements for or against any candidate, which is known to support a candidate informally, or that advocates for an issue on the ballot.
- C. The sponsoring organization may take the lead in contacting the candidates and planning the date, time, and location, although the League may provide help upon request. The format of the forum should be agreed upon by the League and the sponsoring organization.
- D. The League should provide the moderator, timekeeper, and question screener, if possible. The moderator should not be identified as a member of a political party or a friend of one or more of the candidates. Additional volunteers may come from the sponsoring organization.

Texas Open Meetings Act

TXGOV: Open Meetings Act Handbook 2022

Candidate forums and the Texas Open Meetings Act

- A. The Texas Open Meetings Act, adopted in 1967, requires meetings of governmental bodies to be open to the public, including informal meetings. If a quorum of a governmental body, generally a majority of its members, is present at a meeting, it may be subject to the requirements of the Texas Open Meetings Act. It is the responsibility of the elected officials and their government entity to determine whether a candidates forum constitutes an open meeting under the Texas Open Meetings Act and, if so, to post notice and arrange for minutes or taping of the meeting.
- B. If the forum is considered an open meeting by the governmental entity, the League or sponsoring organization should be in contact with the governmental entity to coordinate any arrangements for taping or otherwise recording the forum and to ensure that notice of the meeting states that it is a candidates forum with questions from those in attendance.
- C. The League or sponsoring organization may announce at the beginning that the forum is considered an open meeting under the Texas Open Meetings law and as such is being recorded by the governmental entity and provide information as to how the recording will be available. Anyone who wants to record all or any part of the open meeting should be allowed to do so, according to the provisions of the Texas Open Meetings Act.
- D. If the forum is not posted as an open meeting, the League should follow its own guidelines for broadcasting.
- E. If the forum is taped or broadcast, the League should not allow an empty chair debate.

Broadcast Policies

Broadcast policies for all debates/forums not subject to Texas Open Meetings Act

- A. A radio, television, or cable broadcaster must not edit the debate or forum, and it must be broadcast in its entirety, either live or reasonably soon after the debate. The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) requires that a debate or forum must include at least two candidates. The exception is news media reporting on the event.
- B. Candidates are not allowed to use or edit the recording for campaign purposes.
- C. Candidate's cell phones must be turned off. The moderator should announce that unauthorized videos are not allowed because the FCC requires that the debate must not be edited and must be broadcast in its entirety, except by media reporting on events.
- D. The content of the recording belongs to the League and its cosponsors. Any use of the recording requires the approval of the League with the caveat that it must be broadcast in its entirety. The recording can be posted in written or streaming audio/video on a League website or another website if approved by the League. It can be broken into segments as long as all segments are available.

7. Program/Studies

LWVTX: Program Planning, A Guide to League Study Consensus and Concurrence, Advocacy & Issues.

LWVUS: Impact on Issues: A Guide to Public Policy Positions

Program Responsibilities

Per LWVTX Bylaws (Article X. Principles and Program Section 2. Program)

- Local League/League at Large boards may make recommendations for state program, including proposed concurrence, to the state board at least 3 months before the convention or statewide meeting.
- The state board shall consider these recommendations and formulate a proposed program, which shall be sent to the presidents of local Leagues and to the chairs of Leagues at large at least 30 days before the convention or statewide conference.
- Any League or the state board that plans to propose the adoption or amendment of a state League position by concurrence on the floor of the convention shall give notice to the state office to be sent to all local Leagues/Leagues at large and the state board, of its intent to do so at least 6 weeks before the convention. The proposing League or state board shall send background information, including pros and cons on the issue and an explanation of the rationale for using this form of member agreement to the state office, and the state office shall send the information to all local Leagues, state board, and Leagues at large at least 30 days before the convention.
- The convention shall adopt the proposed program by a majority vote on each subject presented to it. A program recommendation submitted to the state board at least 3 months prior to the convention but not proposed by the state board may be adopted by the convention if its consideration is ordered by a majority vote of the convention. A two-thirds vote is required to adopt a nonproposed item, or to amend or adopt a state League position by concurrence on the floor of the convention.

Program Adoption

Local Leagues and Leagues at large Propose New Studies, Concurrence, and Updates to Positions.

- A. Local Leagues and Leagues at large provide all members with the opportunity to make recommendations for new statewide program studies or changes to existing LWVTX positions.
- B. Boards of Local Leagues and Leagues at large vote on recommendations based on member input and submit them to the state office on the required form by the stated deadline on the form.

Local Leagues and Leagues at large Propose Adoption of New Positions by Concurrence.

- A. Local Leagues planning to propose adoption of new positions by concurrence at the convention must submit their intentions on the required form by the stated deadline on the form.
- B. If the proposed concurrence is not recommended by the state board, all requirements in the bylaws must be fulfilled (see above).

State Board Recommends New Study, Changes in Positions, or Restudy

- A. The Program Chair presents program recommendations for a new study, concurrence, or review to the state board based on recommendations from issue chairs and from local Leagues.
- B. The state board votes to adopt the proposed program.
- C. The state board informs Local Leagues and Leagues at large no later than 30 days before the convention or statewide conference.

Convention Delegates Vote on New Study, Changes in Positions, or Restudy

Delegates vote first on the proposed studies and changes to existing program positions recommended by the board before voting on any non-recommended items approved for consideration.

Program Review

The state League shall follow Article X Section 2 of the 2019 LWVTX Bylaws and the national League guidelines for the adoption of program.

In addition, the following procedures will be used to ensure a systematic review of all current positions:

- A. During state program planning, local Leagues, Leagues at large, issue chairs, or the state board can make recommendations for positions that need to be reviewed, updated, or amended.
- B. During the year following convention, the state board may choose one or more positions for program review. This decision should be based on recommendations from local Leagues and issue chairs and on discussion and interest at the convention. Current and upcoming legislative activity should also be considered. The review may be conducted in the summer and fall following the next legislative session.
- C. The State board selects a Program Review Committee. Efforts should be made to include current and former issue chairs for the position, members of the original study committee, and others with knowledge of the subject. The Program Chair is a member, ex officio.
- D. Program Review Committee reviews the selected position in-depth, conducts research, and interviews experts. Criteria for the review of the positions should include:
 - Have LWVTX goals been achieved with this position?
 - Is the position still relevant?
 - Is the position applicable to current public policy issues or concerns?
 - Have circumstances changed?
 - Are there new laws that impact this position?
 - Is the position clear?
 - Is there still member understanding and agreement concerning this position?
- E. Program Review Committee determines one of the following options with regard to all or any portions of the position:
 - Retain as is (needs board approval)
 - Retain with editorial changes (needs board approval)
 - Formulate new position statement for member concurrence, if there is a change of intent (needs member approval)
 - Recommend a restudy for the following biennium (needs member approval)

- F. Program Review Committee makes recommendations to the state board no later than the winter board meeting before the convention.
- G. The board votes on the committee's recommendations, and if member concurrence or restudy option is approved, it is given to the convention or statewide conference for a vote.

Additional Program Considerations

State Members

State members and Leagues at large are encouraged to participate in state and national studies. The combined results of isolated state members shall be considered as the consensus or concurrence of one local League.

League Cooperation Regarding Studies in the Same Political Subdivision

- A. If a League is considering a study that, if a position is reached, would lead to action before a political entity shared by other local League(s), it must notify those Leagues of the possible study in time to allow them to consider whether or not they wish to participate in the study. Ideally, such studies should be jointly considered and jointly adopted.
- B. When two or more Leagues are in the same political subdivision, reciprocal approval is required before taking action before shared governing bodies.

8. Communications

Who speaks for the League?

LWVUS: Media Contact and Spokesperson Policy

State Board

- The state board president is the official spokesperson for the state League.
- The president may authorize a designated League member.

Local Leagues

- Official statements are made only by a League president, or by a League member authorized by the president.
- Local Leagues should state in their local policies: "The president is the official spokesperson for [name of local League], or a designated League member authorized by the president."

Leagues at large

 Official statements shall be made only by the League at large president or team leader, or by a League member authorized by the president or team leader.

Membership lists

- LWVTX, Local Leagues, and Leagues at large membership lists shall not be made available for non-League use without prior approval of the state or local League board.
- Any published membership lists should include the following statement "Any use of this list for non-League purposes must be approved by the state or local League board."
- We recommend obtaining permission from members prior to including any member names and contact information in a published membership list.

Gender-neutral language

Use whenever possible in League communications.

Editing

Approval of State League Publications and Online Material Publications

League publications or online material for public distribution or for distribution to local Leagues and Leagues at large shall be edited and approved by the following procedure:

- Submit draft documents to the appropriate committee chair.
- The committee chair edits the document and forwards it to the president for approval.
- For all future state League publications, the following shall appear in whichever format is appropriate: "For permission to reprint, contact the LWVTX."

League Websites and Social Media

Use of Logo

LWVUS: Brand Standards https://www.lwv.org/brand-standards

All Leagues shall follow LWVUS brand standards and ensure that the LWV brand is represented correctly, consistently, and professionally whenever it appears in print or online.

- A. Brand the sites with the official League logo and use the full name of the League.
- B. Use a consistent hashtag phrase for official tracking. #lwv

Photography, Video and Audio Recording Policy

LWVUS Release Form (Waiver)

LWVUS Notice of Filming and Photography

Use the waiver/ notice templates when conducting photo and video/audio shoots of your events. It is important to use these forms in order to protect the League's right to photos and audio/videos recorded for organic and promotional use, such as website, social media, print, etc.

Please share your League event photos with us at lwvtexas@lwvtexas.org.

LWVTX also recommends:

- 1. Your own images. You always have ownership of the photos you take. If you are photographing or filming non-League individuals at events or in public, use our photo release forms to get written permission and keep them on file as long as you keep the photographs.
- 2. Images from the LWVUS Flickr site. All of these images are owned by the League of Women Voters and licensed for use by local and state Leagues. The historical images that LWV owns are in a separate historical images album on that Flickr site and Leagues are welcome to use these for League content.
- 3. Free stock photos from legitimate websites that are licensed for public use. Pay special attention to any requirements on these images. Some images require an image credit back to the website and/or photographer. Here is a list of several of these reputable free image sources.

Protecting the League's brand and ensuring our compliance with photography and copyright laws is important. See the League Reprint Policy and information regarding Copyright on printed materials on page 18 of this Manual.

Local League Bylaws

- The first three articles of all local League bylaws must be consistent with those of the League of Women Voters of the United States.
- Any local League bylaws that relate to distribution of financial resources upon dissolution must be consistent with LWVTX Bylaws Article IV, Sections 1(c) and 2(b) and Article XII, Section 5.
- Proposed revisions of local League bylaws shall be submitted to the state Governance Committee chair in sufficient time for review and comment before the local League annual meeting.

Oversight of local League bylaws by LWVTX

Proposed changes to local League bylaws.

- Send proposed changes to local League bylaws to the governance committee chair for review and comment in sufficient time for review and comment before the local League annual meeting.
- Proposed changes that have been reviewed by the Governance Committee are then presented to the local League membership in accordance with local League bylaws concerning amendments. The membership may amend, adopt, or reject proposals at the annual meeting. Please note that bylaws take effect immediately, unless otherwise specified.

Review of state bylaws by local League

The local League bylaws committee is charged with reviewing state and national League bylaws in alternating years, and recommending any desired changes. Any changes the local board approves are submitted for consideration to the state or national League board. The committee chair should ensure that this process is completed in time to meet deadlines for submission of proposed amendments. For LWVTX, proposed changes must be submitted at least 120 days prior to the state convention. For LWVUS, proposed changes must be submitted at least three months before the convention.

• A copy of the current local League bylaws must be included in the annual report.

LWVTX Whistleblower Policy

The League of Women Voters of Texas protects its members, directors, officers, and employees who make good faith reports of violations of law to the Governance Committee Chair. The League of Women Voters of Texas will not suspend or terminate the employment of, or take other adverse personnel action against any employee who makes a report.

Reporting Responsibility

This Whistleblower Policy is intended to encourage and enable employees and others to raise serious concerns internally so that the LWVTX can address and correct inappropriate conduct and actions. It is the responsibility of all board members, officers, employees and volunteers to report concerns about violations, or suspected violations, of our governing documents, or of law or regulations that govern the LWVTX operations.

Reporting Procedure

LWVTX has an open-door policy and suggests that employees share their questions, concerns, suggestions or complaints with their supervisor first. If you are not comfortable speaking with your supervisor or you are not satisfied with your supervisor's response, you are encouraged to speak with the Governance Chair. Local League and League at Large Presidents are required to report complaints or concerns about suspected ethical and legal violations in writing to the Governance Chair, who has the responsibility to investigate all reported complaints. Employees with concerns or complaints may also submit their concerns in writing directly to their supervisor or the Governance Chair.

LWVTX Governance Chair

The LWVTX Governance Chair is responsible for ensuring that all complaints about unethical or illegal conduct are investigated and resolved. The Governance Chair will advise the President and/or the Board of Directors of all complaints and their resolution and will report at least annually to the Treasurer/Chair of the Finance Committee/Audit Committee] on compliance activity relating to accounting or alleged financial improprieties.

Accounting and Auditing Matters

The Governance Chair shall immediately notify the Internal Financial Audit Committee of any concerns or complaints regarding corporate accounting practices, internal controls or auditing and work with the committee until the matter is resolved.

Acting in Good Faith

Anyone filing a written complaint concerning a violation or suspected violation must be acting in good faith and have reasonable grounds for believing the information disclosed indicates a violation. Any allegations that prove to be unsubstantiated and which prove to have been made maliciously or knowingly to be false will be viewed as a serious disciplinary offense.

Confidentiality

Violations or suspected violations may be submitted on a confidential basis by the complainant. Reports of violations or suspected violations will be kept confidential to the extent possible, consistent with the need to conduct an adequate investigation.

Handling of Reported Violations

The LWVTX Governance Chair will notify the person who submitted a complaint and acknowledge receipt of the reported violation or suspected violation. All reports will be promptly investigated and appropriate corrective action will be taken if warranted by the investigation.

12. Service to Local Leagues

LWVUS: Guide to LWVUS Service to local Leagues

The Service to Local Leagues Committee of the state board has primary responsibility for providing training to local League leaders in Local Leagues, Leagues at large & also for state members.

13. Organizational Levels

State Members

- League members not residing in the geographic area of a local League may choose to be state members of the Texas League or may join a local League of their choice.
- League members residing in the geographic area of a local League may choose to be state members of the Texas League, rather than joining a local League.

Leagues at large

LWVTX: A Guide for Mentoring Leagues at large (2019) LWVTX: Financial Guidance for Leagues at large (2019)

LWVTX: How to Start a League

LWVTX: League at Large Welcome Packet (2019)

What is a League at Large?

- Leagues at large are new or established Leagues where the League of Women Voters of Texas takes on administrative functions in order to serve the mission of empowering voters and defending democracy in their community.
- The state board authorizes the establishment of a League at large as a unit of the state League.
- The state board adopts from time to time the minimum number of state members required to establish a League at large.
- Leagues at large are provided LWV Texas resources such as mentors, training, membership, LWV Texas bylaws, policies, guidelines and financial management policies.

How to start a League at large

The state board may authorize the establishment of Leagues at large, composed of state members, where feasible. Leagues at large operate within the limitations established by the LWVUS and within guidelines adopted by the state board. (Article IV Section 2a Bylaws)

The state board adopts the minimum number of state members required to establish a League at large.

With the League at large, the League of Women Voters of Texas takes on administrative functions so a new League can get started registering voters, getting out the vote, educating voters, having forums and debates etc. for a community. That means skipping typical start-up steps of establishing bylaws, incorporating, seeking non-profit status, and establishing financial management policies.

- 1. Follow the process found on the Start a League webpage.
- 2. Submit the required forms to the state office
- 3. The LWVTX Service to Local Leagues committee reviews the application and makes a recommendation to the LWVTX board.
- 4. The state board authorizes the establishment of a League at large and if approved an application is filled out for official recognition by LWVUS.

The state board appoints a mentor/advisor to work closely with each League at large.

Minimum requirements of a League at large

- 1. Follow League nonpartisanship policies.
- 2. Support the League mission of empowering voters and defending democracy in their community.
- 3. Promote the League newsletters, social media, voter education events etc.
- 4. Maintain the current minimum paid membership set by the state board unless given exemption by the state board.
- 5. Conduct an annual meeting to adopt a budget and select a leadership team.
- 6. Meet regularly—a minimum of four leadership meetings and four membership meetings annually.
- 7. Attend training for the leadership team at least once every 2 years.
- 8. Supports and never opposes League positions.
- 9. Provide annual report and leadership contact information to the state office by June 30th.

The president and the voter services member of the leadership team shall not actively campaign or work in a campaign on behalf of a local candidate or local ballot issue during the term of office.

The state League shall supply to each League at large, without charge, up to 200 state voters guides or one electronic copy of the state voters guide for each statewide election upon request.

How to achieve full local League status

LWVUS: Request for Local League Recognition

LWVTX: Steps for becoming a local League in Texas (see Guide to Mentoring a League at Large)

League at large shall have approval from the LWVTX Board and have

- 1. Existed for at least 1 year.
- 2. Exhibited membership growth and retention.
- 3. Provided at least one leadership training session.
- 4. Accomplished at least one successful fundraising event.
- 5. Exhibited nonpartisanship.
- 6. Maintained leadership team stability.

How to maintain full League status

Minimum requirements

Local Leagues shall meet the following minimum requirements to remain in good standing:

- 1. Adopt and adhere to local League bylaws.
- 2. Pay the current per member payment (PMP) set by the membership at state convention in a timely manner.
- 3. Conduct an annual meeting to adopt a budget and elect officers.
- 4. Meet regularly as defined by local League bylaws.
- 5. Provide state League training for officers periodically.
- 6. Submit the local League annual report no later than June 30 of each year.

Annual Reports Local League & League at Large

LWVTX: 2021 Annual Report form

- Annual reports must be completed in accordance with the annual report form.
- Each local League shall submit to the state office financial documents no later than one month after the close of the local League's fiscal year. (see Financial Reports below)

Changes to original League name or structure

- A local League is organized either as a municipal League based around a single municipality or as an area League encompassing more than one governmental jurisdiction. Area Leagues may include one or more counties or a large metropolitan area.
- A change in the name or organizational basis of a local League or League at large requires the approval of the state and national Leagues.
- Following approval of the locally recommended change in name or basis of organization by the local membership at an annual meeting, the local League/League at large shall forward the appropriate forms to the state board for its consideration, approval and recommendation to LWVUS.

Withdrawing recognition

(LWVTX Bylaws, Article IV. LOCAL LEAGUES AND LEAGUES A LARGE, sections 1 (c) and 2 (c)

The Services to Local Leagues Committee works with Leagues at large and local Leagues in membership and leadership development and assisting them to remain in good standing. When there is recurring failure to fulfill the minimum requirements per the LWVTX 2019 Bylaws, Article IV. LOCAL LEAGUES AND LEAGUES A LARGE, sections 1 (a -c) and 2 (a & b), the procedure to withdraw recognition will be initiated, as follows:

- A meeting of the members of the local League shall be called by the local League board of directors or League at large leadership team for the purpose of discussing and voting on disbandment.
- The state League Services to Local Leagues Committee chair shall be notified of the intention to call such a meeting. If the local board or leadership team is unwilling to call such a meeting, the state board shall call the meeting and notify the local members. (Contact the chair of the Services to Local Leagues Committee.)
- Members shall be told the purpose of the meeting and that absence from the meeting shall be considered a silent vote to disband unless the member communicates otherwise prior to the meeting.
- Upon a vote by the membership to disband the local League or League at large, the state board shall request the national board to withdraw recognition.
- Remaining local League or League at large funds, securities, and assets shall be handled in accordance with LWVTX Bylaws, Article IV, section 1(c) and 2(b) (relating to distribution of financial resources upon dissolution). (Updated 2019)

14. State Office

Environment

In order to promote a health-conscious environment and to protect our investment, the office space owned by the state League shall be a smoke-free environment. The workplace shall be free of illegal drugs and firearms.

Record and Document Retention & Archiving

LWVUS: Record keeping

LWVTX has removed its Record and Document Retention & Archiving from this document in order to create a separate and detailed Records Management Plan.

LWVTX board members should email drafts of important documents to the state office or save them in an LWVTX shared drive.

To preserve the long history of the state League, its historical records are located in the Texas Tech University Southwest Collection/Special Collections Library, Lubbock, Texas 79409; www.swco.ttu.edu.

Local Leagues

Local Leagues should adopt a retention and archiving schedule of records and documents as applicable. Local Leagues will make arrangements for archiving records in a location that is readily accessible in their local community.

Local League Support of the State League

The state League receives a portion of its income from local Leagues through a per member payment (PMP) approved by convention delegates. Local Leagues' support payments may be paid in full at any time during the fiscal year ending May 31 or during the fiscal year on the following schedule:

- First payment due in the state office by July 31. At least one-fourth of total PMP shall be paid by this date.
- Second payment due in the state office by October 31. At least one-half of total PMP shall be paid by this date.
- Third payment due in the state office by January 31. Three-fourths shall be paid by this date.
- Fourth payment due in the state office by March 31. Full amount shall be paid by this date.

State services may be discontinued to a local League that fails to settle in full its PMP account by the end of the state League's fiscal year (May 31). The decision to suspend services shall be made by the state board on a case-by-case basis.

Only delegates from local Leagues that are current in their PMP payments will be allowed to vote at convention or the statewide conference.

Each local League shall submit to the state office the following financial documents no later than no later than one month after the close of the local League's fiscal year.

- Budget. Annual budget approved by members at the annual meeting.
- Financial report. Fiscal year-end financial report. (Local League financial information is included in LWVTX annual report to IRS.)
- IRS Form 990, 990 EZ, or 990 N. Return of Organization Exempt From Income Tax. (Photocopy or other evidence of filing)

Student Members Dues

Student members are defined as individuals enrolled either full or part-time with an accredited institution. PMP is not assessed for student members. Local Leagues determine the amount of dues (if any) for student members.

State Members Dues

The state board sets the state member dues.

Budget

- The state board and those appointed to off-board positions should monitor their expenditures to make sure that they do not exceed their budget.
- Committee chairs, and others with budget responsibilities, will be consulted about their budget priorities prior to the biennial Budget Committee meeting.

Reserves

- Sufficient funds should be placed in reserve to meet state League operating expenses for a 3 to 6 month period.
- The state board should approve a dollar figure for these reserve funds at the beginning of each fiscal year, and that amount should be kept in interest-bearing and/or fixed-income account(s).
- If funds are withdrawn in case of emergency, they shall be restored as soon as possible.

Contracts

- Contracts for services rendered by state board members or other representatives of the state League on behalf of the League shall be in the name of the LWVTX, not the individual.
- Usually, the executive director, the treasurer or the president of the state League is the authorized signatory on all contracts, letters of agreement, and other official documents.
- Contracts that have been signed with individuals for professional services shall be listed in the consent agenda for the next board meeting in order to preserve an official record of said hiring.

16. Personnel Policies

LWVTX: Personnel Policies and Procedures: A Manual for League Employees

Executive Director

- The board of directors, acting upon the recommendation of the Fiscal Management and Administration Committee, has the responsibility to hire and release the executive director.
- Regular and contract employees may be given a membership in the state League (state member) if recommended by the Fiscal Management and Administration Committee chair based on if membership will assist the employee in performing the job duties.

Student Interns

- Unpaid student interns participate in work activities that serve only their own educational interests and do not regularly perform the routine work of the organization on a recurring basis.
- Unpaid internships must comply with "The Test for Unpaid Interns" of the FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT found at https://www.dol.gov/whd/regs/compliance/whdfs71.htm

Student Volunteers

 A League student volunteer is a student member of the state League participating in an internship that does not meet all of the criteria for an unpaid internship. In lieu of compensation, the state or local League shall pay the annual student membership fee for the intern as long as the student continues as a volunteer.

17. Fiscal Management

Banks and Financial Institutions

- All funds of the state League shall be deposited to the credit of the state League in banks and financial institutions recommended by the Fiscal Management and Administration Committee for approval by the board.
- The president and/or treasurer of the state League are the authorized signatories on the accounts of the state League. The president and treasurer may authorize additional signatories for special accounts.

Bonded

- The president, treasurer, and executive director of the state League shall be bonded.
- If new accounts are needed or accounts are to be moved, the institution(s) shall be recommended by the Fiscal Management and Administration Committee for approval by the board. Authorized signers shall be the president, treasurer, and any others whom they may jointly designate.

Treasurer's Reports

At each state board meeting, the state League treasurer shall provide state board members with financial reports, including at least once each fiscal quarter:

- An Income Statement for the most recent fiscal quarter
- A Balance Sheet for the most recent fiscal guarter
- Any revision of the budget that must be approved by the state board.

Purchasing and Contracting

• When practical, two or more cost estimates shall be obtained when an expenditure of more than $500 is anticipated.

Investment Policy

All funds, restricted or unrestricted, are held by the board of directors as fiduciaries (stewards) for carrying out the mission of the League. The following investment, objectives, and directions are to be judged and understood in light of the overall sense of stewardship.

Delegation

- The state board has delegated supervisory authority over its financial affairs to the Management Committee.
- The Management Committee is responsible for regularly reporting on investments to the full board.
- In carrying out its responsibilities, the Management Committee and its agents shall act in accordance with this Investment Policy and all applicable laws and regulations.
- The directors reserve to themselves the exclusive right to revise the policy and/or to grant exceptions to the policy where appropriate.

Objectives

- The primary investment objective is to preserve and protect League assets by earning a total return for each fund appropriate to each fund's time horizon, liquidity needs, and risk tolerance.
- The secondary objective is to appreciate the total value of the portfolio over time, exclusive of growth derived from investments.

Asset mix

- A. Asset mix is the primary determinant of the League's portfolio performance.
- B. Asset mix may be changed from time to time based on the economic and security market outlook as well as income requirements.
- C. The overall risk level of assets, in terms of potential for price fluctuations, should not be extreme.

The primary means for achieving such risk profiles are:

- Balanced diversification between equity and fixed income investments
- Careful control of the risk level within each asset class through avoidance of overconcentration and by not taking extreme positions against the market averages
- Emphasis on stable growth rather than capital gains
- D. Recommended asset mix:

Recommended Asset Mix Among Common/Convertible Equities, Fixed-Income U.S. & Corporate Bonds, & Short-Term Cash & No More Than 1-Year Notes

	Common/Convertible Equities	Fixed-Income U.S. & Corporate Bonds	Short-Term Cash & No More Than 1-Year Notes
Short-term reserves	0%	0-50%	50-100%
Long-term reserves	50-90%	10-50%	0-15%
Endowment	50-80%	15-50%	5-20%

Endowment

Endowment is defined as the principal of gifts and bequests accepted with donor stipulations that:

- 1. the principal is to be maintained intact in perpetuity, for a specified period or until a specified event occurs, and
- 2. only the income on the fund's investments may be expended for general purposes specified by the donor (Income is defined as the increase in the market value of the endowment over the principal of the endowed gift or bequest.)
- 3. LWVTX does not currently hold any endowment funds.

Investment limits

The Fiscal Management & Administration Committee is responsible for managing investments within the parameters described in this section and as approved by the board.

Investment restrictions

A. The portfolio must be invested at all times in strict compliance with applicable laws and regulations, and all investment decisions shall be made in accordance with the

- prudent person rule.
- B. All investment must be U.S. dollar denominated.
- C. Commercial paper must be rated in the two highest quality classes by Moody's Investor's Service, Inc. (P1 or P2) or Standard and Poor's Corporation (A1 or A2).
- D. Negotiable certificates of deposit shall be limited in principal amount to FDIC or FSLIC insurance ceilings.
- E. Not more than 5% of the voting securities of a corporation may be owned.
- F. No securities may be purchased on margin or leverage.
- G. No short sale transactions shall be made.
- H. Transactions in financial futures and options are prohibited.
- I. No more than 25% of the portfolio shall be invested in any one industry at cost.
- J. No more than 5% of the portfolio shall be invested in securities (including debt and equities) of one corporation at cost.
- K. Securities that are traded only in foreign markets shall not be included in the portfolio.
- L. Only securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, or the NASDAQ Over-the-Counter market shall be included in the portfolio.
- M. All equity investments will satisfy minimum quality rating of B by Standard and Poor's or a 3 safety rating by Value Line.
- N. No funds ranked below average by Morningstar may be considered.
- O. Investment in structured notes is prohibited.

Investment criteria based on mission or social responsibility

The state League intends to invest in companies whose business conduct is consistent with League goals and beliefs. Therefore, the Management Committee will use its best efforts to avoid investing directly in the securities of any company known to participate in businesses the board deems to be inconsistent with the goals and beliefs of the League.

Reviews and Reports

Portfolio Review

The Management Committee is responsible for monitoring the performance of portfolios on a quarterly basis.

The Management committee shall review:

- the assets and net cash flow of the portfolios
- Statistics on the investment performance.
- Significant revisions to the expected long-term trade-off between risk and reward on key asset classes, dependent on basic economic/social/political factors.
- shortcomings of the policy that emerge in its practical operation.
- Discuss the current economic outlook and investment plans
- Authorize any redirection of cash flow, transfers of assets, or sales/purchases to ensure such compliance within 12 months.

Annual Portfolio Report

The Management Committee shall provide an annual report to the board including:

- 1. Asset allocation
- 2. Investment performance
- 3. Future investment strategies
- 4. Any other matters of interest to the state board
- 5. A summary of all transactions in the fiscal year
- 6. A report of investment performance for the year of the portfolios

Cash flow requirements

The Management Committee will be responsible for providing adequate liquidity to meet the League's cash flow requirements

Withdrawals from reserves

- Withdrawals from reserves for current operations are limited to a sum equal to 5% of the average of the past 3 years' market value of the assets.
- Within this limit, the Budget Committee shall annually set an amount, if any, to be withdrawn by the Treasurer as needed to meet specific League obligations, and
- At the recommendation of the Management Committee, the board may authorize additional withdrawals from reserves.

Gift Acceptance

LWVTX guidelines for accepting gifts are reviewed every three years and are created to:

- protect the interests of the donor, the League, and program or event named as the beneficiary of a gift
- assist in structuring gifts to the League to provide maximum benefits to the donor and the League.

General guidelines

This policy applies to all gifts made or offered to the League. The League welcomes expressions of interest and financial support regardless of size or form, from any individual, family, business, corporation, foundation, or similar source.

Types of gifts

Commitments to the League and/or payment of same may take the form of one, or a combination, of the following:

- Personal gifts by cash, check, credit card
- Corporate matching gifts
- Corporate or foundation grants
- Multi Year pledges
- Appreciated securities or other readily marketable personal assets (which are sold as soon as possible)
- In-kind goods and services
- Real estate

Real Estate Gifts

A. Before accepting any gift of real estate, the League shall perform a due diligence review of the property, including a title search and a Phase I environmental review.

B. Any expenses associated with the transfer of the property to the League or any due diligence must be borne by the donor.

C. Inspection

- a. The inspection must be made by a licensed environmental consultant, who must certify, within the context of a Phase I Site Assessment, that no contamination exists before the property may be accepted.
- b. The inspection should be performed in general conformance with the scope of ASTM Practice E1 527.
- c. The expense of inspection must be borne by the donor unless an exception is approved by the state board.

D. Criteria for accepting gifts of real estate

Gifts of real estate are acceptable only after all the following nine criteria are met.

- 1. It has been determined that no reasonable possibility exists that the property could be contaminated by toxic waste.
- 2. An appraisal satisfactory to the IRS gift substantiation requirements has been completed, and the League and donor have reached an understanding as to the valuation of the property.
- 3. The effects on and implications for the League of debt, insurance, homeowners' association fees, property taxes, and other carrying costs have been assessed.
- 4. Appropriate steps have been taken to determine if any other liabilities might attach to the property such as leases, contracts, assignments, or servitude.
- 5. All pertinent information regarding the property is supplied by the donor. This would include names of owners and co-owners (and percentage ownership), recent tax statements, address and/or legal description, and description of current use.
- 6. Donor must convey all his/her undivided interest in the real estate, including any mineral interests.
- 7. The League may recover any costs of managing real estate by charging a fee that is determined by the schedule set by the state board.
- 8. The donor must be willing to bear the costs associated with the gift of real estate, such as legal fees, real estate commissions, management fees, and expenses for due diligence, title searches, and appraisals.
- 9. The state board must approve any exception.

Gift Review by counsel

The League will seek the advice of legal counsel in matters relating to acceptance of gifts when appropriate.

Review by counsel shall be sought for the following:

- 1. Transfers of closely held stock
- 2. A gift of residence or farm with a retained life interest
- 3. Documents naming the League as trustee
- 4. Gifts involving contracts
- 5. Transactions with potential conflicts of interest that may invoke IRS sanctions
- 6. Other instances in which advice of counsel is deemed appropriate by the Management Committee.

Gift Restrictions

The League accepts both restricted as well as unrestricted gifts provided that donor restrictions do not significantly diminish the value of the gift and are consistent with the stated mission, purposes and priorities of the League. As a general rule, unrestricted gifts of cash and marketable securities allow the board of directors the greatest flexibility in directing resources toward those programs that can best strengthen the organization and advance its mission. Generally, the League cannot accept gifts that entail significant additional expense for their present or future use, maintenance or administration. Gifts other than cash and marketable securities will be evaluated by considering the following criteria:

- Is the gift consistent with the mission of the League?
- Is the property marketable?
- Are there undue restrictions on the use, display or sale of the property?
- What are the risks and costs associated with accepting the gift?
- Do any restrictions on the gift outweigh the potential benefits to the League?

Gift Appraisal

If the value of the gifts other than cash or marketable securities exceeds $5,000, the donor must have a qualified appraisal performed and submitted to the IRS. Gifts valued at $5,000 or less may be reported at the value declared by the donor or qualified expert. The League will comply with all current IRS regulations regarding charitable contributions.

Gift recognition

- 1. The League will acknowledge and recognize all gifts appropriately and promptly.
- 2. The League acknowledgement will inform the donor of any benefits provided in exchange for the contribution. Goods and services provided will be considered insubstantial as long as the fair market value of the benefits does not exceed the IRS regulations regarding charitable contributions.
- 3. The gift record of a donor whose gift is matched by the donor's company will be credited for the total amount of the individual gift plus the corporate matching gift.
- 4. Upon request, the League will provide gift receipts meeting IRS substantiation requirements for property received by the League as a gift. However, except for gifts of cash or publicly traded securities, no value shall be ascribed to any receipt or other substantiation of a gift received by the League.

Gift Confidentiality

- 1. Gifts may be acknowledged in League publications unless the donor requests anonymity.
- 2. However, all information concerning prospective and current donors, including names and addresses, names of beneficiaries, nature and value of estates or other assets, and planned gift provisions shall be kept strictly confidential by the League, its volunteers, and its staff.
- 3. With discretion, however, and if the donor or executor grants permission, authorized personnel may use selective information for purposes of referral, testimonial, or example.

Donor responsibilities

The ultimate responsibility for asset evaluations, tax deductibility, and/or similar federal, state, and/or local compliance issues rests with the donor and any advisors that the donor shall secure. The League recommends that all donors consult with their own legal tax counsel when planning all gifts, especially noncash gifts or future planned gifts.

Gift Acceptance Committee

- 1. Members of a gift acceptance committee shall consist of the president, one vice president, treasurer, and anyone else appointed by the state board.
- 2. A gift acceptance committee is charged with the responsibility of reviewing all noncash gifts and restricted gifts made or offered to the League, properly screening, and with the advice of counsel where needed, accepting those gifts that are deemed appropriate. The gift acceptance committee will make recommendations to the state board on gift acceptance issues as required. The state board must approve any gifts that carry potential legal or financial liabilities for the League.
- 3. The president or the president's designee shall have authority to sign planned giving agreements on behalf of the League. Any agreement that does not meet the conditions of this policy shall require the approval of the state board. The state board reserves the right to accept (or in cases where necessary, to decline) any commitment or gift that is offered to the League.

Reimbursement

Vouchers

- Those eligible to seek reimbursement shall submit vouchers and supporting documentation to the League treasurer to receive reimbursement and should submit similar information to document expenses for which they are not requesting reimbursement.
- When those eligible choose not to be reimbursed, they may document their actual expenses without regard to the limits established for reimbursement as long as the expenses are reasonable and customary.

Complimentary Tickets

- No reimbursement or complimentary tickets are provided for board members or their guests.
- All board members attending League special or fund development events shall purchase tickets that are not included in registration no matter when/where the event is held.

Reimbursement rates

State board members, those elected or appointed to off-board positions, and staff may request full or partial reimbursement from general operating funds for actual expenses incurred in the performance of their League duties, within the constraints imposed by the budget at the following rates:

- 1. Telephone, postage, photocopying, and essential supplies at actual cost
- 2. Travel
 - A. Travel by public transportation at actual cost including tips.
 - B. The least expensive means of transportation that is feasible shall be used.
 - C. In January of every year, the treasurer shall update the vouchers provided for staff and member use with the current IRS mileage reimbursement rate for League travel.
 - D. Board member travel may be reimbursed or make an in-kind donation at the rate per mile driven in service of charitable organizations.
 - E. Staff travel may be reimbursed at the rate allowed per mile for business miles driven.

3. Parking, tips, fees

• Parking and necessary tips and fees are reimbursed at actual cost with receipt.

4. Lodging

 Lodging at actual cost, allowing one-half room per person unless the board directs otherwise, or unless a single room is required when traveling alone on League business

5. Meals and incidental expenses

- A. Budgetary constraints do not permit reimbursement of meals and incidental expenses.
- B. Meals and incidental expenses while away from home overnight are tax deductible as in-kind contributions to the League at current IRS/U.S. General Services Administration amounts and guidelines.
- 6. Registration fees for conferences/workshops at actual cost
- 7. Other types of actual expenses if the board permits:

A. Project Budgets Reimbursement

- State board members, those elected or appointed to off-board positions, and staff may request reimbursement from funds at the rates listed in the project's budget.
- Such budgets shall be based on actual costs, and
- Reimbursement requires documented expenses.

PREFACE

Purpose of State Convention

State Convention is the most important meeting of the League of Women Voters of Texas. It requires careful planning and involvement by the state board, the state office, the local League host and other chairmen who might be involved by virtue of a special program or awards ceremony.

Convention emphasizes the grassroots nature of the League by providing an opportunity for local Leagues to determine the future of the organization. It provides an opportunity to promote membership and reach out to students and young adults who are issue-oriented. It is typically a three-day meeting held in April of even-numbered years. The number of delegates from each local League is determined by Article VII, Section 2 of the bylaws of the League of Women Voters of Texas.

Convention delegates consider and adopt a program; elect officers, directors, and a chair plus two members of the nominating committee; adopt bylaws changes, a two-year budget, and per-member-payment (PMP) for the biennium; and transact such business that may be presented. General workshops are part of Convention and a special luncheon or dinner program is usually planned. The state board members usually arrive about noon on the day before the Convention to accomplish several tasks, including final review of convention plans; training of Plenary volunteers; and final review of hotel and convention arrangements.

This manual has been prepared to give guidance to those responsible for seeing that the state Convention is a success. Included is a delineation of the responsibilities of the state board, state office staff, and local host League.

Who's Who in the Convention Planning Process for 2012

SO = State Office of the LWV-Texas

 $SB = State\ Board$

CPC = Convention Planning Committee

LHL = Local Host League

LAC = Local Arrangements Committee

SLL = Services to Local Leagues

D&M = Development and Marketing (specifically involved if luncheon/banquet are "fund raisers")

Convention Planning Responsibilities At a Glance

Specific duties to ensure a successful State Convention have been assigned as follows:

- The SO works closely with the CPC to coordinate Convention and provide continuity from convention to convention.
- The SB is the final arbiter of decisions involving Convention and is also responsible for identifying a host League, keynote speakers, and the Parliamentarian (who has travel and lodging expenses underwritten)
- The CPC, with direction from the State Board, provides general oversight of Convention planning and works directly with those involved in programming components; reports regularly to the Board.
- The LHL, in partnership with LAC, coordinates local arrangements for a special event on Friday evening; identifies at least three local business sponsors for convention breaks; provides adequate number of volunteers for convention; mans registration desk; arranges for a simple meal (at a personal residence or restaurant) for the State Board members on the Thursday evening preceding Convention; and assists CPC as requested.

Fundraising responsibilities are divided between CPC and D&M as follows:

CPC has responsibility for arranging/deciding/recommending to the Board:

Silent auction

Live Auction and auctioneer (with input from D&M)

Registration fee

Luncheon/banquet price(s) for convention attendees

D&M has responsibility for arranging/deciding/recommending to the Board:

Sponsorships for convention, luncheon, and banquet (beyond those needed for convention breaks)

Identifying and ordering LWV merchandise to sell during convention

Fund-a-Need, if utilized at Saturday banquet

Pricing of LWV merchandise to be sold during convention

Work on these begins at least by Fall before Convention if luncheon and/or banquet during convention are to be fundraisers; invitations and sponsorship fees for those outside LWV; fundraising beyond the specific responsibilities of the CPC/LAC (i.e., mail solicitation if honoring one of our own or holding a raffle).

SELECTION OF CONVENTION SITE, DATES, AND FACILITY

Local Leagues interested in hosting Convention should extend an invitation at the prior Convention. The State Board selects and officially confirms the host League at the first state board meeting after Convention. The State Board also determines possible April dates for Convention after consulting with LHL regarding local availability in the designated city. The LHL should be aware of community events in its city during the convention month of April and also national holidays or observances that could impact dates identified for the Convention.

LHL takes the lead in identifying two or three possible hotel sites and works with the CPC to review possible convention sites and recommend a facility that offers appropriate accommodations, meeting spaces, and parking at reasonable costs. The CPC considers the recommendation and then makes a final recommendation to the State Board. The State Board makes the final decision whether or not to accept the recommended facility.

The contract with the Convention hotel should be signed by the Winter Board meeting (approximately 15 months ahead of the Convention date) and involves the Convention chair, SO, and LWV-TX President.

The SO, in cooperation with the CPC, works with the proposed hotel to write a contract that locks in the convention dates selected and specifically identifies rooms/spaces needed for the convention. The contract is signed by the SO executive director and/or the Board president, and any advance payment needed is handled by the SO. The CPC maintains contact with the designated hotel staff throughout the planning process, with assistance by the LHC.

CRITERIA FOR HOSTING A STATE CONVENTION

1. Volunteer strength: Approximately 15-20 members of the Local Host League

2. Facility requirements:

- a. Sleeping rooms-At least 90 to 120 rooms (can sleep 2-4 to a room) at a reasonable price
- b. Large meeting room for plenary meeting > classroom style facing front with tables and chairs for 150-plus; dais facing audience with seating for 8-10 people; extra seating for observers not seated with their LWV delegations.
- c. Four to six small meeting "breakout" rooms for workshops, caucuses, Q&A sessions, etc., with each room seating approximately 30-50 people.
- d. Ballroom(s) (separate from plenary meeting room)-seating at round tables for 90-180 for luncheon or banquet
- e. Room for silent auction display and recordkeeping table
- f. Meeting room for state board meeting, seating from 15-20 (U-shape or conference style)
- g. Registration space in a lobby area, with tables

3. Required Services (must be readily available to convention planners)

- a. Copier and other business services
- b. Restaurants in hotel and within walking distance
- c. Public, taxi, or locally arranged transportation to airport and local attractions
- d. AV vendor with equipment for Plenary and workshop rooms
- e. Wireless internet connection in hotel lobby, all meeting rooms, and in sleeping rooms

4. Accessibility

- a. Convention site should be served by an airport with major airlines
- b. Facility/rooms must be special needs-accessible

5. Affordability

- a. Hotel room rates should be negotiated to make prices affordable to all delegates. Hotel contract should allow for maximum number of rooms anticipated, with two or more beds as possible per room
- b. Minimal/no charge for meeting rooms
- c. Affordable registration fee/special event fee assessed by state board

6. Community Support

- a. Legitimate "potential" by Local Host League to help secure underwriting for coffee breaks and an evening social function if needed, etc.
- b. Local Convention and Visitors Bureau may donate "goodie" bags for delegates

As always, Board members and chairs are assigned two per sleeping room and have lodging provided for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. At the direction of the state president, other complimentary rooms may be provided for invited guests (i.e., keynote speaker, LWVUS guests).

Details about State Board Registration, Other Expenses

Members of the State Board receive complimentary registration for convention but do pay the designated costs for any special ticketed meals and/special events which they plan to attend. Board members remit that payment directly to the State Office when they register for convention.

TIMETABLE

In Advance:

2 Years ahead of Convention date:

At previous Convention, SB encourages local Leagues to consider hosting Convention, giving possible dates, accommodations needed, and guidelines.

LWV Texas president appoints CPC. The chair, in consultation with the SB, is responsible for the Convention program and will advise/work closely with the host League.

The LHL is named and asked to appoint its LAC. The CPC confers with the SO and the previous Convention chair regarding arrangements, planning, and recommendations.

CPC and LHL visit possible Convention facilities and recommend one or more sites to the SB. CPC assesses the proposed sites to assure adequate space and availability.

1 1/2-2 Years

With input from LHL, CPC recommends to SB a Convention site and dates available; the Board approves the site and dates.

CPC confirms the hotel arrangements, including the room rate, and finalizes a contract with the hotel. The hotel sends the contract and pertinent correspondence to the SO for appropriate approval signature(s).

12-16 Months (July-October Before Convention)

Outside speakers—The State Board discusses whom to ask as outside speakers and when speakers should be scheduled. The state president invites key speakers and the parliamentarian and the CPC is responsible for seeing that invitations are sent to other speakers (with the exception of local government officials, who are invited by the LHL). The State Board may solicit names of potential speakers from the LHL.

CPC, through the SO, sends a copy of the immediate past Convention manual (with suggested changes), past Convention evaluations, suggestions from the LHL and any other instructions to the newly named chair.

At its Summer Board meeting, the SB discusses possible Convention fundraising opportunities and directs D&M for follow-through. The Board decides whether or not merchandise should be made available at Convention and whether or not a Silent and/or Live Auction will be staged. LHL may begin soliciting local items of interest for the auction, working closely with the designated Auction chair.

July-October

CPC selects a theme and logo with input from LHL and others. See Page 13 for information on Theme and Logo.

D&M, with assistance from SO and the Board, identifies sponsors/donors to defray Convention-related expenses. CPC and LHL begin identifying possible sponsors for coffee breaks and luncheon/banquet events. LHL can provide leads from its local business community that might be corporate funders.

Auction Chair notifies Leagues and League members about Silent Auction and requests items for the auction.

The LHL appoints and convenes LAC to handle local arrangements as defined by the State Board and may use its discretion in assigning responsibilities. It is recommended that the following functions be assigned chairs and committees:

Local Arrangements Committee Chairs

- Special events (Thursday board dinner, Friday night event for Convention delegates)
- Volunteers/personnel needed for Convention registration, designated events/tasks
- Public relations/publicity
- Fundraising/underwriting of morning/ afternoon breaks during Convention

The LHL will send a list of the LAC names, addresses, fax numbers, phone numbers, and e-mail addresses to the CPC and SO to facilitate communications.

CPC begins work on the budget and registration fee to be approved at the Fall State Board meeting before Convention. The budget should include all Convention expense and income figures from previous convention, including anticipated costs for outside speakers and for off-board attendees/special guests.

Prior To/At the Fall LWV-TX Board Meeting before Convention

CPC, in cooperation with State Board and D&M, makes decisions about Convention agenda, special events/banquet/luncheon, meeting and workshop timelines; works with the Treasurer to prepare and approve a proposed budget.

CPC requests a preliminary report from the LAC regarding arrangements for the board dinner on the Thursday evening before Convention begins. LAC may be invited to attend the Fall meeting to provide update.

LHL extends invitation to Mayor or other elected official to bring greetings at the opening Saturday morning Plenary and confirms date. This is very important and should be done by the host League at least six months before the event, with update to the CPC.

CPC visits the host hotel to finalize room assignments and assess the layout for Plenary, registration/information desk, luncheon and banquet, Auction room, and workshop spaces.

CPC obtains menus and meal prices for approval by Board and determines banquet charges for those not registered at the hotel. These charges must be approved before Convention registration forms are printed.

CPC and State Board establish guidelines for meal guarantees, refunds and designated deadlines, prepayment for all meals, etc. Information will be clearly communicated to Local Leagues and League members in early December and in other communications.

LWV-TX Vice Presidents begin to plan workshops and invite workshop speakers. Equipment, meal, nametags, and other needs for speakers are communicated to the State Board and CPC.

CPC and SO begin to design Convention registration forms to be included in mailings to local Leagues and League members as well as in the Voter and on the website. Auction chair sends request for items to all Leagues and previous donors.

At the Fall Board Meeting, LHL brings report to State Board about special Friday night event, recruitment of volunteers, and possible convention break sponsors.

December before Convention

CPC, in cooperation with State Board and SO, meets the early December deadline (120 days ahead of convention) of "First Call" to Convention mailing to Local Leagues--basic information, tentative agenda, hotel reservation, registration fee, room cost, special events.

CPC and State Board President, in consultation with SO, plan and coordinate preparation and distribution of the following materials for the Call to Convention notification (electronic email, website, and physical mailing) to Local Leagues and League members:

- 1. call to Convention
- 2. registration forms for delegates/visitors/observers
- 3. hotel reservation information
- 4. descriptions of special events and workshops
- 5. promotional information on host city; appropriate maps and travel instructions from major highways
- 6. Invitation flyer from LHL to Friday night event, with registration form and instructions for payment
- 6. local League publication sales/exhibit space
- 7. Silent Auction/Live Auction

Prior To/At the Winter LWV-TX Board Meeting

State Board approves the Convention budget at the Winter board meeting, if not already done at Fall Board Meeting.

LAC representatives attend the Winter Board meeting to report on the status of Convention and to receive information from CPC on specific volunteer responsibilities.

The Policy/Bylaws/Rules Committee recommends and the Board approves the Standing Rules for Convention.

SLL and Board President identify materials to be included in the Delegate Packet for distribution at Convention.

D&M decides on merchandise to order for sale at convention and recommends to the State Board.

SLL works with LHL and CPC to determine what maps and instructions to Local Leagues should be prepared for Convention publicity and Delegate Packet.

State Board, CPC, and SO prepare materials for the Convention Delegate Workbook distributed at registration table.

Convention Delegate Workbook:

- a. Agenda > President
- b. proposed Convention rules→Bylaws, Polices & Procedure Chair
- c. tips on parliamentary procedure *
- d. tips to delegates *
- e. proposed slate of officers and director > Nominating Committee does the one for his/her committee; also Website chair provides report for workbook

- m. directions to the hotel/hotel information \rightarrow CPC
- n. LRP report →LRP committee chair

Board President confirms Convention attendance with Board members.

Late January/Early February Before Convention

LHL confirms name of Mayor or other local elected official who will welcome delegates on the Saturday morning of Convention and notifies CPC for inclusion of name in the Delegate Workbook and Plenary order of business.

Delegate Workbook information is due to State President from committee chairs, LHL, and CPC; compilation and editing begins and production and printing timeline is established (usually early March)

CPC, Board, and SO confirm information on all aspects of Convention business, including final call materials, delegate count, and mailing to Local Leagues and League members.

SO orders merchandise to be sold at convention, as recommended by D&M.

Mid-February/Early March Before Convention

Auction Chair initiates preparation of materials for the silent auction including bidding forms, master record, room decorations, etc; continues to solicit items not only from Board members but Local Leagues.

SO finalizes merchandise to be sold, pricing, money boxes, and petty cash needed for Convention.

Board and CPC confirm early March deadline ("Final Call" to Local Leagues is 42 days before convention) to prepare Convention mailing and gather appropriate materials for the Texas VOTER and the website.

Silent auction chair prepares materials describing auction items for inclusion in all publicity sent to Leagues and League members.

LHL prepares and gives to CPC the final Friday night event notice for inclusion in the Convention mailing and for placement on the website.

CPC and State Board make final plans for training of volunteers and remind LAC to notify volunteers.

CPC gathers materials for Convention Delegate Packet including the following:

From SO, items for the Convention Delegate Packet (items in folder) final agenda list of delegates list of Who's Who at Convention Convention/workshop sevaluation form auction catalog and final call for items

^{*} Carried over from previous convention workbooks list of volunteers & cell phone contact info information regarding local attractions map of city and travel instructions

From LHL

Friday evening event information, regarding travel plans, attire, etc.

March

SO establishes electronic system for recording registrations, meal reservations, and special event/workshop reservations. An Excel or Access database has been used in the past.

"Final call" to Convention is directed to Leagues and League members, with information on hotel reservation, registration, etc. SO monitors website registration.

SLL contacts local Leagues not registered for Convention to invite them to attend if preliminary registration shows no response.

CPC and SO confirm special equipment needed for all workshop sessions and CPC confirms equipment needs with hotel or that LAC can help secure.

CPC keeps track of meals and other materials needed by workshop speakers and shares information with SO.

The host hotel prepares detailed Banquet Event Orders (BEOs) for each event at Convention, specifying meeting rooms, equipment needs, catering needs, seating, etc. The BEOs are reviewed carefully by CPC with the hotel management, and during convention, the convention chair reviews BEOs as they are presented by hotel staff.

LAC and CPC confirm final volunteer requirements.

PR Vice President contacts the LAC PR volunteer regarding local publicity for the Convention.

SO and CPC coordinate plans to see that all supplies are available or on order, including pocket folders, numbered three-part motion forms, name badges that will distinguish delegates from observers, ribbons to identify various League leaders, meal lists, signs identifying each local League and state board member, etc. (See generic list of supplies at end of this convention manual.)

Late March/Early April before Convention

PR Vice President writes news release about convention and works with SO to distribute news release to all state and local media as well as to Local Leagues.

State Board President recruits members to be appointed to the committee to review the Convention minutes, the Credentials Committee, the Action Motions Committee, the Resolutions Committee, and the committee to oversee an election, if one is held.

State Board President decides seating arrangements for the Plenary dais and head tables (if needed) at special events and makes sure that the information is conveyed to the CPC and LAC.

CPC begins preparation of a scripted agenda for convention and confirms all details with State President.

SLL and State President finalize materials to be included in the Delegate Packet, and SO prepares the materials.

State President prepares Pre-Board for Board meeting that precedes Convention and the Plenary order of business.

In consultation with State President and LHL, CPC determines timeline, quantity, and who will assemble Delegate Packets prior to start of Convention; completed Delegate Packets must be ready at the host hotel by late afternoon Thursday before Convention starts.

CPC confirms all materials are ready and available for the Convention Delegate Workbook and packet.

2 Weeks prior to Convention

CPC works with SO to prepare Reminder email to League members with all pertinent information.

SO will send CPC all forms and instructions for Plenary session volunteers prior to training session.

CPC confirms volunteer training and trainers and sends reminder to LAC and State Board members.

State Vice Presidents confirm speakers and workshop presenters and report to CPC.

1 week Prior to Convention

As per stated deadlines, CPC and SO notify the hotel regarding final meal counts for luncheon and/or banquet events; number of Convention attendees; and confirms needed equipment/final setup with hotel.

CPC finalizes plan for Delegate Packet/Workbook assembly and confirms details for training session for LAC volunteers.

Convention delegate workbook is emailed by SO to all registrants and other guests, as needed.

April CONVENTION

State Board members and SO arrive on Thursday and meet in Board meeting to review final convention details with hotel staff, LAC, and LHL.

CPC coordinates training session for volunteers working registration, Floor Committee, etc.

The SO and CPC set up the Plenary room with League signage; make sure merchandise, Auction items, registration desk, and other designated spaces are set up and ready.

The State President gives specific assignments to board members to greet Convention speakers and outside workshop leaders, etc.

As the Convention gets underway, CPC and LAC volunteers are visible and available to answer questions.

After Convention:

SO and Board dismantle the Plenary room, Convention office, Auction Room, etc. and pack up any remaining materials to be returned to the state office.

SO returns all funds to the state office for deposit.

CPC, Board president, and LAC determine how thank you letters will be prepared for Convention speakers, workshop leaders, guests, donors, the host League, and volunteers.

The state PR Vice President provides a sample news release to Local Leagues announcing new state board members and convention highlights with space for the list of local delegates to all local Leagues included.

CPC, with help from SLL, compiles the delegate evaluation forms and requests evaluations and recommendations from the local Convention chair and committee.

LAC and LHL prepare a detailed written evaluation of Convention, with regard to lessons learned, suggestions for next Convention, changes needed, etc., and send the evaluation to the State Board president, who shares it with CPC.

CPC reviews delegate evaluations and recommendations, adds its own recommendations, and submits a final report to the SO for distribution to the state board and LAC.

CPC furnishes a notebook with all Convention materials, Delegate Workbook, Convention Manual, and other items to the State President to share with the newly named Convention Chair for next Convention

THEME AND LOGO

CPC will consult with LHL on the theme and logo of the convention and will jointly make a decision prior to the LWV-Texas Fall Board Meeting. The theme and logo will be used in promotional materials and on the cover of the Delegate Workbook. Examples of past themes include Making Democracy Work, Taking Texas Leagues to New Horizons, Exercising Your Rights, and It's Your Government...Take Charge!

PARLIAMENTARIAN

Prior to the Fall Board Meeting before Convention, CPC works with SB to identify and confirm an individual to serve as Parliamentarian during Plenary sessions at the convention. LWV-Texas can pay travel, provide lodging if needed, and/or pay a daily stipend of $100 for two days, or can approve a contract.

For 2012, the Parliamentarian was Mrs. Ella Clerkson, San Antonio, TX, who prepared a contract for LWV-Texas.

A. FRIDAY EVENING SPECIAL EVENT

Traditionally, LHL sponsors an off-site special event as a fundraiser for its League on the Friday evening of Convention. Past events have included dinners, shows, and sightseeing trips to local museums or historic spots such as the Fort Worth Stockyards. The Friday event is an opportunity for the host League to showcase its hometown. LHL is responsible for arranging the special event, providing written information to CPC on registration fees, etc., and for letting delegates know about other sightseeing opportunities in the vicinity of the Convention site.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STATE OFFICE

1. SO will distribute the Friday evening event information prior to convention to all Leagues and League members, utilizing the flyer/promotional information provided by LHL, and will include the information in convention materials distributed at registration.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

- 1. In the summer and fall before Convention, LHL/LAC should make the CPC aware of special events and sites that might be of particular interest to delegates. LAC will research possibilities and obtain cost estimates, then recommend specific events/activities in writing to CPC, which will then make a recommendation to the State Board. The State Board will make the final decision as to the events/activities to be offered.
- 2. LAC will plan the Friday night event, reserve the site(s), arrange transportation, select a caterer or determine meal plans, arrange for supplies or event materials as needed, and arrange for local volunteer assistance as needed. All contracts and vendor payments will be handled by the local League, and all registration proceeds will benefit the local host league.
- 3. LAC will prepare events/activities information for the LWV-TX and The VOTER. An enthusiastic description, as well as registration fee and transportation information, should be included.
- 4. LAC may wish to contact the local visitors bureau/chamber of commerce for tourist information to include in pre-Convention information and in the Delegate packet. Information about other restaurants in the area, walking tour information, or additional tourist brochures can also be included in the packet.

B. TRANSPORTATION -

- 1. CPC will work with LAC as needed to provide accurate maps and directions to the hotel from local airports and major highways, plus airport and hotel shuttle service information. This information should be included in pre-convention and registration information.
- 2. LAC is responsible for securing commercial transportation and/or determining alternate transportation plans for the Friday night event (which may include use of personal vehicles). Specific transportation costs can be included in the cost assessed each participating delegate by the local League.

C. REGISTRATION

SO and CPC are responsible for handling pre-registration of convention attendees. LAC and registration volunteers are responsible for registration at Convention and for cooperating with the Credentials Committee to furnish needed information about delegate count, etc. LAC should designate a registration chair to oversee registration volunteers.

SO will receive pre-registrations directly and will establish a system to track incoming registrations. SO will keep running totals of registrations for each event and coordinate with CPC to ensure adequate meeting facilities for each event. SO will prepare a list of delegates and registrants as registrations are received and will prepare a final listing of names, contact information, and name of local League for inclusion in the Delegate packet.

Name tags must be prepared based on advance registrations. The name tag should include each person's name, local League, and office. A number of extra name tags should be kept at the registration table for late registrants and correction of misspelled names. A colored name tag, sticker, or border must be used to distinguish delegates from nondelegates. A system of colored dots or stickers can be placed on the name tags to identify which events have been paid for by each attendee (otherwise tickets must be prepared and collected for each event).

LAC will be responsible for staffing the registration table throughout Convention as per the hours noted on the final agenda. More volunteers should be scheduled for Friday and Saturday morning shifts in anticipation of the arrival of the majority of registrants. At registration, each delegate should be given a packet and name tag.

CPC is responsible for providing a list of all guests and speakers to the registration committee and to the SO so that they are included in the registration database as per meals, etc.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STATE OFFICE AND CPC

- 1. CPC and SO will work with the hotel staff to determine which area of the hotel will be used for the registration information desk.
- 2. SO will bring the following materials for the registration/information desk: a large sign for the registration information desk; signs for registration by alphabetic division (if needed); extra copies of the Convention Workbook; a cash box and petty cash; miscellaneous supplies; name tag ribbons to designate state board members, local League presidents; and Delegate packets.
- 3. CPC will be responsible for meeting with the local League volunteers to set up the registration/information desk the first morning of the Convention and for briefing the registration volunteers regarding procedures.
- 4. SO will take possession of the cash box each night, will return the cash box the following morning, and will assume responsibility for bringing receipts to the SO for deposit.
- 5. Throughout Convention, SO and CPC will be available to deal with questions and problems. A method for the registration/information desk to contact SO and CPC representatives quickly at the hotel will be devised in advance of the Convention.
- 6. League requests for caucuses must be made one month prior to the Convention. Caucuses will be given space on a first-come, first-serve basis in meeting areas approved by the hotel.

7. The delegate list prepared by the SO will list delegates alphabetically by local League. Delegates from MALs, members of the state board, visitors, guests, and observers will all be listed separately. To facilitate registration, delegates will register by section of the alphabet by either the delegates' last name and League name.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

- 1. Delegates and visitors will register at the registration desk as they arrive. In order to vote, a delegate must be registered.
- 3. The plastic name badges for delegates, visitors, observers, state board members, and volunteers will be color-coded, and some may have special ribbons attached. All badges will be picked up upon registration. Extra badges, to be used if needed, will also be provided by the SO.
- 4. Throughout the Convention, the registration/information desk volunteers serve as a continuing resource for Convention delegates with questions concerning workshops, transportation, locations of meeting room, agenda issues, and services, etc. Lost and found items are kept at the registration/information desk until claimed. After most attendees arrive, registration may be moved to the Convention office.
- 5. The hotel will be asked to promote Convention information on available electronic message boards/TV screens. At the beginning of the Convention, a list of events and hours for the registration/information desk, hospitality room, Convention office, and publications room may be displayed. Notices regarding locations and times for caucus meetings, workshops and special events will also be publicized through available venues. An easel near the registration area may be available for personal messages. The registration committee will clear the easel as needed.
- 6. All money collected at the registration/information desk must be recorded on the official registration database list. Each income entry should be recorded as to date of receipt, from whom received, amount of payment, and reason (e.g., registration, banquet). Checks should be made payable to LWV-TX. Refunds for registration or banquet tickets will not be made after the published cancellation date.
- 7. The registration chair shall train and oversee all shifts of volunteers staffing the registration/information desk. A listing of volunteer names should be maintained by the LHL and furnished to LWV Texas so that they can be thanked for their service.
- 8. LAC will recruit local League members to staff the registration/information desk, which will be manned at designated times during the Convention. Registration is scheduled to begin at least one hour before the Friday workshops begin and continue through 7 p.m.; registration will continue on Saturday. Hours will vary depending on the Convention agenda. Two volunteers are usually needed for each time slot on Friday, and two volunteers are needed for each time slot on Saturday. One volunteer is needed on Sunday morning prior to the beginning of the Plenary session for any late arrivals. Because most delegates are expected to arrive Friday or Saturday morning, registration may be combined with the Convention office after the majority of delegates have arrived.

D. CREDENTIALS COMMITTEE

The LAC chair and one other member of the registration committee usually serve as the Credentials Committee, which reports the number of registered delegates so that a quorum can be declared. The State President will confirm on the first day of convention the number of local Leagues in the state who are eligible to attend. At least half of the local Leagues in the state must be represented at the Convention in order to declare a quorum. In case of concerns in this regard, the president may ask state board members to represent their local Leagues, if there are no delegates from those Leagues already registered. If someone leaves and is not planning to return to the Convention, the count should not be lowered. If someone new comes to replace an already registered delegate, the count should not be increased.

The State President will formally appoint the Credentials Committee at the beginning of the first plenary session. The Credentials Committee will be asked to make a report (a sample script will be provided) using the nearest floor microphone. The State President will then declare whether a quorum is present. At the beginning of each subsequent plenary session, the Credentials Committee again makes a report, but the declaration of a quorum is only done at the first session. The written report should be given to the LWV-TX secretary, who will be seated at a table at the front.

The Credentials Committee should ask the Registration volunteers for a list of delegates who have checked in.

E. CONVENTION OFFICE

The Convention office provides computer and printing equipment for use by state board members, state League staff, delegates, workshop leaders, and local Convention committee members. The CPC and the SO are responsible for obtaining equipment for the Convention office and for coordinating assistance as needed by League members. For convenience and accessibility, the Convention office should be located in close proximity to the combined Publications/Wares and Auction Room.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STATE OFFICE

- 1. SO will furnish office supplies, such as copy paper, state League letterhead, and standard office supplies, including pens, pencils, spiral notebook, receipt book, a cash box, and petty cash. A list of standard office supplies to be available at Convention is found on the last page of this convention manual.
- 2. The Convention office will be set up the Thursday evening before the first day of Convention and CPC will brief assigned volunteers regarding its use and their responsibilities. One volunteer will be needed in the Convention office throughout the convention, unless otherwise notified.
- 3. SO will take possession of the cash box each night, will return it to the Convention office each morning, and will assume responsibility for taking receipts to the state office for deposit.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

- 1. LAC may be asked by CPC to help make arrangements to rent or borrow equipment for Convention usage and LAC should be aware of alternative sources for equipment should a breakdown occur.
- 2. LAC should assure that the Convention office is staffed by at least one volunteer per designated shift to provide assistance to state board members, state office staff, local Convention committee chairs, and delegates who need assistance in preparing for workshops, caucuses, program adoption, speeches, etc. The office volunteer may also be called upon to assist local Leagues in setting up sales areas or exhibits in spaces that they have reserved ahead of time. However, local Leagues are responsible for staffing their own sales areas.
- 3. LAC is responsible for making sure Convention office volunteers are recruited.

F. PUBLICATIONS AND WARES

State League publications and products are available in the Auction Room for delegates to purchase during Convention (hours to be announced in advance). Local League publication sales and exhibits are also located in the Auction Room, but local Leagues are responsible for staffing their own sales areas and for providing their own petty cash and receipt procedures. The State Office should be notified at least three weeks before Convention by local Leagues if they need space in the publications and wares room to sell their merchandise. Local Leagues will be notified through appropriate information channels in advance that they may offer publications or merchandise for sale. A space reservation form will be provided and should be returned as documentation from the League that they will utilize space in the publications/wares area.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

1. LAC will furnish one volunteer during each of the shifts identified during Convention to man the LWV-Texas publications and wares table in the Auction Room. Volunteers will familiarize themselves with the merchandise for sale and will be encouraged to promote sales to delegates entering the room.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STATE OFFICE/CPC/AUCTION CHAIR

- 1. CPC, in cooperation with the hotel staff, will identify the room to be used for silent auction and publications/ wares sales activities. To promote delegate traffic through the publications and silent auction room, it should be located as close to the plenary session room and registration area as possible. A secure room is needed, as materials will be kept there overnight.
- 2. CPC and Auction Chair will make arrangements for the Auction and Publications/Wares spaces, including appropriate number of tables, table cloths and skirts, and chairs, plus security.
- 3. CPC is responsible for pre-Convention publicity regarding League publications and merchandise for sale and will seek information in advance from local Leagues regarding merchandise they wish to sell.
- 4. SO will take possession of the cash box each night, will return it to the publications/wares/Auction Room each morning, and will assume responsibility for taking receipts to the state office for deposit.

G VOLUNTEERS/PERSONNEL

The convention is staffed primarily by volunteers recruited by the LHL, in consultation with CPC and the chairs of the various Convention committees. The volunteers should be able to complete the duties listed in this manual in addition to duties that may arise unexpectedly.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE CPC

1. CPC will be available to assist volunteers with any problems that arise.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

1. LAC recruits and assigns a volunteer chair to recruit, schedule, and help train volunteers, working closely with CPC.

- 2. The volunteer chair should prepare sign up notices and forms for the local League Voter. Sign-up sheets should also be provided at each general or unit meeting in the months leading up to Convention.
- 3. The volunteer chair and/or LAC should plan to attend local League meetings to describe Convention and recruit volunteers. It may be helpful to enlist several volunteers willing to step in as alternates or last-minute helpers. LAC may contact other local Leagues in the area as a source of additional volunteers.
- 5. The volunteer chair assigns volunteers for every position, in every time slot, as identified by CPC, beginning two months ahead of the Convention schedule. The SO, CPC, and LAC should all have a final volunteer schedule that identifies the volunteer's name and contact telephone (cell) number.
- 6. The volunteer chair prepares a volunteer packet to mail to each volunteer 10 days ahead of Convention. This should confirm in writing the exact tasks and times for which a commitment has been made. It should also include a reservation form for Convention meals, a complete Convention agenda, and a map of the hotel, plus information about the required training at the hotel on Thursday afternoon before Convention. Volunteers should be advised that if they are not "on duty," they can attend and/or observe plenary sessions and workshops, unless they are registered delegates, in which case they should attend the entire plenary sessions.
- 7. The volunteer chair should be present throughout Convention to be sure that there are no volunteer staffing concerns.
- 8. The volunteer chair is responsible for thanking all volunteers in written or email format following Convention.

H. FLOOR COMMITTEE

It is vital that the Convention plenary sessions run smoothly, and to this end, volunteers on the Floor Committee play a primary and vital role in making that happen. The Floor Committee chair and members will be asked to attend training (about one hour) the day before Convention opens to receive training. It is helpful, but not required, if Floor Committee members have attended a previous LWV state convention and are already familiar with procedure of a plenary session.

The Floor Committee should be aware that beginning at the 2012 Convention, League observers who are not official voting delegates of their League are invited to sit with their League delegates at their assigned seats, unless they prefer to sit in the visitors' section at the back of the room.

The Floor Committee is comprised of the following: Doorkeepers, timekeepers, tellers, microphone attendants, microphone assistants, and a projectionist or media helper (to provide assistance to the SO as needed) during the plenary sessions.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STATE OFFICE

1. The SO should assure that all equipment, signage, and supplies needed for the plenary session are available. Equipment includes a computer with projection capabilities and monitor, projection screen, and microphones. Signage should include local League names, state board members names and positions, pro and con cards and others needed for microphones, red cards, visitors section sign, and time cards. Supplies include numbered four-ply motion slips (NCR paper), stop watch, bell, podium signage, backdrop banner, paper ballots, and water and glasses at the platform table. Arrangements must be made early to audiotape the entire plenary session. Tapes should be given to the secretary for recording minutes.

- 2. At least one hour prior to the beginning of each plenary session, SO should bring needed supplies to the plenary session room and make sure that they are in their proper places and that equipment is working properly.
- 3. During the plenary sessions, SO should be available to assist the State Board members as needed and may be asked to contact hotel personnel to assist with problems such as room temperature, lighting, microphones, etc.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE FLOOR COMMITTEE aka Policy/Bylaws/Rules Committee

- 1. The Floor Committee chair should be familiar with the duties of Floor Committee volunteers, as described below, and should also be familiar with parliamentary procedure.
- 2. The Floor Committee chair should arrive at each plenary session approximately one hour before it is scheduled to begin. Equipment and supplies should be checked to see that they are in place and working properly.
- 3. The Floor Committee chair and volunteers will receive cross-training at the Thursday training session before Convention begins. State board members will be available to assist with training volunteers.
- 4. Following the Convention, the Floor Committee chair should make sure that all volunteers are thanked.

VOLUNTEERS COMPRISING THE FLOOR COMMITTEE

Approximately 11 volunteers are needed for each plenary session:

- two doorkeepers
- one timekeeper
- three tellers (plus additional tellers if needed)
- · two microphone attendants
- one attendant for the president/presiding officer (the president can identify attendant if desired)
- · one projectionist (usually SO staff), and
- one media assistant to help the SO staff.

Hours will vary depending on the Convention agenda. Volunteers will have been trained in advance but should plan to report to the plenary meeting room approximately 45 minutes before the start of the session to receive additional instructions as needed. The local volunteer chair will recruit volunteers to fill these positions and is responsible for seeing that all positions are filled.

1. DOORKEEPERS

- 1. The doorkeepers monitor the doors into the plenary session room during the plenary sessions, admitting only persons showing Convention badges--delegates, observers, visitors, state League staff, local Convention committee volunteers, and members of the news media. Anyone without a badge should be asked to obtain one at the registration/information table.
- 2. The doorkeepers distribute handouts prior to the beginning of the plenary session.
- 3. During a vote, the doorkeepers close the doors, permitting no one to enter or exit while the vote is being taken.

2. TIMEKEEPER

- 1. The timekeeper sits on the dais in view of both the presiding officer and speakers at the microphones. The State Office will supply a stopwatch, a colored time-card, plenary agenda, and a bell. The card is used to indicate 30 seconds remaining, and the bell signals the end of the time.
- 2. The timekeeper times the speakers according to the rules adopted. The presiding officer will supply directions regarding the length of the debate and the time allotted to each speaker. The timekeeper must follow the plenary agenda closely and stay focused on the business at hand.

3. TELLERS

- 1. The number of tellers depends upon the seating arrangements for the delegates. Each teller will be assigned to a specific area of the room and will have responsibility for that assigned section.
- 2. Tellers are responsible for seeing that persons are seated in the proper areas of the room--delegates and League observers in the front section and visitors not related to a League in the back. Sections will be marked by table tents/signs.
- 3. Tellers will distribute printed materials to each seat as requested by the State Board.
- 4. Tellers are responsible for countoff voting when a motion requires one. Each section of the room is counted separately. The procedure is as follows. Those voting "yes" are requested to stand. Beginning at one end of the first row, the first delegate who is standing counts "one" out loud and then sits down; the next standing delegate counts "two" and so on. The teller standing at the end of that row makes sure that the first person standing in the second row starts with the next consecutive number. Therefore, the vote count travels right to left in one row and left to right in the next. State board members, including those on the dais, may vote. The tellers confirm the final numbers and add the yes votes for all sections. The same procedure is used for the "no" votes. One teller takes a written report of the vote count to the presiding officer.
- 5. Tellers may also serve as doorkeeper assistants or microphone attendants/pages as needed.

4. MICROPHONE ATTENDANTS AND PAGES

- 1. Microphone attendants are on the floor to monitor the two microphones used by the delegates and to deliver written motions to the appropriate people. Generally there are two microphones on the floor; pro and con signs may be attached to the microphones by the attendants. A page attends each of these, assisted by a teller if needed. The page sits in front of the microphone facing each potential speaker and adjusts the microphone height as needed.
- 2. The microphone attendant reminds speakers to give their name and League before speaking. She/he should carry a clipboard with appropriate paperwork to capture the names of those signing in to speak.
- 3. The page at each microphone has a red card which delegates can request to make a non-debatable point (point of order, point of information, parliamentary inquiry, or question of privilege). These cards can be waved by a delegate anytime during debate to interrupt it. Red cards and examples of non-debatable points will be provided by the State Office.

4. All motions should be written on motion slips prior to being moved. A delegate wishing to make a motion should obtain a motion slip from the microphone assistant. (Three-part motion slips are provided by the State Office.) The microphone assistant should remind delegates to press hard as they write or print the motion wording so that all three copies are legible.

The microphone assistant is responsible for delivering the first two copies of the motion to the Secretary and the projectionist; the last copy is retained by the delegate making the motion.

5. If there is an election challenge, paper ballots will be distributed by the tellers or pages to those eligible to vote (delegates and members of the State Board).

5. ATTENDANT TO THE PRESIDING OFFICER

1. One page is assigned to the presiding officer and is available throughout the plenary session for any tasks requested. Prior to the plenary session, he/she introduces herself to the presiding officer and sits in front of the platform.

6. PROJECTIONIST/MEDIA ASSISTANT

- 1. The projectionist often prepares and then operates the prepared Powerpoint presentation(s) on the laptop computer attached to an LCD projector. The projectionist will follow the agenda and change slides accordingly. The projectionist also receives motion slips from the microphone attendants, types them into the computer, and displays them on the screen. It is vital that the projectionist be familiar with the equipment prior to the beginning of the plenary session.
- 2. The media assistant sits with the projectionist (usually the LWV-Texas Executive Director) and helps as needed. He/she may also serve as projectionist.

I. WORKSHOPS ——

On the Friday of Convention, delegates and visitors have the opportunity to attend three of several workshops that might be offered. Workshops are carefully chosen and developed, and they may be repeated if there is a great deal of interest. Workshops will be listed on the convention registration form so that registrants can sign up for specific workshops. Workshop presenters are responsible for their own materials that will be distributed.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STATE OFFICE

- 1. CPC considers recommendations for workshops from LWV-TX board members and League members and also reviews evaluations of the last convention and the last two years of Leadership Institutes and/or regional meetings to consider member interest for workshops. Workshops may be facilitated by the appropriate LWV-TX vice president or another League member. Workshop presenters are responsible for making or duplicating their own handouts
- 2. The SO and CPC will work with the hotel to ensure adequate space and set-up for all workshops/break-out sessions. Any AV or "props" needed must be communicated in advance by the State Board Vice Presidents to the CPC and SO, including the title of the workshop, speakers' names, moderator/facilitator, room set-up, and AV or props needed.) to the administrator and Convention planning chair. Costs associated with AV and other props must be approved by the CPC.

3. It is the responsibility of the vice president organizing a workshop to invite and follow up with speakers or special guests.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

1. Local arrangements committee may recommend topics and speakers for workshops

J. PUBLIC RELATIONS:

Public relations/publicity for the Convention will be handled by the LWV-Texas Public Relations Vice President, in cooperation with the SO and the LHL's public relations committee chair. Guidelines for the local chair will be furnished in advance from the State Board Vice-president. Good lead time should be allowed for development of plans between the local chair and the State PR Vice President so that media contacts can be made in a timely manner and in advance of Convention.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE STATE LEAGUE PR VICE-PRESIDENT AND THE STATE OFFICE

- 1. The LWV-Texas PR Vice President should contact the LHL chair at least three months prior to Convention. At that time agreement should be reached regarding the relative responsibilities of each. Typically the local chair handles local media contacts, and the State League handles statewide publicity.
- 2. The SO will maintain and provide on request an up-to-date statewide media list.
- 3. The PR Vice President may prepare a news release, including a summary of the Convention schedule, to be distributed statewide at least one month prior to the Convention. A copy should be sent to the local PR chair.
- 4. Information about the League, League program and activities, and Convention, including an agenda, should be available on the LWV-Texas website as well as in the state office, so that any interested reporters may have immediate access to pertinent information. This information should be made available to the local PR chair well in advance of Convention.
- 5. The LWV-Texas PR Vice President will prepare a sample news release for Convention delegates to take home to give to their local media with delegate names and highlights of convention. The sample news release will be included in the Convention packet, if possible.
- 6. The LWV-Texas PR Vice President or the State President should be prepared to be interviewed or to provide a sound bite or quote to any reporter or camera man seeking such information.
- 7. The PR Vice President and the SO are responsible for all post-Convention publicity, including contacts with the local media in the hometowns of newly elected state board members. Whenever possible, photos should be obtained prior to the Convention so that releases announcing the election results can be transmitted in a timely fashion.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL HOST LEAGUE PUBLIC RELATIONS CHAIR

1. The local PR chair is responsible for compiling or obtaining a current news media list for the host city.

2. Approximately 30 days ahead of Convention, the local PR chair should prepare—and submit to LWV-Texas for approval—a draft news release about the Convention program and agenda; workshop titles; special convention events; and the names of local League members serving on the Local Arrangements Committee. All local statements and press releases should be written on State League letterhead and should include the name and phone number of the local PR director as contact person. Letterhead and envelopes can be furnished by the State Office.

K. SATURDAY LUNCHEON AND/OR BANQUET

The Convention banquet is usually held on Saturday evening but a special Luncheon could also be held on Friday or Saturday. The State Board and D&M are responsible for deciding whether either or both events will be fundraisers, and if so, what additional audience will be invited to attend, who the keynote speaker will be, etc. CPC may request suggestions for prospective local speakers from the LHL.

CPC will determine if centerpieces for the tables are needed, will establish seating arrangements as needed, and will provide place cards for all reserved tables.

The speaker, State President, LHL president, and others selected by the LWV-Texas president should sit at a "reserved" table. Seating for all others is by individual choice; however, State Board members and LAC members will be asked to sit at different tables throughout the room to greet League members.

If either or both the luncheon and banquet are planned as fund raisers for LWV-Texas, D&M will be involved and will determine outside sponsorships needed to ensure a successful program.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF CPC AND STATE OFFICE

- 1. CPC will arrange the luncheon and/or banquet menu with the hotel and will be responsible for setting the meal guarantee.
- 2. SO will receive payments for all luncheon/banquet reservations and will determine how delegates' registration information confirms their attendance/participation.
- 3. CPC will work directly with the registration desk volunteers to determine a final count of delegates and their meal plans; if additional tickets have been requested at the door, CPC will determine whether seating is available.
- 4. If news media is expected, CPC will make arrangements for a press table to be located at the rear of the dining room. The local host PR chair and one or more State Board members will be assigned to greet members of the news media who attend. If a keynote speaker for either Saturday luncheon or banquet is secured, a news media packet with event information, biography, photo, etc. may be prepared and distributed prior to the event.
- 5. Securing sign language translation may be investigated by CPC if deemed necessary.
- 6. CPC will handle needs that arise for a microphone and podium, the League banner, a registration table, and any AV equipment needed for speakers or entertainment to be placed in the banquet room. If the event utilizes an emcee or auctioneer, CPC will work with the State President and LHL to identify that individual.
- 6. The SO and PR Vice President will handle all live auction or other banquet fundraising details.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

- 1. If requested by CPC, LAC will help decorate the banquet room(s), using hotel centerpieces, etc., as available. If fresh flowers are utilized, it may be possible for one arrangement to be used for more than one meal event.
- 2. LAC also may be asked to recommend a local auctioneer, if a live auction is planned during Convention, and to make the initial contact, but would not be responsible for contract fees; LAC also may be asked to secure photographic/videography services for the luncheon or banquet but will not be responsible for underwriting the expense.

L. AUCTION ROOM —

GENERAL GUIDELINES WILL BE INSERTED HERE—JUNE 2012, AS PREPARED BY AUCTION CHAIR FOR 2012 CONVENTION, SUSYBELLE GOSSLEE.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE CONVENTION PLANNING COMMITTEE

- 1. CPC confirms the space needed at the hotel for the Silent Auction and related merchandise areas.
- 2. CPC and Auction Chair work with SO to invite Local Leagues and their members to participate.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE AUCTION CHAIR

2.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS COMMITTEE

- 1. LAC identifies possible sponsors for Auction Room refreshments while the Silent Auction is in progress.
- 2. LAC provides volunteers in the Auction Room during designated hours; some volunteers will need to have skills to handle sales (cash, check, credit card).

FINANCIAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR CONVENTION

- 1. LWV-TX State Office will handle receipt of registration money and payment of all Convention invoices, except those for which the Local Host League are responsible (i.e., Friday evening event). The Fiscal Management & Administration Committee of LWV-TX may approve alternative methods of managing Convention receipts and disbursements.
- 2. LWV-TX shall reimburse members of the Local Host League for Convention-related expenses such as postage, parking, and copying. The State Office will send reimbursement request forms to the local Convention chair for distribution to members of the local committee. All requests for reimbursement should be supported by receipts and must reach the LWV-TX treasurer within 30 days after the final day of Convention.
- 3. The State Office works with CPC and handles contracts for all hotel and dining services. All other contracts for services (e.g., equipment rental, offsite catering) should be approved and signed by the SO executive director. Arrangements should be made for local vendors to bill the SO directly whenever possible. If a bill cannot be mailed to the SO, the LWV-Texas treasurer will write a check for the invoice at or immediately following Convention.
- 3. All money collected at the registration desk must be recorded. Each income entry should be recorded as to date of receipt, from whom received, amount of payment, and reason (e.g., registration, banquet). Checks should be made payable to the League of Women Voters of Texas (or LWV-TEF for any special fundraising luncheon). Payments may be made by credit card. Credit card forms will be provided to the registration table workers.
- 4. Refunds for registration or banquet tickets should only be made in extreme circumstances upon authorization from the SO or CPC. No refunds may be made after the final cut-off date given by the hotel, as those meals will have to be paid for. The SO will take possession of the cash box each night and will be responsible for bringing receipts to the state office for deposit.
- 5. It is essential that transactions be recorded fully and accurately. Questions about these procedures before or during the Convention should be directed to the SO for clarification.
- 6. During payout for merchandise or auction sales, all individuals wishing to pay with a credit card will be requested to fill out a form to do so. They will then turn this form in to the staff or volunteer at the sales table.
- 7. Separate logs for merchandise and auction sales will be kept, and everyone will be asked to check out in a separate line for each to make post-Convention bookkeeping easier.

(Treasurer Edie Jones will review this page specifically, 7/20/11)

2021 Impact Report

Fighting for Voting Rights During a Pandemic

President's Message:

What happens at the Texas Capitol impacts and influences actions across the United States. For the first time in over 100 years, the 87th Texas legislative session convened during a worldwide pandemic. We overcame this barrier to democracy with determination, ensuring the League's voice was heard during the Regular Session and the three following Special Sessions.

LWV Texas provided 114 testimonies during the 87th Legislative session and three Special Sessions! Our advocacy centered on our priority issues: voting rights and redistricting, and urgent issues: health care, women's health, public education, and climate change. We also fought extreme legislation and advocated for equal opportunity in schools for vulnerable transgender youth. We fought unregulated carry of handguns.

In 2022, the League will focus our energy on overcoming the barriers to voting created by the new Texas election laws that put our democracy at risk. By supporting the work of the League, you can fight for communities hardest hit by these bills: Black, Latinx, Asian American, Pacific Islander voters, voters with disabilities, young and rural voters.

I am proud to stand with the almost 3,500 League members and 13,000 League supporters across Texas who work so hard to Empower Voters and Defend Democracy in Texas!

President, League of Women Voters of Texas

The Fight for Voting Rights Starts With Partnerships Let My People Vote Rally

We partnered with Texas NAACP, Texas LULAC, and Texas Impact for the "Let My People Vote Rally for Voting Rights" at the Texas Capitol. LWVUS CEO Virginia Kase Solomón rallied protestors with her speech "The State of the Voting Rights Crisis in America."

THE LEAGUE IN ACTION 2021 IMPACT REPORT

Fighting for a free and fair democracy!

Fighting Voter Suppression

Without the protection of the Voting Rights Act and with one-party control of the Texas Legislature, the League stands up to increased government efforts to suppress the vote.

WINS!

- We stopped the most extreme suppressive elements of the 87th Legislature's voting and elections omnibus bill.
- We activated the voices of members and supporters to send 242,000 emails to Senators, Representatives, and state leadership.
- We won incremental voting process improvements, such as ballot tracking and online mail ballot curing.

Defending Democracy in the Courts

At the federal level, we litigate to support Texas voters:

- Filed an amicus brief against the proposal to exclude undocumented immigrants from the Census count.
- Filed a lawsuit against the State of Texas about the Anti-Voter Bill, SB1.
- Filed redistricting litigation supporting Black, Latinx, and Asian American & Pacific Islander coalition districts.
- LWVUS filed an amicus brief opposing the SB8 antiabortion law.

At the state level, we continued to fight:

- Filed a lawsuit about the mail-in ballot signature process (Richardson v. Hughs)
- Filed an amicus brief at the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in support of Ms. Crystal Mason's petition for review of her conviction for voting "illegally."

Fair Maps Texas

Strengthening the voices of voters of color in Texas.

Despite the pandemic, Leagues all across Texas took action both at the Capitol and locally in support of fair maps. League members took action in Corpus Christi, El Paso, Hays County, Tarrant County, and Tyler/Smith County.

All communities, no matter their race, deserve fair representation, yet our legislators have drawn electoral maps that silence the voices of communities of color in Texas."

Grace Chimene, president League of Women Voters of Texas.

Women's Health & Reproductive Choice

The League of Women Voters of Texas advocated strongly against attempts by the Texas legislature to roll back reproductive rights. Bodily autonomy is a personal right. We hope for a victory from the US Supreme Court for Texans who may become pregnant.

Equal opportunity/LGBTQ Rights

We fought for transgender children who deserve equal opportunities to participate in sports, regardless of gender identity.

Gun Safety

Despite opposition from the League, law enforcement, and the general public, unregulated carry of handguns is signed into law.

Empowering local Leagues

Unleashing the power of local Leagues:

- LWVTX provided VOTE411 coverage to all local Leagues.
 VOTE411 use in a Constitutional Amendment Election year skyrocketed! 141,462 voters or three times as many users accessed VOTE411 in 2021 compared to 2017!
- With a grant from the Democracy Fund, LWVTX offered local Leagues Club Express, an online platform that includes a website League template, communications, and data management.
- LWVTX granted $18,000 to 21 Leagues to "Get Out The Vote!"
- LWVTX facilitates monthly Zoom calls for League Presidents,
 Treasurer, Voter Services, and Membership leaders to share best practices, strategize, and build community.
- LWVTX organized workshops: The Welcoming League, Civic Learning & Civil Dialogue, and Being League in this Political Climate.
- Leagues celebrated voting & civil rights history on social media throughout the year.

Amended January 4, 2019 as a new nonprofit corporation, 2020, 2021

ARTICLE I. NAME

The name of this organization shall be League of Women Voters of Texas, hereinafter referred to in these bylaws as LWVTX, or, as the League or state League. This state League is an integral part of the League of Women Voters of the United States, hereinafter referred to in these bylaws as LWVUS.

ARTICLE II. PURPOSES AND POLICY

Section 1. Purposes

a. The purposes of the LWVTX are to promote political responsibility through informed and active participation in government and to act on selected governmental issues. b. The corporation is organized and operated exclusively for charitable and educational purposes under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, or the corresponding section of any future federal tax code. Notwithstanding any other provision of these bylaws, the corporation shall not carry on any other activities not permitted to be carried on by a corporation exempt from federal income tax under such provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. No substantial part of the activities of the corporation shall be attempting to influence legislation.

Section 2. Policies. The policies of the LWVUS are

- a) Political Policy. The League shall not support or oppose any political party or any candidate.
- b) Diversity, Equity & Inclusion Policy. The League is fully committed to ensure compliance in principle and in practice with LWVUS' Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Policy.

ARTICLE III.MEMBERSHIP

Section 1. Eligibility

Any person who subscribes to the purposes and policy of the League shall be eligible for membership.

Section 2. Types of Membership

- a. Voting members. Persons at least 16 years of age who join the LWVTX shall be voting members of the local and state Leagues of their place of joining and of the LWVUS;
 - 1) those who live within an area of a local League may join that League or any other local League;
 - 2) those who reside outside the area of any local League may join a local League or shall be state members;
 - 3) those who have been members of the League for 50 years or more shall be life members excused from the payment of dues.
 - 4) Those who are students are defined as individuals enrolled either full or part time with an accredited institution.
- b. Associate members. All others who join the League shall be associate members.

ARTICLE IV. LOCAL LEAGUES AND LEAGUES AT LARGE

Section 1. Local Leagues

- a. Local Leagues are those Leagues within the state of Texas that have been so recognized by the LWVUS.
- b. The board of directors, hereinafter also referred to as the state board, shall recommend to the board of the LWVUS, hereinafter referred to as the national board, that it recognize as a local League any - group of members of the League in any community within the state provided the group fulfills recognition requirements.

- c. In the event of recurrent failure of a local League to fulfill the national and/or state requirements, the board of the LWVTX shall recommend to the national board that it withdraw recognition from such local League. In the event of the dissolution of the local League, all monies and securities that may at the time be owned or under the control of the local League shall be paid to the LWVTX after the local League board has paid or made provision for the payment of all liabilities of the local League. All other property of whatsoever nature, whether real, personal, or mixed, which may at the time be owned or under the control of the local League, shall be disposed of to such person, organization, or corporation for such public, charitable, or educational use and purposes as the state board in its absolute discretion may designate.

Section 2. Leagues at Large

- a. The state board may authorize the establishment of Leagues at Large, composed of state members, where feasible. Leagues at Large shall operate within the limitations established by the LWVUS and within guidelines adopted by the state board.
- b. In the event of recurrent failure to adhere to guidelines for Leagues at Large or to operate within the limitations established by the LWVUS, the state board may withdraw approval of the League at large. All assets held by a League at Large from which approval has been withdrawn shall be turned over to the state League.

ARTICLE V. OFFICERS

Section 1. Election, Qualifications, and Term

The officers of the LWVTX shall be a president, four vice presidents, a secretary, and a treasurer. They shall be voting members of the LWVTX and shall be elected by the convention to hold office for 2 years beginning June 1 of the year of their election or until their successors have been elected and qualified. The same person shall not hold both the offices of president and secretary.

Section 2. The President

The president shall have such powers of supervision and management as customarily pertain to the office; shall preside at all meetings of the organization and the state board, or designate another person to do so; shall be, ex officio, a member of all committees except the nominating committee; may sign or endorse checks, drafts, and notes in the absence or disability of the treasurer; and shall perform such other duties as the state board may direct. Section 3. The Vice Presidents

At its first board meeting the new state board shall designate one vice president who, in the event of the absence, disability, resignation, or death of the president, shall assume the office of president. Should that vice president be unable to serve as president, the state board shall choose one of its other elected members to fill the vacancy. The vice presidents shall perform such duties as the president and state board direct.

Section 4. The Secretary

The secretary shall keep or cause to be kept minutes of convention, statewide conference, and meetings of the state board. The secretary shall notify all officers and directors of their election and shall sign with the president all contracts and other instruments when so authorized by the president, and shall perform such other duties as the president and state board shall direct.

Section 5. The Treasurer

The treasurer shall perform such duties as customarily pertain to the office; arrange for an at least biennial professional review of the books; and, at the direction of the state board, maintain deposits in authorized financial institutions. The treasurer may sign, with written authorization from the president, contracts and other financial agreements, and shall provide copies of such documents to the secretary for archiving.

ARTICLE VI. BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Section 1. Selection, Qualifications, and Term

The board of directors shall consist of the officers of the LWVTX, six directors elected by the convention, and not more than six directors appointed by the elected members of the board. All directors shall be voting members of the LWVTX and shall serve for 2 years beginning June 1 of the year of their election, or until their successors have been elected and qualified. Vacancies other than thepresidency may be filled by vote of the remaining members of the board. Section 2. Powers

The state board shall manage and supervise the business, affairs, and activities of the LWVTX subject to the instruction of the convention. The board shall plan and direct the work necessary to carry out the program on state governmental matters as adopted by the convention. It shall accept responsibility for the organization and development of local Leagues and Leagues at Large, the promotion of League program, financial development, and such other matters as the national board may from time to time delegate to it. It shall have the power to create such special committees, as it deems necessary and shall perform such other duties as are specified in these bylaws. Any committee with the authority to carry out the powers exclusive to the board in the management of the League shall have at least two committee members, and a majority of those members must be board members.

Section 3. Meetings

At least three regular meetings shall be held annually at such time and place as the board may determine. The president may call special meetings and, upon the written request of at least five members of the board, shall call a special meeting. Notice of all regular meetings shall be given at least 2 weeks before the meeting, and notice of all special meetings shall be given at least 3 days before the meeting. During a convention or statewide conference, the president may, or upon the request of at least five members shall, call a special meeting by giving written notice to each member of the board. Special meetings may be held by electronic communication. Any one or more members of the board may participate in a meeting by means of electronic communications equipment, so long as all participants in the meeting can simultaneously hear each other. Participation by such means shall constitute presence at the meeting.

Section 4. Actions Without a Meeting - Written Consent

Any action required or permitted to be taken at any meeting of the board of directors may be taken without a meeting, if a majority of all directors expressly approve the action in a written or electronically transmitted consent, and such collective consent is filed in paper or electronic form with LWVTX corporate records. Each consent must be dated and clearly indicate the director from whom it is issued, either by signature or other means of identification (such as an email address). If an action is approved in this manner, prompt follow-up notice of the action must be provided to each director who did not provide consent in writing.

Section 5. Absences

Unexcused absences from two consecutive board meetings or three unexcused absences from board meetings in a biennium shall be considered a resignation from the board. Section 6. Quorum A majority of the members of the board of the LWVTX shall constitute a quorum.

Section 7. Indemnification and Limitation of Liability

The directors and all officers or other appointed representatives of the LWVTX shall be indemnified and their liability shall be limited to the fullest extent authorized by the Texas Non Profit Corporation Act, Article 1396-2.22A, Vernon's Annotated Civil Statutes, as it now exists or hereafter may be amended and by the Charitable Immunity and Liability Act, Chapter 84 of the Civil Practices and Remedies Code.

Section 8. Removal From Office

In executing the duties of their office, board members are expected to carry out applicable laws and regulations as well as League bylaws, mission, policies, principles, positions, standards, and procedures. Board members who do not shall be counseled. If violations persist, they may be removed from office by a two-thirds vote of the board of directors. A board member may resign at any time by providing written notice to LWVTX.

Article VII. Convention

Section 1. Place, Date, and Call

A convention of the LWVTX shall be held biennially in the even-numbered years at a time and place determined by the state board. A first call to convention shall be sent to the presidents of local Leagues, to the chairs of Leagues at Large, and to state members not in Leagues at Large at least 120 days before the date fixed in said call. Thereafter, the state board may advance or postpone this date by not more than 14 days. A final call, giving the exact time and place of the convention, shall be issued at least 42 days before the session opens.

Section 2. Composition

The convention shall consist of

- a. the president of each local League/League at large or an alternate, in the event the president is unable to attend;
- b. delegates chosen by members of local Leagues/Leagues at Large as follows: One delegate for the first 15 voting members, and one delegate for every 10 additional voting members or major fraction thereof.

The official membership count shall be determined by state office records of voting members as of January 31 of the year in which convention is held; and c. the members of the state board.

Section 3. Delegate Qualifications and Voting

All delegates shall be voting members of the LWVTX. The convention shall be the sole judge of whether or not a delegate is qualified to vote. Absentee or proxy voting shall not be permitted. A majority of delegates present shall be sufficient to approve actions, as long as the conditions for a quorum are met (except as provided below).

Section 4. Powers

The convention shall adopt a program; elect officers and directors, the chair and two members of the nominating committee; adopt a budget; and transact such other business as may properly come before it.

Section 5. Quorum

A quorum shall consist of a majority of the delegates registered at the convention provided that no fewer than a majority of local Leagues are represented.

Article VIII. Statewide Conference

Section 1. Place, Date, and Call

A statewide conference may be called as needed at a time and place determined by the state board. A formal call shall be issued to local League presidents and chairs of Leagues at Large at least 30 days before a statewide conference meeting.

Section 2. Purpose

The purpose of the statewide conference shall be determined by the interests and needs of members, local Leagues, Leagues at Large, and the state board. The statewide conference is open to all League members. Business may be conducted if necessary.

Section 3. Conduct of Business

- a. In event of conduct of business, eligible voters will be as follows:
 - 1) the president of each local League or an alternate, in the event the president is unable to attend; and one other delegate chosen by the local League board. Each League at Large with at least five members shall be entitled to one voting delegate; and

- 2) the members of the state board.
- b. Quorum. A majority of voting delegates registered at statewide conference shall constitute a quorum provided that no fewer than a majority of local Leagues are represented.
- c. A majority of those delegates present shall be sufficient to approve actions, if the conditions for a quorum are met (except as provided below).

Section 4. Powers

- a. In the event of conduct of business, the statewide conference may give guidance to the state board on program and methods of work.
 - b. In the event of an emergency, the statewide conference may change the program upon recommendation of the state board or a local League, using the following procedure:
 - 1) Any local League proposing a change shall submit it to the state board at least 60 days before a proposed statewide conference; the state board shall decide whether or not to recommend the change.
 - 2) At least 30 days before the statewide conference, the state board shall send to the presidents of local Leagues all proposed changes.
 - 3) A majority vote of the delegates present and voting shall be required for consideration of any change proposed by a local League and not recommended by the state board.
 - 4) A two-thirds vote of the delegates present and voting shall be required to adopt any change.
- c. The statewide conference may transact other business that may properly come before it.

ARTICLE IX. NOMINATIONS AND ELECTIONS

Section 1. Nominating Committee

The nominating committee shall consist of five members. The chair and two members, who shall not be members of the state board, shall be elected by the convention. At its first board meeting, the state board shall appoint two of its members to the committee. Vacancies shall be filled by appointment by the state board maintaining the off board/on board representation. Section 2. Suggestions for Nominations

The chair of the nominating committee shall request suggestions for nominations through the president of each local League and the chairs of Leagues at Large by advising them of the offices to be filled and the address to which suggestions are to be sent. Members may submit suggestions directly to the committee.

Section 3. Report of the Nominating Committee

The report of the nominating committee, containing its nominations for officers and directors and the chair and two members of the next nominating committee, shall be sent to the presidents of local Leagues and to the chairs of Leagues at Large at least 30 days before the convention. The report of the nominating committee shall be presented to the convention on the first day of the convention. Nominations may be made from the floor immediately thereafter provided the consent of the nominee has been obtained.

Section 4. Election

The administration of the election shall be the responsibility of an election committee appointed by the president on the first day of the convention. Election shall be by ballot except that if there is only one nominee for an office it shall be by voice vote. A majority vote of the delegates present and voting shall constitute an election.

ARTICLE X. PRINCIPLES AND PROGRAM

Section 1. Principles

The principles are concepts of government adopted by the national convention and supported by the League as a whole. They are the authorization for the adoption of national, state, and local program.

Section 2. Program

The program of the LWVTX shall consist of action to implement the principles and those state governmental issues chosen by the convention, or statewide conference, using the procedure outlined in Article VIII, Section 4, for concerted study or concurrence and action as follows: a. Local League/League at Large boards may make recommendations for state program,

- including proposed concurrence, to the state board at least 3 months before the convention or statewide meeting.
- b. The state board shall consider these recommendations and formulate a proposed program, which shall be sent to the presidents of local Leagues and to the chairs of Leagues at Large at least 30 days before the convention or statewide conference.
- c. Any League or the state board that plans to propose the adoption or amendment of a state League position by concurrence on the floor of the convention shall give notice to the state office to be sent to all local Leagues/Leagues at Large and the state board, of its intent to do so at least 6 weeks before the convention. The proposing League or state board shall send background information, including pros and cons on the issue and an explanation of the rationale for using this form of member agreement to the state office, and the state office shall send the information to all local Leagues, state board, and Leagues at Large at least 30 days before convention.
- d. The convention shall adopt the proposed program by a majority vote on each subject presented to it. A program recommendation submitted to the state board at least 3 months prior to convention but not proposed by the state board may be adopted by the convention if its consideration is ordered by a majority vote of the convention. A two-thirds vote is required to adopt a nonproposed item, or to amend or adopt a state League position by concurrence on the floor of the convention.

Section 3. Program Action

Local Leagues/Leagues at Large may act on program only in conformity with positions taken by the LWVUS or the LWVTX. Local Leagues, Leagues at Large, or members may act on program at the state level in the name of the League only when authorized to do so by the state board.

ARTICLE XI. NATIONAL CONVENTION AND COUNCIL

Section 1. National Convention

The state board, at its earliest meeting of the year in which the convention is held, shall elect delegates to the national convention in the number allowed the LWVTX under the provisions of the bylaws of the LWVUS.

Section 2. National Council

The state board, at its earliest meeting of the year in which the council is held, shall elect delegates to the national council in the number allowed the LWVTX under the provisions of the bylaws of LWVUS.

ARTICLE XII. FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION

Section 1. Fiscal Year

The fiscal year of the LWVTX shall be from June 1 to May 31 of each year.

Section 2. Financial Support

- a. Annually the local Leagues shall assume financial responsibility for the work of the LWVTX. b. Each local League shall make an annual per member payment to the LWVTX in an amount to be determined by a three-fifths vote of the delegates present and voting at each convention. When two or more members reside at the same address in a common household, the payment determined by the convention shall be made for the first member; a payment equal to one-half the per member payment shall be paid for each other member. A local League shall be excused from making a per member payment for life members. Each state member shall pay annual dues to the LWVTX in an amount set by the state board.
- c. Student members enrolled in a school or university shall pay an annual per member payment at a reduced rate.
- d. Responsibility for additional support for the LWVTX shall be assumed by the state board, which shall develop and solicit other sources for funding the state League and shall encourage supporters of the state League to contribute also to any local Leagues in their area.

Section 3. Budget Committee

A 2-year budget shall be prepared by a committee appointed for that purpose at least 180 days before the convention. The committee shall include at least two board members and one nonboard member, and shall include the treasurer, who shall be ex officio but shall not be eligible to serve as chair.

Section 4. The Budget

The state board shall send to the presidents of local Leagues and to chairs of Leagues at Large, at least 30 days before the convention, a proposed 2-year budget. A budget shall be adopted by a majority vote except that the per member payment shall be approved as provided in Section 2 of this Article.

Section 5. Conflicts of Interest

The board of directors shall adopt a conflict-of-interest policy and an annual disclosure process that applies to all officers and directors of LWVTX.

Section 6. Distribution of Funds on Dissolution

In the event of the dissolution of the LWVTX, after paying or making provision for the payment of all the liabilities of the LWVTX, all assets of the LWVTX shall be distributed to an organization that is recognized as exempt under Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3), or the corresponding section of any future federal tax code, and that is part of the League of Women Voters national organization. If no such organization is then in existence, then the LWVTX assets, after paying or making provision for the payment of all the liabilities, shall be distributed for one or more of the LWVTX exempt purposes within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3), or shall be distributed to the federal government, or to a state or local government, for a public purpose. The manner of distribution and recipient(s) of the LWVTX assets shall be determined by the board or such other persons as shall be charged by law with the liquidation or winding up of the LWVTX and its affairs.

ARTICLE XIII. PARLIAMENTARY AUTHORITY

The rules contained in the current edition of Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised shall govern the organization in all cases to which they are applicable and are not inconsistent with these bylaws.

ARTICLE XIV. AMENDMENTS

These bylaws may be amended at any convention by a two-thirds vote of delegates present and voting provided that the proposed amendment was submitted to the state board at least 120 days before convention by a local League board, or has been proposed by the state board. The state board shall send all such proposed amendments, together with the board's recommendations, to the presidents of local Leagues and to the chairs of Leagues at Large at least 30 days before the convention.

I will vote in every election to stand up for what matters most to me, my family, and my community!

League of Women Voters of Texas

March 30 - 3

Texas' new voting law disenfranchised 15% of El Paso's absentee voters, the county's longest-tenured and most active voters, during the March 1 primary.

League of Women Voters of Texas Statement on the Impact of SB 1 on Elections

For Immediate Release September 7, 2021

Contact Information Grace Chimene 512-940-9948

AUSTIN, TEXAS—The League of Women Voters of Texas president, Grace Chimene, issued the following statement in response to Governor Abbot's signing of the elections bill, SB 1.

During the last election cycle, Texans all over the state benefited from more voting opportunities, such as expansion of early voting, extended hours at the polling places, and more options to return vote-by-mail ballots. These are the kinds of measures that Texans want. With the enactment of SB 1, these measures are now prohibited. SB 1 adds to the morass of our election laws by using broad and confusing language, creating barriers to voting, and adding criminal offenses.

The following are the League's highest concerns, which are shared by a number of other nonpartisan groups as well.

- SB 1 threatens election officials with criminal prosecution for enacting procedures to meet local community needs to increase voter participation;
- It threatens advocacy groups and individuals with felony prosecution for providing needed assistance to voters at polling locations and with mail ballots;
- It limits the ability of election judges to remove disruptive or intimidating partisan poll watchers;
- SB 1 allows partisan poll watchers to take election officials to court over perceived obstruction.

In addition, there are several other measures in the bill that will make voting more confusing and thus harder. For instance mail voters are now required to include the ID number contained in their original registration records when applying for or returning mail ballots. Also it will be harder for some voters to participate because this legislation bans ballot drop boxes and drive-through voting.

Other measure work against our hard-working elections officials such as requiring new procedures for purging lists of registered voters, and threatening local officials with loss of employment and civil penalties for failing to maintain voter lists to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State. The law also requires audits which disproportionately target our more populous counties.

All in all, this legislation is a step backward for voter participation and will do nothing to address the possibility of fraud.

The League of Women Voters of Texas (LWVTX) is a nonpartisan citizens' organization that has fought since 1919 to improve our government and engage all citizens in the decisions that impact their lives. It represents 31 Leagues and more than 7000 members and supporters throughout Texas.

The League of Women Voters never supports or opposes candidates for office or political parties. The member-driven organization of women and men encourages the informed and active participation of citizens in government and seeks to influence public policy through education and advocacy of positions based on extensive issue study and consensus.

TESTIMONY

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS OF TEXAS

Federal Subcommittee on Elections, Committee on House Administration

March 17, 2022

This testimony is on behalf of the League of Women Voters of Texas about Voting in America: "Ensuring Free and Fair Access to the Ballot in Texas". We appreciate the opportunity to share our perspective.

During the 2020 General Election, Texans all over the state benefited from more voting opportunities, such as expansion of early voting, extended hours at the polling places, and more options to return vote-by-mail ballots.

But recently, Texas held the first 2022 primary election in the nation under the additional stress of a new, massive election bill, Senate Bill 1, which created even more challenges for voters in Texas. The new election law caused heart-breaking confusion among voters throughout the primary election. Most notably, the new ID number requirements that needed to be added in Ballot by Mail applications and ballot carrier envelopes complicated voting. These new requirements hit older voters and voters with disabilities particularly hard. The final election reports show an extraordinary percentage of vote-by-mail ballots were rejected (Texas Tribune article 3.11.22). But election officials were not allowed to promote or even educate voters about the new Ballot by Mail processes under threats of criminal prosecution. Senate Bill 1 also targeted all the previously mentioned expansions to voting opportunities by outright prohibiting them.

Election officials were also overwhelmed with the major overhaul to the election laws. The Secretary of State's office, which had the enormous task of carrying out the massive updates to the Election Code, was late in providing updates to its website, in training county election officials, and in sharing official guidance to county election officials on these major changes. Voter education and voting access were the casualties of the draconian changes in election law and severe delay in useful and vital education. It is a tragedy for our democracy when state leaders choose to support a partisan agenda instead of voters when writing state election law resulting in a massive rejection of voteby-mail ballots.

Texas voters were able to submit annual vote-by-mail applications beginning January 1, 2022. Yet, when volunteers with the League of Women Voters of Texas conducted a Primary Election County Election Website review in early February, they noted that the Texas Secretary of State updated the link to the Application for a Ballot by Mail PDF (ABBM), but eligibility and instructions for the new application were not updated. It was not until February 6th, more than a month after voters 65 and over and voters with disabilities began to fill out their annual applications, that the state website, VoteTexas.gov, was finally updated. We found that, of the 254 counties in Texas, only 120 (47%) provided up-to-date vote by mail information. Five counties still offered the outdated ABBM. The new Secretary of State's mail ballot tracker was offered by only 74 (29%) counties.

In addition to new voting requirements, the new election law also made election officials subject to new criminal penalties and provided more authority to partisan poll watchers. Voters reported unplanned closures of polling sites due to lack of election workers (Texas Tribune article 3.1.22).

Our primary election did not need to be difficult for voters. The League of Women Voters of Texas and our voting rights partners warned the Texas Legislature that SB1 would have negative consequences for voter access in our state. Because of this new election law, too many voters were silenced during our primary elections. It is critical that the Secretary of State show a real urgency in fixing many of the voting challenges before the November General Election. In particular, the League believes that the Secretary of State needs to work in collaboration with counties to address the obstacles voters faced in the primaries. The League of Women Voters of Texas will continue to support voter education and provide useful information to encourage voters to participate in our elections.

Texas is one of many states that is going backwards in ensuring the right to vote. What used to be a pride of bipartisan collaboration, is now relegated to political sound bites. The federal Voting Rights Act must be restored to ensure that every voter in Texas—regardless of where they live, what they look like, how old they are, if they have disabilities or what language they speak—has equal access to the ballot box and is protected from unfair laws and practices that make it harder for people to vote.

Below you will find information collected directly from Texas voters about the challenges they faced in the primary election because of the new law. We have omitted identifying details, but we hope the stories represented will provide you with the personal connection to the issues that are created when lawmakers seek to limit access to voting.

The League of Women Voters is one of America's oldest and most trusted civic nonprofit organizations. Formed in 1919, the League of Women Voters of Texas represents over 13,000 grassroots advocates and 34 local Leagues across the State of Texas.

The League of Women Voters never supports or opposes candidates for office or political parties. We encourage the informed and active participation of citizens in government and seek to influence public policy through education and advocacy.

Addendum: Stories from Texas Voters

After the March 1st primary election, The League of Women Voters of Texas conducted a Share your voting story survey. The form gathered stories from Texas voters about voting in that election and asked questions about the voting experience in the wake of the new law. LWVTX hopes the stories collected through this form will help to determine the impact that the new voting procedures had on Texas voters. Voters from 26 counties have replied to the survey so far and the survey is still active.

The following excerpts (with identifying information removed) illustrate the struggles that Texas voters faced when they sought to apply for a vote by mail ballot and then cast their vote by mail.

Survey Responses

"When I checked about it, I found no evidence that I had applied!"

"We signed up several years ago. For the first time since signing up we did not get our mail in ballot."

"I live in  and had a special election at the end of January. I am disabled and vote by mail. I emailed the  County elections division about the procedure. There was some confusion on their part; one person told me they could not receive applications until after January 1st, but then I got an official signed response from someone who said that the special election was an exception. I didn't realize that I had to use the same number to register that I had used when I first registered, but I entered my driver's license number, and that turned out to be correct.

"My mailed-in application for a BBM had not appeared in the online tracker showing it had been received late the following week, so I sent a pre-scanned copy in an email. I received an email confirming my application was received and a ballot being sent to me. Once I received the BBM and returned it, I checked online and couldn't tell if it had been received. So, I called and was told it had arrived and been counted before election day."

"I was frustrated that the lookup of the progress of the acceptance of my ballot had changed, and my information seemed to confuse the new system and it was very difficult to find out if my ballots had been received and accepted."

"Definitely harder to comprehend than in the past, don't remember having to add ID NO. or SSN. MUCH DIFFICULT FOR ELDERLY VOTERS."

"After being denied twice, I got my ballot and mailed it back.  County shows it was received 3x on 2 dates, but the SOS doesn't show me as registered. I called the County Board to see if my ballot was counted, but haven't heard back"

"I received a call on a Saturday 10 days before the election day that my ballot's outside envelope did not have ID information. I was asked if I would like my ballot returned to me to correct the error and I said, "Yes." I received the ballot and sure enough I had missed seeing the spot that required me to give ID information. It was in small print, and I had overlooked that area. I filled out a new envelope that was sent and returned my ballot. I'm assuming it was delivered and counted. The interesting thing is that my husband did not have an ID on his envelope either because we marked our ballots and envelopes the same. They overlooked the error on his or just didn't bother to contact him and threw his ballot out. I was never able to track our ballots because the website kept shutting down. I'm always careful to make sure everything is filled out correctly. The fact the ID information was way at the top and very small was probably why I missed that needed information. I find it difficult to believe I'd be the only person to overlook that area. I'm sure the letter that came with the ballot did not mention that information was needed or I'm certain I would have noticed and given the ID information."

"I hand carried my mail-in ballot to the  County Courthouse during early voting and they would not accept it. The man even told me that I did not have to put a stamp on it, just drop it in the mailbox outside the courthouse. I later Googled and found that Texas DOES require postage, but I had already dropped it in the mailbox."

"When I voted in the January election, they used the old envelopes, and I didn't have to enter a number. When I voted in the March primary, I entered a number from my driver's license, which I assumed was correct, but I got an email saying that my ballot was rejected. That was quite upsetting. I tried to fix it myself online but was not able to, so I called  County. A woman there walked me through the process. There are two numbers on the driver's license, and I had entered the wrong one. I didn't even see the other number for some reason. I checked the status of my ballot some days later, and it said that it was accepted."

"I successfully completed my ballot by mail. My ballot was accepted. But it wasn't easy. First of all, the cumbersome ballot made it very difficult and the necessity to completely fill every box made me nervous. Also, the last minute ask for my email address phone number social security for digits and driver's license on that secret line underneath the envelope flap was really upsetting. I am a voter registrar, a voter of many years, and an educated woman, so if it was difficult for me to figure out how to fill out that ballot, it must have been a nightmare for people who have fewer skills or experience. I'm very upset by the new laws."

"I voted by mail; vote has not been counted as of today March 7, 2022. I didn't sign the envelope b4 mailing. I made the correction Online. I have used tracking my ballot check Update on my ballot, no results yet. I have called five times to the election dept. No results, my vote remains Uncounted."

"I entered both SSN & TDL just to be sure I had the correct one & checked the box "for all elections." Received a letter asking me to reapply if I wanted a mail in ballot for the primaries, as there was a box, I missed next to "all elections" to specify which party for the primary. I received my ballot after early voting started. By that time there were already reports of how many mailed ballots were being rejected, so I voted in person & surrendered my mail-in ballot."

"I received the ballot promptly but when I voted it came back noting an error. I hadn't used the same ID as when I register evidently. I corrected over the phone but then received a ballot to correct what I had already corrected. Trying to verify that the corrected ballot had been received proved impossible."

"This experience really shook my confidence in my state government's handling of elections!"

"This was only my second time to vote by mail, and it was a lot harder this time! I don't know if my ballot got delivered or counted. I mailed it on the Friday before the election on Tuesday."

"It took 3 applications before I finally got the mail in ballot. After the second try the information said it was possible to correct my deficiency by email. But when I tried after great difficulty, I was informed that my application was never received."

"My experience was rocky. My first application for the mail-in ballot never arrived or was somehow misplaced at the  County Early Voting Clerk's office. The office had no record of my application. I learned this through the Mail-in Ballot Application Tracker and a subsequent phone call to the office. The representative there was helpful and advised me to complete a new application, which I did. The second application was accepted, and I eventually received my ballot with a little over a week to spare before the deadline for return.

I mailed the completed ballot, and it was delivered and received on 2/27. On 3/4, I received a "Notice of Carrier Defect" letter from the Secretary of State. It indicated a #4 error, meaning that some information was omitted from the Carrier Envelope. When I repeatedly attempted to correct the error online following the convoluted instructions in the very poorly constructed letter, I continually received a "No voter could be found for the details entered" message.

When the offices opened on Monday 3/7, I called the  County Early Voting Clerk's office as directed in the letter. I explained the response to my online attempts to correct the error. The representative responded in a dismissive and patronizing way that she knew nothing about the website, that the "Corrective Action Form" was only available in person at the Early Voting Clerk's office in downtown . She told me to phone the Secretary of State's office. There I spoke with , who was exceptionally helpful. She explained that the problem was a lack of communication between the DPS and SoState databases that caused my DPS information to not be recognized by SoState and vice versa. She emailed very clear directions to "change", actually re-enter, my profile information into the DPS database. This action created the proper linkage and caused my ballot to be accepted. I've yet to see the result in the Ballot Tracker, but Ms.  assured me that my vote was counted even though it might take several days to show acceptance in the Ballot Tracker. All of this was apparently due to a software glitch that unknowingly affected untold numbers of voters!!!"

"I didn't get notice that it was approved until after I voted. Therefore, I had to work with the judge to cancel the mail in ballot request before I could vote in person."

"I returned the mail-in ballot by mid-February, far in advance of the March 1 Primary Election Date. Imagine my surprise when --two days after election day -- a ballot rejection letter arrived. Like an idiot (or perhaps more like an average voter), I had incorrectly entered i.d. information on the INSIDE FLAP of the carrier envelope! Getting online to www.votetexas.gov and figuring out how to find the "Ballot by Mail Tracker" was a real challenge...there is no such item listed on the votetexas.gov home page. I tried entering "Ballot by Mail Tracker" in the "search" option & got 1 hit: "zipmilitary-and-overseas-voters.ppsx." I tried another search: "track mail ballot" & got 4 hits, none of which included the words "Ballot by Mail Tracker." I threw reason to the wind and clicked the 1st hit "Military and Overseas Voters." And there it was on the sidebar: Track Your Ballot by Mail! I clicked, then found I had to click through to yet another page where I filled out the form -- which was a challenge in and of itself -- and I found my ballot had been received and rejected Feb 22. So why did it take 11 days for me to receive the NOTICE OF CARRIER DEFECT letter?? I DID (as required by law) "correct" my ballot online within 6 days after Election Day. As of today, March 9, my ballot is still under review. No wonder so many ballots were rejected and ultimately will not count in this election. This system is a travesty which has and will prevent thousands of voting by mail in any election. So much for free and fair elections..."

"My mom is 81. She had been requesting mail ballots during Covid but decided not to in this primary due to SB1. She switched to voting early in person."

"My husband received an application to apply for the vote by mail ballot as usual. I never received an application."

"I am over 65. I applied for a Ballot by Mail. On the ID question, you could list EITHER YOUR DRIVERS LICENSE OR THE LAST FOUR DIGITS OF YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER. I thought it was an either/or question so I put down the last four digits. It was not indicated that whichever number you put down HAD TO BE THE SAME ONE YOUR USED IN YOUR INITIAL TEXAS VOTER REGISTRATION. In my case that would have been over 30 years ago, and I certainly didn't remember. I listed the last four digits of my social security number.

When I didn't receive my ballot, I called and was told that in  County the (mostly Democratic) election officials were aware of this voter suppression tactic in the GOP voting law. Since these election officials had access to my driver's license number through other databases, they were able to complete my application and I received my Ballot by Mail in enough time to vote."

"Never received it."

"The application is too long; the print is too small for seniors to read. The language is misleading/erroneous relative to required and optional information, leading voters to have their applications rejected. For example, instructing voters to fill in "one" of the numbers, leading to rejection of the application because of voters filling in the "wrong" number."

"I sent in my Application for Ballot by Mail in mid-January. I never received the mail ballot. I call * County Elections Dept one week before March 1. The staffer said that I would receive my ballot that day or the next day. Ha! It never came."

"I applied for a BBM for my husband who is 80 and disabled now. The ABBM worked just fine. Ballot came within 2 weeks of the election day, and I mailed at US P.O. But I had conflicting info on various websites about the status of his returned ballot and his vote. Several ways to track and one did not even recognize him as a voter!!"

"Rejected, said date was too late."

Letters shared with League of Women Voters of Texas

"Good afternoon, * – you and our staff certainly deserve our huge thanks and appreciation for going "above and beyond" to get rejected ballots cured and the required documentation timely into your office!

It is actually embarrassing to me that my mail-in ballot was rejected; I read the instructions and knew about the requirement to supply TDL # and/or SSN – but honestly, after putting the ballot envelope into the carrier envelope and sealing it, I could NOT find a space to put in that information. (Now I know why – the place is UNDER THE FLAP, and needs to be provided before sealing the carrier envelope*). I assumed that the sticker that the elections office put on the envelope would be enough to identify me and that the ballot would be accepted – how wrong I was!

Of course, when I received your letter to say that my ballot had been rejected, I went on-line, as instructed, and tried to cure it that way, to save me a trip to your office in * (since that is a 45-minute drive one-way). I followed instructions; gave my TDL and SSN, and upon review, it still said "rejected." So, I thought I'd give it a couple of days, and it would most likely be updated. Thank goodness I checked on the status again today; it still said "rejected," and that's when I called your office and was told today was the last day to bring the information in. I was eventually told that someone could come by to pick up the Corrective Action form.... I can only imagine how many people will not – or would not have – gone thru the trouble to cure a defective ballot – I am so angry at what the Texas Legislature did to us voters!

Well, anyway, thank you so much again - you're a rock star!"

"I was at an event on Saturday, March 5th and there was a LWV booth there.

I explained to them that I have voted since I turned 18 and now, I am 76 years old, I have never experienced as much trouble voting as I experienced this month.

I requested in a mail in ballot and that application was sent back to me and my husband as it was missing party affiliation. I completed and sent back in. I did receive ballots for the both of us and completed and then sent in well before election.

Then we get a letter stating that we did not include the DL#/SS# on the envelope. I had not had to do this previously. We just returned from the election office and found that we now have to include the number on the envelope which is located under the flap. It was explained as a new edition to mail in ballots even though our numbers are included in our application. We did and hopefully now our vote counts.

I was told that you wanted to hear about these cases so you can document how this new voting law does indeed suppress the vote. I know that many people in this same situation would not go to the voting office to correct error. While we were there, there were two people who were trying to correct this same thing."

"I have voted in every election since I became eligible (except for 1960 when I was in the hospital with my newborn). I always vote. I picked up an application for ballot-by-mail at my residence (name of assisted living center). I completed the application, mailed it, and got back a letter that the application was rejected. So, I drove to the county elections office to file an application in person. I filled out the form and asked the person at the elections office to review it - which she did. I then submitted my application person."

Tell us about your experience assisting a voter with the Ballot by Mail process.

"I shared information with my children who are Texas residents and in college to apply for a mail in ballot. The process was challenging, and my kids chose not to vote in the primaries."

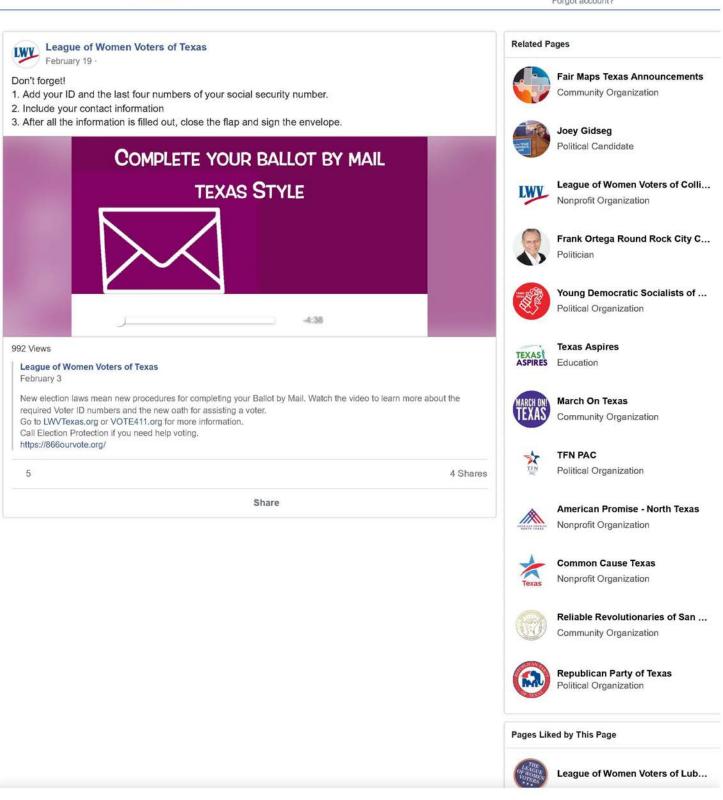

"I was a judge for early and election day. I served a lot of voters who had applied for VBM ballots and had not gotten them yet. SB1 molested the whole schedule everything started late, people had to iterate because of missing information, and there were delays at the post office."

"Even though my husband and I are eligible for ballot by mail due to our age, we advised each other NOT to do so because we don't trust it because of the new laws implemented under Republican legislature."

"As a resident of , an independent living and health care community, I offered my assistance to numerous fellow residents. Some had the application for BBM rejected (some more than once). Some couldn't read it because of print size."

I worked as an alternate judge at a Hays County oters bring in mail-in ballots that had been retu

Subject: Updates needed to votetexas.gov, texas.gov, county election websites

John B. Scott, Texas Secretary of State

The League of Women Voters of Texas appreciates the Secretary of State's hard work implementing the new election laws. With the March Primary Election about to take place, it is critical that voting information be easy to find, written in plain language, and accurate on votetexas.gov, texas.gov, and all county election websites. Our democracy and the voters in Texas rely on this information.

Since December, when the major election law became effective, I have sent several emails regarding incorrect voter information on votetexas.gov.

County election administrators and voters across Texas rely on accurate voter information provided at votetexas.gov. The League has reviewed all 254 county election websites and the Secretary of State's websites in major elections since 2016. Our goal is to improve voter education. In our 2020 General Election review, we noted that 178 or 70% of county websites shared a link to votetexas.gov. The county election website reviews are available on our website here. The county website review for the Texas Primary Election begins in February.

Please note that we are getting notices that some counties have not updated to the new Application Ballot By Mail (ABBM) on their website. Please consider sending a reminder email.

In preparation for our county website review, we will be reviewing votetexas.gov next Monday to gauge whether voters have access to needed information. Please consider this email as notice that voter information on the SOS website must be accurate and needs to be updated. In particular:

votetexas.gov

Vote by Mail - https://www.sos.texas.gov/elections/voter/reqabbm.shtml

January 1st was the first day that voters over 65 and those with a disability who wish to vote by mail were able to apply for the ABBM. Those voters and absentee voters need the correct information to fill out the new ABBM

Thankfully, the ABBM is accurate. The list of who is eligible to vote using ballot by mail and how to fill out the application has not been updated.

Voter Registration - https://www.votetexas.gov/register-to-vote/did-you-change-something.html
January 31st is the deadline for voter registration. We are in our final push for voter registration and this information has not been updated.

"As long as you reside in the same county", you can change your information online at the Secretary of State's Voter Registration Name/Address Change website.

Texas.gov

This website is included on notices to voters with voter registration issues, yet there is nothing on the menu to guide the voter to the information. A voter would have to go to texas.gov, click on resident, then on living in texas, then scroll down to find how to update their voter registration.

The League of Women Voters works hard to educate all voters regardless of party, on how to participate in our democracy. We rely on the accuracy of the voter information provided on votetexas.gov. Thank you so much for assisting us with these issues.

Empowering Voters. Defending Democracy

Exhibit 124

League of Women Voters of Texas Recommendations for the Texas Secretary of State Elections Division

1. SOS website enhancement

- a. Add an official Student Voter webpage on VoteTexas.gov. This will:
 - i. welcome young voters, high school, and college student voters, who are the future of our democracy to voting in every election;
 - ii. provide important information specific to them which can be easily accessible, such as basic educational information about how and where college students can register and vote;
 - iii. provide counties with an official page link on VoteTexas.gov to share with the young voters in their community.
- b. Align the mobile view of VoteTexas.gov with the desktop view for consistency, ease of use and accuracy.
 - i. The mobile version does not provide the same detailed information for voting by mail, registering to vote etc. as the desktop version. More and more voters use their phones to access online information. Voters who use their phones to access VoteTexas.gov are not receiving important voting information.
- c. Continue to improve the use of plain language on the Voting by Mail web page provided on VoteTexas.gov.
 - i. The League appreciates the improvements to VoteTexas.gov, including the addition of helpful graphics and explanations of the process of voting by mail.
- d. Improve the Application for a Ballot by Mail form on the Secretary of State's website¹.
 - i. Add clarifying information about ID requirements.
 - ii. Help voters by using simple step-by-step instructions for filling out the application, similar to instructions developed by LWV Texas and the Center of Civic Design.
 - iii. Add a video and/or graphics for clarity.
 - iv. Consider combining or linking to the much improved VoteTexas.gov Voting by Mail page.
- e. Track My Ballot tool
 - i. Make the process to input your address easier.
 - ii. Add a video(LWV Texas example at https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rfTIPFizgzc) and/or instructions about the process.

¹ Although we oppose the ID number requirements for VBM applications and ballots in their entirety, we suggest certain changes in SOS policies, including in Sections 1(d) and 4 of this document, to attempt to mitigate some of the harms from the ID requirements.

- f. Ensure the SOS website is fully language accessible in compliance with Sec. 203(b) of the VRA.
 - i. On the SOS's Spanish voter education website (VoteTexas.gov/es) many menu items link to English web pages. Even the SOS's complaint form is only offered in English.

2. County Websites

a. Encourage officially designated county websites to use a free government-verified DotGov domain. This assures voters are getting official trusted information and not misinformation from scam sites pretending to be official county websites.

3. Voter registration

- a. Automatically send voter registration forms to high schools, instead of the high school having to request them.
 - i. Enhance follow-up with high schools.
 - ii. Create more education for students (see SOS website enhancement section about Student Voter recommendation).
- b. Create more instructional/educational videos on the online voter registration site, where you can update your address if you move within the state.
- c. Send a confirmation email when a voter updates their voter registration address using the SOS website.

4. Vote-by-Mail (VBM) enhancements²

- a. Remove VBM information from the carrier envelope to be an insert like it is for military VBM.
- b. Simplify the VBM application to be easier to navigate, similar to the LWV Texas application designed in conjunction with the Center for Civic Design.
- c. Use larger font to enable seniors and visual impaired voters to more easily use.
- d. Review language translation and design of VBM materials that are in non-English languages.

5. Curbside voting

a. Improve training for election judges and poll workers to increase compliance with the administration of curbside voting. This should include requirements for effective and visible signage at every early voting and Election Day polling location.

- b. Update poll worker training to require a "runner" to assist with timely curbside voting administration.
- c. Advocate for increased funding to allow for more community outreach and improved voter awareness of curbside voting, especially in communities of color which face disproportionate challenges by existing inequities for curbside voting.
- d. Ensure counties have an ADA Coordinator. They would ensure regular compliance with the ADA Checklist for Polling Places and have the responsibility to implement remedies at polling locations ahead of the election period.

² Although we oppose the ID number requirements for VBM applications and ballots in their entirety, we suggest certain changes in SOS policies, including in Sections 1(e) and 4 in this document, to attempt to mitigate some of the harms from the ID requirements.

- 6. Poll worker and poll watcher training to help prevent misunderstandings before they occur and the spread of misinformation after an election.
 - a. Provide list of terms that might be misinterpreted Ex: "overvotes" actually means a "vote does not count because a voter marked more selections than is permitted", not that there have been "more voters casting ballots than are registered."
 - b. Provide a list of problems that could be misinterpreted, such as paper jams being confused with a ballot being counted twice.

7. Budget proposals

- a. Continue funding jurisdictions with grants to replace outdated election systems.
- b. Strengthen cybersecurity.
- c. To improve safety of election officials and boost employee retention rates:
 - i. Issue grants for home security systems;
 - ii. Provide funds for training and education on how election workers can protect themselves; and
 - iii. Allocate more resources for public education
 - Provide education for all ages and in all commonly spoken languages on civics, election processes, and media literacy so that mis- or disinformation is not propagated. Building resilience to disinformation through long-term educational efforts requires investments and expertise from leaders in education.
 - 2. Provide trusted and accurate election information by educating the public about when, where and how to vote, how votes are counted, and other election administration issues.

March 21, 2023

Dear System,

Spring has sprung, bringing with it a lot of activity in the Legislature. SB 2 which makes illegal voting a felony and purports to make it easier to prove passed the Senate last week. We will be testifying against the bill as it makes its way through the House. We testified in favor of HB 357 last week because it would simplify the vote-by-mail tracking process. The House Community Safety Select Committee will be hearing a raft of bills this week. We are registering our support for several of them that would stiffen some penalties for firearms offenses, promote more mental health treatment and better reporting of protective orders. We will be testifying against permitting Election Judges with a license to carry, to carry their firearms at polling locations. Please note the Action Alerts on this as well as on HCR 36 which urges Congress to compensate the survivors of the Sutherland Springs mass shooting.

Also note the Action Alert concerning HB 3166 creating a state-wide court of appeals to handle appeals from cases in which the State is a party. We will be testifying against this bill, which is an attempt to preempt, in this case, the regional judicial selection system and allow state actors to avoid accountability.

One thing is very clear at this point: across all our priority issues, there is a push to discourage opposition to the most extreme outcomes and minority viewpoints. Texas is not alone is this effort. From public education to voting and elections to abortion rights, legislation that limits the discretion of local elected officials while expanding the reach of state officials is likely to gain traction. More bills to empower individuals to enforce the law through audits, records requests and lawsuits are popping up. This is a very disturbing trend. We are watching bills that permit removal of election administrators and prosecutors who do not toe ill-defined lines; that create a new state-wide court to handle cases against the state and new authority in the existing supreme court to review criminal cases; as mentioned above, that make it easier to prove ineligible voting; and the list goes on.

Opposing these efforts in the legislature is obvious. Less obvious may be the other assets the League has to combat and reverse this trend. After all, we didn't get to this point overnight (although lately, it seems so). Over 100 years of experience in deploying all the tools necessary to bend the arc of the moral universe come in handy at times like these. Our voices are strong and authentic, we live where we volunteer. Our reputation is sterling. Our methods are fair and factual. Above all, we are tireless organizers and fierce advocates.

The overarching call to action this session is to remember League Principles and our support for federalism, judicial independence, and the right of all eligible voters to cast a ballot and have it counted. After all, if we all stay in our lanes, our Constitutional system of government works.

Priority Issues

Women's Healthcare and Reproductive Rights

Catherine Maxwell

I want to share about HB 12 and why it is important. This bill by Rep Toni Rose is designed to provide twelve months of postpartum healthcare to maternity Medicaid patients. It is supported in the 88th Legislature by Speaker Dade Phelan and Governor Greg Abbott. The committee hearing was held last week and the bill is currently pending in committee. LWVTX was one of the endorsers of this legislation.

Why all the fuss: Over 50% of the births in Texas are paid for by Medicaid. These patients, who meet the federal guidelines, include students, those who are uninsured for maternity, those who may not have insurance at all such as retail workers, office workers, some healthcare workers, part time employees, and those who live in poverty—in short, it is a huge, diverse group we want to protect and support in our community.

Elections Update

Last week the League provided testimony in support of HB 357, which would reduce the number of personal identification requirements needed to track your ballot. This change would help reduce confusion in the vote by mail process. Click here to see LWVTX testimony.

SB 2 Passes Out of the Senate

Last week, the Senate voted SB 2 out of their chamber. The proposed changes to the Illegal Voting Statute included in SB 2 are vague and confusing which could lead to criminalization of simple mistakes at the polls. The Lt. Governor and other members of the legislature have made this bill a priority, despite the fact that election fraud is extremely rare in our state.

Subject: RE: CNN - Today

It's a great opportunity, Grace. Here are some of our talking points on ID, vote by mail, etc. If possible, replace the term "Voter ID" with "voter verification" or "voter validation."

- No voter should have to choose between their health and safety and exercising their constitutional right to vote.
- The pandemic is not over for older voters and voters with disabilities, who are still at high risk of serious illness from COVID. These voters rely on vote-by-mail to cast their ballots safely.
- Texas elections were run successfully for decades without the restrictions implemented by this new law.
- The changes of this new law are damaging to Texas voters' trust of our election system.

Calls to action:

- If our legislature really wants to secure and improve elections, they should invest in upgraded equipment, expanded staffing for election administrators, and training for poll workers. Not complicated and unnecessary restrictions on voting.
- [anything you can give about what voters can do is it checking VOTE411? Is it contacting LWVTX for help? Is it the election protection hotline (866-OUR-VOTE)?]

On reliability of vote-by-mail:

- Vote-by-mail does not favor one party over another.
- There is no record of massive or serious election manipulation via mail-in voting.
- Texas has systems in place to deter and detect irregularities or violations in the voting process, both by mail and in person.

And of course, having a pivot ready in case the anchor goes off topic.

What we are focused on is...[the effect on voters, etc.]

Hi Grace,

This is Kate Riga with Talking Points Memo — I hope you're doing well, and keeping your head above water in what must be a totally overwhelming time.

I wanted to see if you had a few minutes to talk about how the election prep is going in light of SB 1. You spoke to my colleague Matt a few weeks ago, and I'm doing a follow-up about how things have shaken out since them.

I'm aware that you must be incredibly busy, so I'd keep it short — just want to get on people's radar how this law is affecting the election processes as we get close to the primary.

If you have a free moment, I'm at 610 246 7031. Very much appreciate it.

Thanks again,

Good afternoon,

I'm a reporter with The Center For Public Integrity, a non-profit news outlet. I'm doing a story on the paper supply chain issues, and the problems that poses for ballots, voter registration and so on.

I read about this affected the LWV's voter registration work with newly naturalized citizens here. I was also hoping to hear about the impacts of SB 1, I see that the League has issued several statements about those impacts.

I was hoping to interview someone with the organization, who do you recommend I talk to? The interview would be over the phone or Zoom, and 30-45 minutes. I'd like to talk this week.

Let me know if you have any questions for me.

If you follow any of the local law enforcement entities on social media, you'll see that from time to time they will post mugshots of suspects accused of a range of crimes.

Well, there was one mugshot posted on social media yesterday by Harris County Precinct 4 Constable Mark Herman's office that looked a little, well, different. The photo appears to show one officer forcibly holding a woman's head up while another holds her in place. The woman was arrested for allegedly failing to identify herself to a police officer.

The reaction on Facebook was supportive of police. However, a cofounder of Black Lives Matter Houston said the image shouldn't have been posted. What do you think?

Breaking overnight: Ron Franklin, the former Houston sportscaster who was the radio voice of the Oilers and went on to national fame at ESPN, has died at the age of 79. Also, André Leon Talley, the former Vogue magazine editor and fashion icon, died Tuesday at age 73 of complications related to COVID.

That streak of nice weather we've been having is about to end. Expect some thunderstorms as a cold front moves into the area late in the afternoon. Highs will be in the mid 70s, but expect a significant drop as the workweek continues.

A new law passed by the Legislature last year added requirements for voters to include a driver's license number or partial Social Security number when applying for a mail ballot. But, as Taylor Goldenstein writes, confusion has erupted as voters aren't sure about what information to include with their applications, and counties have not yet received training from the state on how to use the online system to fix them.

Meanwhile, erroneous applications are pouring in. In Travis County, over 25 percent of them are insufficient. Some are using old applications.

"Legislators were warned that this would happen, that voters would be confused, that this would create havoc among our voters," said Grace Chimene, president of the League of Women Voters of Texas, referring to testimony groups like hers gave during the legislative session.

To make matters worse, both voters and election officials are on the clock, too. There is less than a month left for voters to request mail ballots ahead of the Feb. 18 deadline for the March 1 primaries.

Sen. Paul Bettencourt, R-Houston, who helped write the legislation, expects the issue will be worked out.

"While patience is not at a maximum supply in this type of frothy, national environment on these issues, new election procedures will have some period of time for everyone to get used to," he said. "But we're still early enough to where all this is still curable."

"One in eight vote by mail ballots were not counted in the primary election. This is the direct result of the anti-voter bill SB1 pushed through the Texas legislature and signed by the governor. It is appalling that our legislators choose to avoid their responsibility to voters by not examining this high Vote By Mail rejection rate in the interim charges."

Texas' New Voting Laws Could Prove Hell this November

Jessica Lenamond, Austin Monthly Magazine | Published on 6/25/2022

Voting in Texas has never been easy.

Prior the 2020 presidential election, political scientists from the likes of Northern Illinois University and Wuhan University in China compiled a "cost-of-voting index" that ranked states by the ease in which residents could both register and cast their ballot. The analysis placed Texas dead last, citing the state's tough voter identification laws, unforgiving registration deadlines, and general "restrictive electoral climate," all of which made it the hardest state to vote in in the entire country.

And, of course, that was before Texas' most recent election law overhaul even went into effect.

Despite persistent warnings from civil and voting rights advocates, the state's Republican-controlled legislature passed the sweeping and far-reaching Senate Bill 1 into law in September 2021. Among other things, the law banned drive-thru and overnight voting, further tightened ID requirements, and allowed partisan poll watchers new freedoms. Additionally, assistants who work with Texans that need help filling out their ballots can now face criminal charges. This type of assistance is most frequently used by voters with disabilities or physical needs, but non-English speaking voters and those who struggle to read and write are also entitled to aid in the state.

Political standing aside, interpretations of the new law shared in a base-level understanding: It was going to get even harder to earn an "I voted" sticker. According to Texas Republicans, the shift was necessary, as the GOP beefs up election integrity protections, citing murky and still unproven reports of rampant voter fraud. For local grassroots voting organizations, however, the focus remains on those who have taken the most direct hit under the new regulations—everyday Texans trying to make sure their vote gets counted.

"All Texas voters are impacted, but especially voters of color, low-income voters, young voters, older voters, and voters with a disability," says Grace Chimene, president for the League of Women Voters of Texas, a nonpartisan nonprofit that works to educate voters on election issues. Chimene says the law spurred an immediate change, pointing to the March primary election, when 25,000 voters had their vote-by-mail ballots rejected, more than 1,800 from Austin-area counties alone. Those voters were mostly 65 and older, or voters with a disability.

Chimene also says not enough is being done to brief voters on the new requirements or properly prepare them for a successful visit to the polls. In response, the League is taking voter education into their own hands by providing extensive online voter guides and SB 1 explainers. "We're working with the Center for Civic Design to create more resources provided in simple, plain language," Chimene says of the group's efforts.

Those materials have set a new standard and are often utilized by fellow nonprofit organizations like REV UP Texas, which works with Texans with disabilities to ensure they're well represented within the voting body. Bob Kafka, the group's statewide coordinator, echoes concerns that Texas' disabled community is acutely impacted by the new voting legislation, which is breeding further distrust between them and local government. Although it would later be written out, an earlier version of the election bill included even more voting barriers for Texans with disabilities. "They were going to require the person to prove that they had a disability," Kafka recalls. "It was so blatantly discriminatory; it would almost be like a poll tax. I use a motorized wheelchair, and I would have had to go to a doctor to somehow prove that I have a disability even though I've been in this wheelchair for almost 50 years."

Bob Kafka is working with disabled Texans to ensure they're not impacted by the new voting laws.

The irony that Gov. Greg Abbott, a well-known member of the state's disabled community, has continued to champion the new voting law isn't lost on Kafka. "My disability and spinal cord injury is similar to Gov. Abbott's. You would think, you know, as a person with a disability, there would be some identity there."

On top of ongoing efforts to educate voters on their rights and available aid, REV UP Texas will host its third Texas Disability Issues Forum in Austin this September ahead of the November election. The event includes voter registration drives and allows high-profile candidates running for office in the state an opportunity to speak on how their platforms relate to disability issues. While Democratic gubernatorial candidate Beto O'Rourke has indicated his plans to attend, Kafka says the group has yet to hear back from Abbott's office.

Kafka's main advice to voters who are confused about new voting requirements or who have had their mail-in ballots rejected is to reach out. Whether that be to REV UP, the League of Women Voters, or to your county's election office, he repeats the importance of not being deterred by the first hurdle.

"Let someone know," he says. "The squeaky wheel gets the grease."

The Cutthroat Vote

SB 1's ramifications on Texas elections and the rest of the country.

- 702, 257: Texans that lacked either a driver's license or Social Security number on file, as of Dec. 2021.
- 8.2%: The rate at which mail-in ballots in Travis County were rejected during March's primary election.
- 12.4%: The rate at which mail-in ballots in Texas were rejected during March's primary election.
- 1%: Comparatively, the rate at which mail-in ballots were rejected during the 2020 presidential election.
- 27: Other states considering similar legislation, according to the Brennan Center for Justice.

Upcoming Webinar: The Impact of New Election Laws on Voters with Disabilities and Voters Over 65 December 15, 2021 - Noon - 1:00 PM

Austin - On Wednesday, December 15, 2021 at noon, the League of Women Voters of Texas will join The Arc of Texas, Disability Rights Texas, and REV UP Texas to present a free one-hour webinar to review the new election laws enacted by the 87th Texas Legislature. The presenters will focus on changes to vote by mail, curbside voting and giving assistance to voters. The goal of this webinar is to lessen the impact of election law changes felt by voters with disabilities and those over 65.

The need for this informative presentation is explained by Grace Chimene, president of the League of Women Voters of Texas. "We want to get voters ready well before the March 2022 Primary Election so that they are not confused by or afraid of these election law changes. This webinar will be helpful for all voters, but especially those who will be disproportionately affected such as disabled voters and voters over 65. The March Primary Election is going to be an important election, with a large number of races and candidates. Our goal is to reduce any barriers for Texas voters."

The presenters will include:

- Grace Chimene, President League of Women Voters of Texas
- Molly Broadway, Training and Technical Support Specialist for Voting Rights Disability Rights Texas
- Jeffrey Miller, Policy Specialist Disability Rights Texas
- Ashley Ford, Director of Public Policy & Advocacy The Arc of Texas

You can register in advance for this webinar:

After registering, you will receive a confirmation email containing information about joining the webinar.

The League of Women Voters is one of America's oldest and most trusted civic nonprofit organizations. Formed in 1919, the Texas League represents more than 13,500 grassroots advocates and 34 local Leagues across the state. The League never supports or opposes candidates for office or political parties. The League encourages the informed and active participation of citizens in government. The League also seeks to influence public policy through education and advocacy. Membership is open to people 16 years and older.

Hi Grace! I wanted to give you a final update for Saturday and see if you have any questions. I have included a draft agenda for you that remains mostly the same. You will have two 40-minute segments to share the latest on laws regarding GOTV and assisting voters and the second to talk about actually getting out the vote, tools they can use, who is running, etc. This time frame includes Q and A. You will be able to share your screen with us. Here is the link:

Why this Meeting?

The registrations have been up and down with COVID and changes to the ordination schedule but I'm expecting 10-20 representatives from different areas of the diocese.(Brenham, Houston, Austin, Bryan/CS, Austin, Temple, Waco) The Health and Justice Advocacy Network(HJAN) is an organization of Episcopalians working together on policy issues affecting health. It began the fall of 2020 and took up Medicaid Expansion during the Legislative session. Starting from a core of 8 people, they engaged the entire diocese around Medex and rallied volunteers to make over 700 contacts with legislators as well as participated in public hearings online and in person over the summer and fall last year. Now they are regrouping and looking to keep Medex at the forefront as they encourage their communities to vote in the primaries with Coverage Expansion on their mind.

Key People

The strength of HJAN is in their relationships. Most of the people on the call Saturday will be key representatives in their church as well as within their community or the Episcopal church. For example:

The co-chair of the meeting, Joyce Statz, is a key leader at St. Matthews in Austin. She led their GOTV drive in 2020 that made contact with over 2000 potential voters inside and outside their congregation.

The other co-chair, Dec. Clothier from Temple, has connections with the head of deacons for the diocese and is able to get information out to all the deacons serving. In the Episcopal church, the deacons take the lead in social ministry and many have worked with us. Unfortunately, this is ordination weekend so several will not be able to attend.

Another is Max Gerall, the Founder of REACH at Texas A&M – his group has done small group meetings with over 200 custodians and their families at A&M as they provide support and advocate with them. He also has connections with Episcopal churches in Bryan/College Station and others. You get the idea.

Here is the latest agenda. Let me know if you have any questions.

Hello Grace,

As always our website has quite a bit of information: https://www.wilco.org/votebymail. The document 2022 Election Dates is what I include when mailing out requested Ballot by Mail applications. The other two documents are included with the mail-ballot. The Dear Voter letter came from the State, the other documents were created by our office. Please let me know if you have any specific questions about voting by mail. We want everyone to be as comfortable as possible with the new laws.

communities they serve have the ID information and help they need to vote with confidence. You can Sign up here. Would you also forward it to all the Texas chapters? I would truly appreciate it.

Additionally, please let me know if there is any way we can help the LWV chapters as they do voter registration and voter guides. We would love to provide them with literature and resources to refer voters to us should they lack an acceptable ID.

All the voter registration gets updated to the SOS Team eventually. I have also heard from the SOS that DPS is sharing id with TEAM and the SOS.

Barbara,

Voters may provide both ID numbers. Don't check the box below the SS#

Copying Grace as the advice on this seems to evolve and the opinions from other advocacy groups appear mixed. I was on a call this morning with Gretchen Nagy, the Voter Registration Director for Travis County. She indicated that the counties were initially using their own data bases to check the BBM application numbers, but were told last week by SOS office to use TEAM instead. The county data bases had been synced with TEAM, but the information that TEAM gets from the DPS was not included. When using TEAM directly, they are experiencing a lower rejection rate because TEAM has the SSN as well as the TDL numbers.

HI Dorothy: We created a flyer to explain that there is a new VBM application – and have recommended that voters put both their social and drivers license on the form. Yesterday Josh the lawyer said he was concerned that voters would get in trouble for doing that – I guess because the way the first question is worded- "if you don't have". What are you recommending we say/recommend voters do on those two ID lines. Would it be better to encourage them to work on getting their own voter file updated with both numbers? Thanks for any advice. Barbara

Can you please verify the following? This is the list of 8 regarding SB! limiting our right to vote. According to Glenda (see her email below), #5 on the list is incorrect.

Original Wording:

5. Require voters using mail ballots to include the ID number contained in their registration records when applying for or returning mail ballots;

Revised by Glenda:

5. Require voters using mail ballots to include the number of their driver's license, election identification certificate or personal identification card issued by the Department of Safety, or if the voter has not been issued such a number, the last four digits of their Social Security number, when applying for or returning mail ballots;

Hi Mary,

Please let her know this issue can be fixed online so her vote can still count. Have her read down what was sent to her to How To Correct Defect #4 Online. She just needs to go to VOTETexas.gov and click on Ballot By Mail Tracker to put in her correct numbers and have her add both her DL number and her SSN. I believe she will need her VIU ID to find her info on the Ballot By Mail Tracking which I am sure she does not have with her but that she can get off of the VoteTravis.org site.

Hope this helps! If you want she can call me.

NOTICE OF CARRIER DEFECT

Voter Notified of Carrier Envelope Defect by Phone or Email

Your Carrier Envelope has been received and reviewed, but is defective for the reason(s) checked below.

Texas law allows a voter to correct certain defects on his or her Carrier Envelope after the marked ballot has been returned to the Early Voting Clerk. Your Carrier Envelope is being held at the Early Voting Clerk's Office so that you can make the necessary corrections because there was not sufficient time to return your Carrier Envelope to you by mail. The defect(s) listed below are able to be corrected no later than the 6th day after Election Day by appearing in person at the Early Voting Clerk's Office.

- The Carrier Envelope you returned to the Early Voting Clerk was not signed.
- 2. When the signature on your Application for Ballot by Mail was compared to the signature on your Carrier Envelope, it could not be immediately determined that the signatures were made by the same person.
 - 3. A required Statement of Residence was not included in the Carrier Envelope you returned to the Early Voting Clerk.
- X 4. Your Carrier Envelope did not contain your Texas Driver's License Number, Texas Personal Identification Number, Texas Election Identification Certificate Number or the Last 4 digits of your Social Security Number: OR
 - the number provided did not match the number associated with your voter registration record as provided by your County's Voter Registrar; OR
 - if you were not issued one of the documents with the required number, you did not indicate this fact on the Carrier Envelope
- 5. The Carrier Envelope you returned to the Early Voting Clerk contained incomplete information with respect to a witness.

How to Correct a Defect on Your Carrier Envelope by Appearing in Person at the Early Voting Clerk's Office

Defects number 1, 2, 3, and 5 can be corrected by completing the Corrective Action Form included with your notification of defect. You must deliver the completed Corrective Action Form in person to the Early Voting Clerk's Office.

Defect Correction Process by Number

- Defect #1 Complete and sign the Signature Box on the Corrective Action Form.
- Defect #2 Complete and sign the Signature Box on the Corrective Action Form.
- Defect #3 Complete and sign the Statement of Residence portion of the Corrective Action Form.
- . Defect #4 You may correct Defect #4 online through the Texas Secretary of State Ballot by Mail Tracker at www.votetexas.gov or by providing your personal identification information in Box #4 of the Corrective Action Form. If you use the Corrective Action Form, you must complete and sign the Signature Box.
- . Defect #5 If you used a witness for your Carrier Envelope because you were not able to sign or make your mark and the witness information was missing or incomplete, please ask a witness to complete the witness portion of the Corrective Action Form. You may use a different person as a witness if the same person is not available.
 - NOTE: If you no longer need a witness, you must be able to sign or make your mark on the Corrective Action Form in the Signature Box.

Correcting Defect #4 Using the Ballot by Mail Tracker

You may correct Defect #4 online through the Texas Secretary of State Ballot by Mail Tracker at www.votetexas.gov or by delivering the Corrective Action Form to the Early Voting Clerk's Office no later than the 6th day after Election Day. When you log into the Ballot by Mail Tracker, you will have the opportunity to enter your personal identification number(s). Both your Texas Driver's License or Texas Personal Identification Card number AND your Social Security number must be associated with your voter registration record to use the Ballot by Mail Tracker. Once your personal identification number is validated by the Ballot by Mail Tracker, the Carrier Envelope you previously submitted will be processed. Once your corrective action has been reviewed, the date of review and the status of your Carrier Envelope will be displayed on the Ballot by Mail Tracker. You do not have to appear in person at the Early Voting Clerk's Office if you make your correction online.

To utilize the Ballot by Mail Tracker, you must enter:

- · Your Texas Driver's License Number or Texas Personal Identification Number, AND
- The last four digits of your social security number AND
- · Your residence address as listed in your voter registration record

Cancelling Your Ballot by Mail - If you do not wish to correct the defect, you may still vote in person by cancelling your Ballot by Mail. If you cancel your Ballot by Mail in person at the Early Voting Clerk's Office, you will be given a Notice of Surrendered Ballot to take to the polls. This entitles you to vote a regular ballot. If you do not cancel at the Early Voting Clerk's Office, you will be able to vote a Provisional Ballot at the polling place. You may not vote in person after Election Day.

If you have any questions or concerns about making a correction to your Carrier Envelope please contact the Early Voting Clerk's Office at:

VOTANTE NOTIFICADO POR TELÉFONO O CORREO ELECTRÓNICO DEL DEFECTO DEL SOBRE DE ENVÍO

Su Sobre de Envío ha sido recibido y revisado, pero está defectuoso por la(s) razón(es) marcada(s) a continuación. La ley de Texas permite que un votante corrija ciertos defectos en su Sobre de Envío después de que la boleta marcada haya sido devuelta al Secretario de Votación Adelantada. Su Sobre de Envío está siendo retenido en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada para que usted pueda hacer las correcciones necesarias porque no hubo tiempo suficiente para devolverle su Sobre de Envío por correo. Los defectos que se enumeran a continuación se pueden curar a más tardar el 6º día después del Día de las Elecciones presentándose en persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada.

Hay una marca de veri	ificación junto a la	a razón por la qu	e su Sobre de	Envío era Defectuoso:
-----------------------	----------------------	-------------------	---------------	-----------------------

- 1. El Sobre de Envío que devolvió al Secretario de Votación Adelantada no estaba firmada.
- Cuando se comparó la firma de su Solicitud de Boleta Postal con la firma de su Sobre de Envío, no se pudo determinar inmediatamente que las firmas fueron realizadas por la misma persona.
- _____3. La Constancia de Domicilio Permanente requerida no se incluyó en el Sobre de Envío que usted devolvió al Secretario de Votación Adelantada.

Su Sobre de Envío no contenía su Número de Licencia de Conducir de Texas, su Número de Identificación Personal de Texas, su Número de Certificado de Identificación Electoral de Texas o los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social; O
El número proporcionado no coincidía con el número asociado con su registro de votante proporcionado por el Registrador de Votantes de su condado; O

Si no se le expidió uno de los documentos con el número requerido, no indicó este hecho en el Sobre de Envio.

_5. El Sobre de Envío que usted devolvió al Secretario de Votación Adelantada contenía información incompleta con respecto a un testigo.

Cómo Corregir un Defecto en Su Sobre de Envío Presentándose en Persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada

Los defectos número 1, 2, 3 y 5 pueden ser corregidos completando el Formulario de Acción Correctiva incluido en su notificación de defecto. Debe entregar el Formulario de Acción Correctiva completado en persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada.

Proceso de Corrección de Defectos por Número

- Defecto #1 Complete y firme la Casilla de Firma en el Formulario de Acción Correctiva.
- Defecto #2 Complete y firme la Casilla de Firma en el Formulario de Acción Correctiva.
- Defecto #3 Complete y firme la parte de la Constancia de Domicilio Permanente del Formulario de Acción Correctiva.
- Defecto #4 Usted puede corregir el defecto #4 en línea a través del Rastreador de Boleta por Correo de la Secretaría de Estado de Texas en www.votetexas.gov o agregando su(s) número(s) de identificación personal en la Casilla #4 del Formulario de Acción Correctiva. Si utiliza el Formulario de Acción Correctiva, debe completar y firmar la Casilla de Firma.
- Defecto #5- Si utiliza un testigo para su Sobre de Envío porque no pudo firmar o hacer su marca y la información del testigo faltaba o estaba incompleta, pida a un testigo que complete la parte del Formulario de Acción Correctiva correspondiente. Puede utilizar una persona diferente como testigo si la misma persona no está disponible.

NOTA: Si ya no necesita un testigo, debe poder firmar o hacer su marca en el Formulario de Acción Correctiva en la Casilla de Firma.

Corrección del Defecto #4 Usando el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo

Puede corregir el defecto #4 en línea a través del Rastreador de Boleta por Correo de la Secretaría de Estado de Texas en www.votetexas.gov o entregando el Formulario de Acción Correctiva en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada a más tardar el 6° día después del Día de las Elecciones.

Cuando ingrese al Rastreador de Boleta por Correo, tendrá la oportunidad de ingresar su(s) número(s) de identificación personal. Tanto el número de su Licencia de Conducir de Texas o de su Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas COMO su número de Seguro Social deben estar asociados con su registro de votante para utilizar el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo. Una vez que su número de identificación personal sea validado por el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo, se procesará el Sobre de Envío que usted presentó previamente. Una vez que se haya revisado su acción correctiva, la fecha de revisión y el estado de su Sobre de Envío se mostrarán en el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo. No tiene que presentarse en persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada si realiza su corrección en línea.

Para utilizar el Rastreador de Boleta por Correo, debe ingresar:

- Su Número de Licencia de Conducir de Texas o su Número de Tarjeta de Identificación Personal de Texas, Y
- Los últimos 4 dígitos de su Número de Seguro Social Y
- Su dirección de residencia tal y como figura en su registro de votante

Cancelación de Su Boleta Postal - Si no desea corregir el defecto, aún puede votar en persona cancelando su Boleta por Correo. Si cancela su Boleta por Correo en persona en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada, se le entregará un Aviso de Boleta Postal Renunciada para que lo lleve a las casillas electorales. Esto le da derecho a votar con una boleta regular. Si no lo cancela en la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada, podrá votar con una Boleta Provisional en el lugar de votación. No podrá votar en persona después del Día de las Elecciones.

Si tiene alguna pregunta o duda sobre cómo hacer una corrección en su Sobre de Envío, póngase en contacto con la Oficina del Secretario de Votación Adelantada en:

NEW Vote by Mail Resources!

Did you know that nearly 25,000 mail-in ballots were rejected during the May Texas Primary Election? Do you want to help to minimize that happening again? We have a way to help make that happen!

After the alarming rate of rejected mail-in ballots, the League of Women Voters of Texas (LWVTX) went to work. We engaged the Center for Civic Design (CCD), to create easier to understand and use Vote by Mail materials. The LWVTX provided the background, knowledge, and content about Texas' ballot by mail laws and processes while CCD provided their expert design, usability, and accessibility skills.

We are making these new resources available to Election Administrators, political parties, and organizations!

The resources include download and print resources below include:

- Vote by Mail Application this new application is easier to understand and to fill out. Yes, it is valid to use this application! Per the Texas Secretary of State's website other vote by mail applications can be used as long as it has the necessary fields, which this does.
- How to Apply and Vote by Mail A double sided checklist. One side is for completing any vote by mail application, and the other side is for completing the ballot by mail carrier envelope. These were where the biggest issues in the past for people with the vote by mail
- Pocket Guide A foldable guide on how to voter by mail. Bookmarks Two sets of bookmarks with different quick tips on voting by mail.
- Door Hanger -Two sets of door hangers also with different quick tips on voting by mail.

All the resources can be found at LWVTexas.org/votebymail and listed below for your convenience.

Hello Univision Friends,

The League has worked with the Center for Civic Design to pull together an improved version of the application to vote by mail, along with some vote-by-mail instructional materials. We just received the Spanish-translated versions. The Center for Civic Design has vetted these through several Spanish speaking groups in Texas. We thought you might find them helpful.

Voting by mail in Texas

If you are planning to vote by mail for the November 8th election, it is time to apply and request your ballot. The League of Women Voters of Texas has created some fantastic resources to help voters understand the process. The last day that vote by mail applications can be received at your county elections office is October 28th, but don't wait. Do it soon!

Are you eligible to vote by mail?

Voting by mail in Texas is limited to voters who are:

- 65 years of age or older on Election Day;
- 2. Sick or disabled;
- 3. Expecting to give birth within three weeks before or after Election Day;

- 4. Absent from the county of registration during the Early Voting period and on Election Day;
- 5. Civilly committed under Chapter 841 of the Texas Health and Safety Code; or
- 6. Confined in jail, but otherwise eligible.

If you are eligible and decide to apply to vote by mail, read on for the League of Women Voters of Texas' guest blog on vote by mail!

NEW Vote by Mail Resources!

Did you know that nearly 25,000 mail-in ballots were rejected during the May Texas Primary Election? Do you want to help to minimize that happening again? We have a way to help make that happen!

After the alarming rate of rejected mail-in ballots, the League of Women Voters of Texas (LWVTX) went to work. We engaged the Center for Civic Design (CCD), to create easier to understand and use Vote by Mail materials. The LWVTX provided the background, knowledge, and content about Texas' ballot by mail laws and processes while CCD provided their expert design, usability, and accessibility skills.

We are making these new resources available to Election Administrators, political parties, and organizations!

The resources include download and print resources below include:

- Vote by Mail Application this new application is easier to understand and to fill out. Yes, it is valid to use this application! Per the Texas Secretary of State's website other vote by mail applications can be used as long as it has the necessary fields, which this does.
- How to Apply and Vote by Mail A double sided checklist. One side is for completing any vote by mail application, and the other side is for completing the ballot by mail carrier envelope. These were where the biggest issues in the past for people with the vote by mail
- Pocket Guide A foldable guide on how to vote by mail. Bookmarks Two sets of bookmarks with different quick tips on voting by mail.
- Door Hanger -Two sets of door hangers also with different quick tips on voting by mail.

All the resources can be found at LWVTexas.org/votebymail and listed below for your convenience.

- Pocket Guide How to Vote by Mail
- Bookmarks Vote by Mail
- Door Hangers Vote by Mail

LWVTX and CCD hope you will use these new resources and help to reduce the number of rejected mail-in ballots and applications for the November general election!

There is also a new How To Return Vote by Mail Ballot video with step-by-step instructions to assist eligible voters in this process.

Thank you to TEV partner, The League of Women Voters of Texas, for helping voters follow the rules to ensure their ballots are counted and their voices are heard!

Onward!

Steps to Voting by Mail in Texas

For eliqible Texas voters who want to safely vote from home

Apply

Who can vote by mail?

Those who are:

- 65 years or older
- Sick or disabled
- Out of the county during early voting and election day
- In jail or Involuntary Civil Commitment but otherwise eligible to vote
- Expecting to give birth within three weeks before or after election day.
- To Vote by Mail because you are sick or disabled, you must affirm the following: "I have a sickness or physical condition that prevents me from appearing at the polling place on election day without a likelihood of needing personal assistance or injuring my health."

Where to get a Vote by Mail application

- · Request an application from your County Election office.
- At VoteTexas.gov, print the Vote by Mail application in English or Spanish. Fill out, sign, and mail to your Early Voting Clerk in the county where you are registered to vote.

Tips for filling out the VBM application

Read all the instructions provided on the back of the application

Sec. 1 - Provide contact information so that the Elections Department can reach you if they have a concern so that the approval of the application is not delayed.

Provide Your ID number from:

- A Texas Driver license
- A Texas Personal ID
- Election Identification Certificate
- or, if none of these has been issued, then the last four of your Social Security number.
- Use the same ID number on the Vote by Mail application and the ballot carrier envelope that you used for your voter registration.

Sec. 2 - Provide the address where the ballot is to be mailed.

Sec. 3 - Voters with disabilities check the box marked disability.

Sec. 4 - If you are 65 years or older, or are sick or disabled, mark the box for "Annual Application".

- If you are out of the county (where you are registered to vote) during early voting and on Election Day, mark which election you are applying to Vote by Mail.
- Mark your party of choice to vote in the Primary Election and runoff.

Sec. 5 - Don't forget to sign the application.

Sec. 6 - If the voter is unable to sign the application follow the instructions for witnessing a signature.

 Persons who assist voters with a Vote By Mail application must provide their name and address.

Deadline

 Applications must be received (not postmarked) at your county election office by the application deadline.

Tips for filling out and submitting my ballot

- Research your candidates with the League's nonpartisan Voters Guide at VOTE411.org.
- Mark your ballot using a black or blue pen
- Place your ballot in the ballot envelope and seal it
- Place the ballot envelope in the carrier envelope
- Complete all information on the carrier envelope, seal it, and sign the flap of the carrier envelope.
- Provide your ID number from:
 - A Texas Driver license
 - A Texas Personal ID
 - Election Identification Certificate
 - or, if none of these has been issued, then the last four of your Social Security Number.
- Use the same ID number on the Vote by Mail application and the ballot carrier envelope that you used for your voter registration.
- Don't forget to sign the carrier envelope with the same signature you used on your application.
- Mail in your ballot as soon as possible. It must be received at your county election office by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day.
- You may use the US Postal Office or common carriers such as Fed Ex, UPS or DHL to mail your ballot.

What if I want to hand-deliver my ballot?

- You may hand-deliver your marked ballot in person to the county election office on Election Day while polls are open.
- You must show your photo ID.

What if I decide to vote in person instead.

- Take your Vote by Mail ballot with you to the polling station and turn in to the voting clerk. You will be allowed to vote a regular ballot.
- If you lose or forget your Vote by Mail ballot, you may cast a provisional ballot.

For more information, review the Secretary of State's information provided in your Vote by Mail ballot package.

Persons who assist a voter with the Vote by Mail ballot must:

- Provide their name and relationship to the voter
- · Provide their address
- Sign an oath
- Mark that they didn't receive compensation.

The cure process

 If you provide contact information, the Elections Department may reach out to you if they have a concern with your ballot.

Stay calm. Offer trusted League information.
Share the Election Protection number information.

If League members are impacted or those we help, ask if we can share their names and contact information our lawyers. Send me the information.

There is League litigation on this subject.

Please rush a social media campaign that we can share with everyone about using the Correct ABBM form. That is not covered in the one pager you just sent. We are finding that the old form is being spread far and wide by churches, mosques, temples, neighborhood orgs etc. Nor is it addressed directly in the first VBM video. (Disclaimer: I have not yet taken the time to watch all of the videos or read all of the links in Dorothy's email yet.) One of the problems is that the old form is what was coming up when folks did internet searches. They did not know to be careful to use the new form which requires the drivers license number or last four of their social. I have attached the ones in English from Dallas County Elections Dept and English and Spanish linked on our website.

If one of the links in Dorothy's email and one pager addresses this directly please point us to it so we all can save a bit of time. This is an opportunity the elections administrators can't easily solve. But we can by getting the word out.

BTW: yesterday I tried to update my name and address info on the SOS website and it wasn't working properly and did not save my information!

Thanks,

Subject: Voter Education Information!

Good afternoon to all,

I am sure you all have read about the high rate of rejection of Vote by Mail applications in certain counties. It is important that we provide our communities with Voter Education information about the new Vote by Mail application and process. We have created some Voter Education resources you might find helpful.

Question from Casey Thomas Texas NAACP Advocacy

Who would be a good person with the League to do a voter education forum on the new laws and the rules for applying for a vote by mail application?

Introduction:

Dorothy Marchand LWV Texas Voter Education Joyce LeBombard LWV Texas President Elisabeth MacNamara LWV Texas Advocacy Chair

Casey,

That is a good question. LWV Texas just changed over to new leadership. Joyce, Elisabeth, or Dorothy should be able to answer that question. The League had several webinars on the new election laws earlier in the year.

We are working on some great Vote by Mail voter education material. You can find videos and printable material on our Vote by Mail page. We are working with the Center for Civic Design on improved VBM envelopes. Our contact in Texas with CCD is Asher Kolieboi asher@civicdesign.org.

Keep up the good work.

Right to a mail ballot may hinge on number

By Grace Chimene

Do you remember what identification number you used when you registered to vote? No one does, and that number should not prevent you from voting by mail. The latest mail ballot application debacle could be foreseen when the Texas Legislature persisted in making our complicated voting system even harder. Despite a smooth 2020 election, our Legislature enacted ever more restrictive voting laws.

The issue at stake here is a new required voter ID on the application. Voters must provide their Texas driver's license number or Texas ID number. If they do not have one of these, they provide the last four digits of their Social Security number. The tricky part is found on the back of the application in the fine print: "If you have been issued one of the required numbers, but it is not associated with your voter registration record, please contact your local registrar to inquire about how to add one of the required numbers to your voter registration record."

Applications are being rejected due to a new law that requires the voter ID on the application and the ballot to match the voter ID provided when voters registered to vote. Who remembers that number? A ballot by mail is mostly used by voters over the age of 65 and persons with disabilities. These vulnerable communities are going to be disenfranchised by this new law when many have been voting by mail for years with no problem.

John B. Scott, the Texas secretary of state, stated in a recent press announcement that he was "surprised" to learn of the massive rejection numbers reported by various counties. There should be no surprise. The League of Women Voters of Texas and many other voting advocates warned the Legislature about the anticipated consequences of the new voting law during the legislative session. The League also warned the Secretary of State's office many times since December about the lack of up-to-date voter education information on the secretary of state's website votetexas.gov.

The Legislature passed this law complicating our voting process. State leaders, such as the secretary of state, should not blame county election officials for the high number of vote-by-mail applications being rejected. It is the secretary of state's job "as Chief Election Officer for Texas" to assist county election officials and ensure the uniform application and interpretation of election laws throughout Texas.

Now, the voter ID on the application and mail ballot must match the voter ID provided when voters registered to vote.

We applaud a related new law that allows voters to track your ballot online. Yet the vulnerable communities whose applications for a ballot by mail are being rejected might find little comfort in the new online tool. The online tracker also requires voters to provide voter ID numbers and presumes internet service.

Blame your legislators for the confusing new voting laws. Blame the secretary of state for not updating the publicfacing votetexas.gov website. But don't blame your county election official, and certainly not the voters who depend on voting by mail to get their voices heard. Demand that state leaders review the mail ballot application process and provide explicit instructions to county election officials and voters to mitigate the massive rejection numbers. For now, share trusted voter education resources found at LWVTexas.org and call lawyers at Election Protection at 866-687-8683 if you need help or your application for a ballot by mail has been rejected.

2022 Impact Report

Together We Are Stronger

While the League's history has not always reflected this truth, we have learned over our 103 years that together we are stronger. We have learned that together our knowledge and experiences are broader and more profound, our voices are louder, our outreach is greater, and our actions are more powerful.

This year we seated our most diverse board of directors with a broad range of experience, skill sets, ethnicities, and perspectives. This strengthens our capabilities, decision-making, and outreach. Together we are stronger.

We are proud of our work in collaboration with other nonpartisan organizations representing a wide range of communities - Black, Latinx, people with disabilities, students, and rural voters. Yet we know we must expand this network to uplift their outstanding work and to reach more voters. Together we are stronger.

To fully achieve our mission, we must build upon and strengthen our commitment to Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion in everything we do. Our five-year strategic plan demonstrates this commitment. Because together we are stronger.

Voters Guide & VOTE411

In 2022, our nonpartisan Voters Guide was used over 1 million times!

We published four Voters Guides: Primary and Runoff Elections, Special Constitutional Amendment Election, and the General Election.

- Distributed nearly 80,000 printed Guides and 24,000 bookmarks in English and Spanish to over 160 public libraries and other locations for the Primary & General Elections combined.
- A printable PDF version of the Guide was provided via email and on our website for all four elections.
- The Guide was available on VOTE411.org in four languages English, Spanish, Simple Chinese, and Vietnamese.

New Vote By Mail Application

In partnership with the Center for Civic Design, we created a new vote-by-mail application with instructions that are easier to use and understand. We also developed new Voter Education material including videos to educate voters on how to complete the new vote-by-mail application and ballot carrier envelope. You can view and download these resources at lwvtexas.org/votebymail.

County Website Review

We completed two reviews of election websites for all 254 counties and the SOS! The first review was before the Primary Election and the second was before the General Election. We expanded our criteria this year to include changes required by SB1, the major elections bill that went into effect for the 2022 elections. Thirty-six counties received an outstanding ranking for the General Election. This is down from prior reviews likely due to the decreased funding and increased workload stress put upon our elections offices. Defending Democracy

Moore v. Harper Amicus Brief & Lawsuits

We continue to fight to defend our democracy even when the Texas Legislature is not in session:

- LWVTX joined LWVUS and 50 other Leagues in filing an amicus brief for Moore v. Harper, one of the greatest threats to our democracy in our time.
- We provided depositions on Texas Senate Bill 1 (SB1) and redistricting suites.
- We joined in filing multiple other suits, all of which suppress the vote of people of color, people with disabilities, students, senior citizens, or people who are economically disadvantaged.

Assault Rifle Webinar

With our state partners of NAACP and LULAC, we hosted an "Assault Rifles - What Can Be Done?" webinar with over 400 attendees from across the state. LWV Texas followed up the webinar with an Action Alert - Support the "Well Regulated" Part of the Second Amendment - calling for a special session. Begin: Mickey plays a few bars of "On the Road Again" on the harmonica.

Mickey: Hi. I'm Mickey Raphael, a proud, native-born Texan and a member of Willie Nelson's band for almost 50 years.

My band members and I are firm believers in this country's democracy and the freedom to vote. I come to my beliefs naturally. My mother was a life-long member of the League of Women Voters, a nonpartisan organization that works hard to promote democracy by defending and expanding the right to vote.

So, on behalf of my late mom, here's what I want you to know:

Election Day is Tuesday, November 8th. Texans will pick their U.S. congresspeople, top state officials, and folks in races all the way down to local dog catcher.

If you can, please don't wait until Election Day to vote, when the lines are long, and something may happen, like y'all get sick or a flat.

Early Voting starts October 24th. That's right, October 24th. Check out your county's election department website — or give them a quick call —to find out the days and times for early voting and where you can cast your ballot.

I appreciate you taking the time to listen to this public service announcement. And mom, thanks for making me a lifelong voter and a proud defender of our democracy.

Mickey Raphael - LWV PSA 2 - mail in voting

Begin: Mickey plays a few bars of "On the Road Again" on the harmonica

Mickey: Hi. I'm Mickey Raphael, a proud, native-born Texan and a member of Willie Nelson's band for almost 50 years.

My band members and I are firm believers in this country's democracy and the freedom to vote. I come to my beliefs naturally. My mother was a life-long member of the League of Women Voters, a nonpartisan organization that works hard to promote democracy by defending and expanding the right to vote.

Here's what my late mom would want you to know about the November 8th election and voting by mail:

Texans will pick their U.S. congresspeople, top state officials, and folks in races all the way down to local dog catcher.

You can vote by mail if you are 65 or older, disabled, or out of town during early voting and election day. But you have to apply.

To get an application for a vote-by-mail ballot, you can call your county elections office or print out an application from LWVTexas.org. Now, this is important: The application will ask for your driver's license number OR the last four digits of your social security number. The League of Women Voters recommends you give them both.

After you finish filling out the application, be sure to sign it! The last day your application can be received at the election's office is October 28th. But please don't wait until the last minute to mail it, because y'all know the mail can be slow.

When your ballot arrives, mark your choices, put your ballot in the ballot envelope, seal it, and put the ballot envelope in the carrier envelope.

Please fill out all that information they ask for inside the carrier envelope flap, including your driver's license number and the last four digits of your social security number. Then, go ahead and add your contact information in case there is a problem.

Then seal that carrier envelope in both places and sign over the flap before dropping it in a mailbox. Be sure your ballot makes it to the election's office by Election Day, November 8th.

I appreciate you taking the time to listen to this public service announcement. And mom, thanks for making me a lifelong voter and a proud defender of our democracy.

Dear ~~first name~~,

Early Voting for the 2022 Primary Runoff Election starts TODAY!!! Below you will find our recent press release about the 2022 Primary Runoff Election. Please share this information with your members and networks, and as always, continue to spread awareness about our Voters Guides and VOTE411.org, as well as voting dates, locations, and access to voting for everyone.

Thank you for your dedication to empowering voters and defending democracy! Together, we are stronger!

Grace Chimene President, League of Women Voters of Texas

League of Women Voters of Texas Another Election and VOTE411 Is Ready to Help Voters!

Austin, TX - There is only one week of early voting for the 2022 Primary Runoff Election and it begins Monday, May 16th! Election Day is Tuesday, May 24th, which is also the last day for Vote by Mail ballots to be received at election offices.

The League of Women Voters makes it easy for voters to compare candidates and find other voting information with their nonpartisan election resource VOTE411.org. Voters enter their address to see how runoff candidates for statewide offices from both parties responded to unbiased questions posed by the League. If there is a local League in the community, voters can also find information on local races.

"We understand that voters may be feeling a little 'election burnout,' this being the third statewide election in 2022, and it's not even summer yet! But VOTE411.org really helps you choose who you believe are the best candidates in the primary runoff election. We strongly encourage you to vote in this runoff election, and to take advantage of this trusted online election resource for all Texas voters." said Grace Chimene, president of the League of Women Voters of Texas.

During the Primary Election in March, the Vote by Mail process confused many Texas voters. The Secretary of State reported almost 25,000 ballots being rejected, and that number doesn't even consider those who tried, but didn't get through the application process. If a voter is eligible and chooses to vote by mail, it is important to remember:

- After completing the Vote by Mail ballot, the voter puts it in the ballot envelope, then places the ballot envelope in the carrier envelope.
- o UNDER THE FLAP of the carrier envelope voters should include the required ID information and their contact information! To be more certain that the ballot will be accepted, include both the ID information AND the last four digits of their Social Security number.
- OVER THE FLAP of the carrier envelope voters must sign their name!
- Ballots must be received at the county election office by 7pm on Election Day. If the ballot is postmarked by 7pm on Election Day, it must be received by 5pm the day after Election Day. Voters can mail their ballot by US Postal Service, Fed Ex, UPS, or DHL.
- Voters can now track their ballots at teamry-myp.sos.texas.gov/BallotTrackerApp.

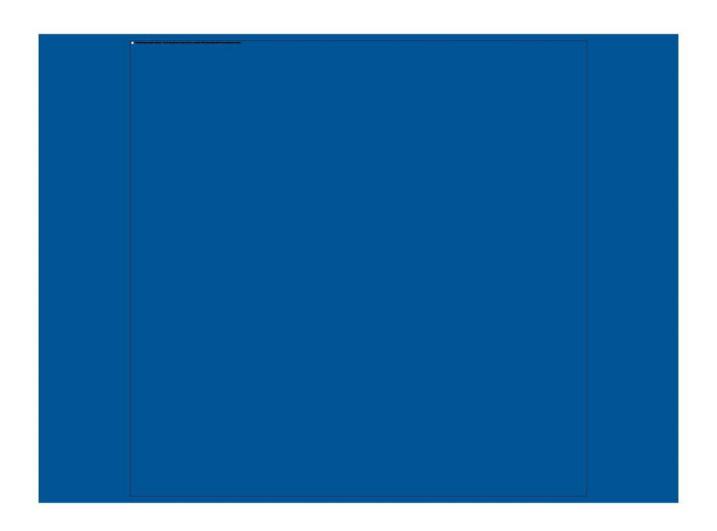

"Regardless of the challenges voters face caused by last year's changes to election laws, the League is determined to provide tools for Texas voters so they have the knowledge and confidence to vote. As a nonpartisan organization, the League does not support parties or candidates, but with VOTE411.org, we provide unbiased, understandable information about candidates and races." said Grace Chimene, President of the League of Women Voters of Texas.

In addition to VOTE411.org, a printable PDF version of the 2022 Primary Election Voters Guide is at LWVTexas.org. Please share VOTE411.org and the League's website with friends and family so that ALL Texas voters can be INFORMED voters!

The League of Women Voters is one of America's oldest and most trusted civic nonprofit organizations. Formed in 1919, the Texas League represents more than 13,500 grassroots advocates and 34 local Leagues across the state. The League never supports or opposes candidates for office or political parties. The League encourages the informed and active participation of citizens in government. The League also seeks to influence public policy through education and advocacy. Membership is open to people 16 years and older.

Sam,

Thank you for sharing the new SOS videos.

Regarding the Voter ID video...

#1. Use a photo of each ID. Include a red circle around the correct number or arrows pointing to the specific number to use.

Why: There is more than one number on the IDs. Indicate the correct number on the ID to decrease voter confusion.

#2. Encourage voters to provide both their voter ID and their social security number.

Why: The SOS encourages the use of both ID numbers. If the SOS must use words directly from the statute and are unable to encourage including both ID and SS#, consider adding a brief video of SOS Scott encouraging voters to use both the voter ID and the social security number.

Mythbuster video

1. The Mythbuster video is not helpful because it repeats misinformation.

Why: The beginning of the video shares incorrect inaccurate information for 7 or 8 seconds in a slow opening. This message may stick with the voter instead of the accurate information.

- 2. Use positive accurate statements such as "Find out who can vote by mail" or "Can you vote by mail" Why: It is best practice for voter education to always be written as positive statements of what is possible.
- 3. It is hard to read. The words are shared in a confusing manner. Add audio to reach more voters.

Tips for Voters - New Election Laws

Voter Registration

- Update your voter registration online if you moved or changed your name here. You will need your TXDL or ID Card, SSN, and Voter Registration Card VUID (Voter Unique Identifier) number. If you do not have your VUID number, you can find it at am I registered by putting in your name, county and date of birth.
- For college student voters living away from home, it is safest and easiest to register and vote at your college residence address.
- For voters without a residence, in the space on the registration form for residence address, it's safest to put the street address of an agency where you receive aid. In the space for mailing address, if you have one, put the P.O. Box where you receive your mail.

Early Voting

- You must be allowed to cast a ballot if you are in line before the poll closing time.
- Small counties now provide longer hours for early voting.

Vote By Mail (VBM)

- New! Who else qualifies?
 - Voters expecting to give birth within three weeks before or after election day
- Coming soon! VBM tracker and "Cure" process @ votetexas.gov
 - Track your VBM application and VBM ballot throughout the election process
 - Provide contact information on your VBM application so the county may contact you if you need to fix an error with your application or ballot.
- Voters
 - Request a VBM application from your county election office
 - Provide Voter ID number (TXDL, Personal ID, EIC Number or, if not available, the last four digits of SSN) on your VBM application and VBM ballot carrier envelope
 - Use the same Voter ID number on your voter registration application, VBM application, and VBM carrier envelope.
- Organizations and Leagues
 - Counties may not provide applications to organizations. But Leagues can print VBM applications to share with voters.

Poll Watchers

 Poll watchers are required to take training and sign an oath but have fewer restrictions on movement and observation.

Persons Who Assist Voters

- Persons who assist voters with a VBM application, VBM ballot, or in-person ballot must provide their relationship to the voter and address, and for the VBM ballot and in-person ballot, the assistor must sign an oath and mark that they didn't receive compensation.
- Persons who drive 7 or more voters who qualify for curbside voting must sign a form which is shared with the Secretary of State and the Attorney General's office.

Tips for filling out the ABBM application

Read all the instructions provided on the back of the application

Sec. 1 - Provide contact information so that the Elections Department can contact you with any questions to expedite application approval. Provide Your ID number from:

- A Texas Driver's License
- A Texas Personal ID
- An Election Identification Certificate, or
- If none of these has been issued, then the last four digits of your Social Security number

Use the same ID number on the Vote by Mail application and the ballot carrier envelope that you used for your voter registration.

Sec. 2 - Provide the address where the ballot is to be mailed.

Sec. 3 - Voters with disabilities check the box marked disability.

Sec. 4 -

- If you are 65 years or older, or are permanently sick or disabled, you can mark the box for "Annual Application".
- If you are out of the county (where you are registered to vote) during early voting and on Election Day, mark which election you are applying to Vote by Mail.
- Mark your party of choice to vote in the Primary Election and nunoff.

Sec. 5 - Don't forget to sign the application.

Sec. 6 - If the voter is unable to sign the application follow the instructions for witnessing a signature. NOTE: Persons who assist voters with a Vote by Mail application must provide their name and address.

Finally, mail your ABBM to County Elections Department* by stated deadline.  Once your application is approved, you will receive a Mail in Ballot to complete and return by Election Day.

Vote

Tips for completing and submitting your mail ballot

- Research candidates with the League's nonpartisan Voters Guide at VOTE411.org.
- Mark your ballot using a black or blue pen.
- Place your ballot in the ballot envelope and seal it.
- Place the ballot envelope in the carrier envelope, seal it, and sign the flap of the carrier envelope with the same signature you used on your ABBM application. Use the same ID number on the Vote by Mail application and the mail ballot carrier envelope that you used for your voter registration.
- Return your ballot, via USPS or other carrier, as soon as possible. Ballot must be received at the county election office* by 7PM on Election Day.

What if I want to hand-deliver my ballot?

- You may hand-deliver your marked ballot in person to the county election office on Election Day while polls are open.
- You must show your photo ID.

What if I decide to vote in person instead of mailing my ballot?

- Take your mail ballot with you to the polling station and turn in to the election judge. You will be allowed to vote a regular ballot
- If you lose or forget your mail ballot, you may cast a provisional ballot.

For more information, review the Secretary of State's information provided in your Vote by Mail ballot packet.

Persons who assist a voter with the Vote by Mail ballot must:

- Provide their name, address, and relationship to the voter
- Sign an oath
- Confirm that they didn't receive compensation.

Track your Vote by Mail Application and mail ballot online at VoteTexas.gov.

 court

What is the last day to register to vote in an election?

- Voter Registration applications must be at the County' Voter Registrar's office or postmarked 30 days prior to the election
- If your voter registration effective date is before Election Day, you may vote during early voting.

Who needs to complete a voter registration form?

New Texas voters and Texas voters who have relocated to a new county in Texas should complete a new registration form

How do I register to vote in Texas?

- · Register in person at your county Voter Registrar's office
- Register by mail by obtaining a form from your county elections office or pick up a form from your neighborhood library.
- Download, print, complete, sign and mail a form from VoteTexas.gov.
- Mail completed form to your county elections department.
- Volunteer Deputy Registrars who are certified by the county to help voters can assist by providing a form and submitting it to the elections department for you.

When will I receive my voter registration card?

- You should receive a voter registration card in the mail within one month. Check VoteTexas.gov to check status of your registration.
- New voter registration cards are mailed to registered voters every even year.

How do I check on the current status of my voter registration?

 Check your voter registration status at VoteTexas.gov or check with your county voter registrar.

I'm already registered. How do I update my voter registration?

- If you moved within the same county or changed your name, update your voter registration at VoteTexas.gov.
- When you update your driver's license online, you can update your voter registration at the same time.

Harris County Elections Administration has recommended putting both numbers on the application. I just called them. As long as one of the numbers matches, then the application will be accepted.

That is a good question.

I don't know.

I thought it was a good idea, but maybe he didn't understand the question.

I don't know what the legal answer would be.

Hmmm. Maybe call Election Protection to discuss this issue.

Dear Ms. Chimene, (Grace)

In an attempt to determine with which document my husband and I used to register to vote by mail I called the Harris County Registrar's office as per the webinar information.

I was referred to the Elections Administration Office at 713-755-6965. So, in counties with administration offices that will probably be the place to call.

Once speaking to an employee there, I learned that there was no initial application form we had completed because postcards had been sent to us to sign instead. I then asked what documents would be used to identify us as there were none on an initial application. She said they had our social security numbers elsewhere.

So we are assuming the social security number is the number to use.

I am curious as to why the lawyer was not in favor of using both numbers on the vote by mail application as our political party has been suggesting to precinct chairs that we recommend to party members to avoid having applications rejected. Please, advise.

Thanking you in advance, Annette Matthews

NONPARTISAN VOTERS GUIDE

TEXAS RUNOFF PRIMARY ELECTION >> MAY 24, 2022

Lieutenant Governor>> Attorney General>> Comptroller of Public Accounts>> Commissioner of General Land Office>> Railroad Commissioner>> State Board of Education

EARLY VOTING: May 16 - May 20 >> ELECTION DAY: May 24. Polls open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

>VOTING IN TEXAS PRIMARIES

The upcoming Runoff Primary Election is extremely important for Texas!

Primary Elections: Texas has open primaries, which means all Texas voters can participate. The Primary Elections include the Primary Election, which was held on March 1st, and this Runoff Primary Election.

- The Republican and Democratic Parties each choose their candidates in Primary Elections.
- If one candidate did not receive more than 50% of a party's votes for any race in the March 1st Primary Election, then the two candidates with the most votes must compete in this Runoff Primary Election.
- The Libertarian and Green Parties each choose their candidates in a party convention.

Since many districts in Texas heavily favor one party over the other, the primaries often determine the winner of the General Election! Even if you do not strongly identify with any political party, you can and should carefully consider the candidate choices and participate in one of the primaries or conventions.

Note: If you did not vote in the March 1st Primary Election, you can still vote in the Runoff Primary Election! But, if you voted in one party primary or convention, you cannot vote in another party's primary or convention. So, if you voted in the March 1st Primary Election, on May 24th, you can only vote in that same party's Runoff Election.

General Election: Voting in one party's Primary Election, convention or Runoff Election does NOT commit you to vote for a particular party or candidate in November's General Election. You can still vote for any candidate of your choice, regardless of party, in the General Election.

BE A TEXAS VOTER!

The League of Women Voters of Texas fights for the freedom of ALL Texans to vote. Your vote is your voice... below are the ways to exercise your right to vote. Whichever way you choose to vote, be sure to first check your voter registration status at VoteTexas.gov! You must be registered before you can vote!

» VOTE BY MAIL

If you applied to vote by mail...

- Ballots are mailed out 30 to 45 days before an election or 7 days after the county election office receives an application.
- When you receive your ballot, be sure to
 - Mark your ballot using a black or blue pen;
 - Place your ballot in the ballot envelope and seal it;
 - Place the ballot envelope in the carrier envelope;
 - Complete all information on the carrier envelope, including:
 - your contact information,
 - your voter ID number (Texas Drivers License, state-issued personal ID or election ID certificate), and
 - the last four digits of your social security number;
 - Seal it:
 - Sign the flap of the carrier envelope.
 - See lwvtexas.org for more details and helpful information.
- Mail in your ballot as soon as possible. It must be received by 7:00 p.m. on Election Day.
- Track your ballot at VoteTexas.gov!

If you want to hand deliver your vote by mail ballot....

- You may hand deliver your marked ballot in person to the county election office on Election Day while polls are open.
- You must show your photo ID when delivering the ballot, and sign a form.

» VOTE EARLY IN PERSON

- You may vote early at any voting location in your county.
- Find polling places at VOTE411.org or on your county election website.
- If you have a disability, you may request to move ahead of other voters in line
- If in line before the poll closing time, you must be allowed to cast a ballot.

» VOTE ON ELECTION DAY

- In some counties, you can vote at any polling place. In other counties, you can only vote at your precinct.
- Find polling places at VOTE411.org or on your county election website.
- If you have a disability, you may request to move ahead of other voters in line.
- If in line before the poll closing time, you must be allowed to cast a ballot.

» VOTE IN PERSON USING CURBSIDE VOTING

- If you are physically unable to enter the polling place without personal assistance or likelihood of injuring your health, you may ask that an election officer bring a ballot to your car.
- After you mark your ballot, give it to the election officer or hand it to a companion to deposit in the ballot box for you.
- It is best to call ahead so election officials will expect you!

» VOTE EVEN IF YOU ARE A SUSPENDED VOTER

You can still vote if your voter registration is in suspense! "Suspense" means that your county voter registrar needs to confirm your voting address.

» VOTE A LIMITED BALLOT IF YOU HAVE MOVED BUT NOT RE-REGISTERED If you have moved to a new county and have not re-registered in the new county by the registration deadline, you may be eligible to vote a limited ballot in your new county. A limited ballot is one that allows you to vote on candidates and measures that are on the ballot for both your former county and your new county, such as statewide and national races. Voting a limited ballot is only available during early voting at the main early voting polling place.

VOTER ID: WHAT TO TAKE TO THE POLLS

- Texas Driver License
- Texas Election Identification Certificate
- Texas Personal Identification Card issued by the Department of Public Safety (DPS)
- Texas Handgun License issued by DPS
- US Military Identification card containing the person's photograph
- US Citizenship Certificate containing the person's photograph
- US Passport (book or card)

Note:

- IDs may have expired up to four years.
- Persons 70 years or older may use an expired ID, regardless of expiration date.
- ID address does not have to match the voter registration address.
- The name on the photo ID should match the voter registration card or be "substantially similar." If the names don't match exactly but are substantially similar, the voter will initial a box for a similar name when signing in to vote.

Registered voters without photo ID, who cannot reasonably obtain one, may sign a form (described below) and present the original or a copy of one of the following documents with the voters name and address to vote a regular ballot:

- Texas voter registration card
- Certified birth certificate
- Current utility bill

- Bank statement
- Government check
- Paycheck
- Any other government document such as an out of state driver's license or expired Texas driver's license.

The form to be filled out by registered voters without a photo ID is a "Voter's Declaration of Reasonable Impediment or Difficulty". The voter must mark on the form one of the following reasons for not providing a photo ID:

- Lack of transportation
- Disability or illness
- Lack of birth certificate or other documents needed to obtain an acceptable form of photo ID
- Work schedule
- Family responsibilities
- Lost or stolen identification
- Acceptable form of photo ID applied for but not received.

VOTER HARASSMENT

- Election officials cannot question a voter about the use of an ID type.
- Poll watchers may never question a voter about Voter ID issues.
- If you are harassed, call the Election Protection Voter Hotline!

Trouble voting by mail? Blame Texas' new election law!

Texas has a new voting law because of the passing of Senate Bill 1. The League of Women Voters of Texas has been gathering stories from Texas voters about their experience voting in the Texas Primary Election on March 1st. 2022.

It's a tragedy for our democracy when state leaders choose to support a partisan agenda instead of voters when writing state election law resulting in a massive rejection of vote-by-mail ballots. The federal Voting Rights Act must be restored to ensure that every voter in Texas has equal access to the ballot box and is protected from unfair laws and practices that make it harder for people to vote.

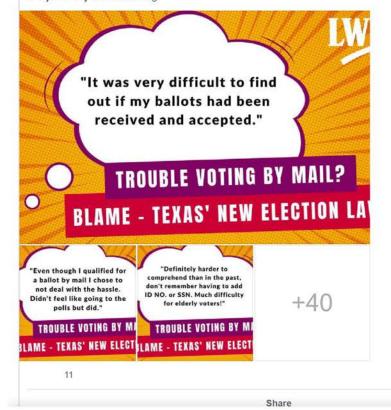

"For democracy to work, it must include all voices. SB 1 is an extremist anti-voter bill that raises even more barriers to voting and specifically targets vulnerable communities, especially voters with disabilities, voters of color, and elderly voters," said Grace Chimene, president of the League of Women Voters of Texas. "SB 1 is a violation of our freedom to vote, and we will continue to fight every attempt to silence Texas voters."

These slides contain exact quotes from actual Texas voters.

These quotes were copied directly from voter submissions collected by the League of Women Voters of Texas. Absolutely no editing was done by LWV Texas; therefore, there are a few spelling, capitalization, and grammar errors. Additionally, all identifying information was removed, in order to protect the privacy of those who submitted.

The small group conversation referenced here is the same as the conversation being discussed in Slack. Grace, please keep me posted on when your conversation with Whitney is, and then I will send out a doodle poll to find a time for the small group discussion after that meeting. I think for the sake of organization and alignment it'll be easiest to start with the one small group discussion that includes everyone who is interested. I'll be sure to loop Lisa, Cinde, and other members of the League team into scheduling for the small group discussion.

Thanks all!

I would be happy to join in the conversation regarding the design of the ABBM and the carrier-envelope. We are setting up a meeting with Civic Design now. You might also like to include Cinde Weatherby and a few others with the League that work on voter education and advocacy.

We know Whitney with Civic Design through our work reviewing all 254 counties during major elections. Our last review came out on Monday. There were 5 counties that still hadn't updated the ABBM application on their website and many more counties that don't even mention VBM. ugh.

We are also very involved in voter education. This past election we were intensely focusing on the VBM process with our voter education.

Lisa, great to connect with you. I'm a different Marisa from the one at project vote, my background prior to joining Impactual was in field!

I'm planning on sending out a doodle to find a time for the small group discussion that David mentioned, would you like me to send that your way once it's made?

Subject: Introduction

Marisa,

Hello, wanted to introduce you to Lisa Danetz w/ Brennan. Lisa – Marisa is with CSME and doing some work on improving the user-friendliness of mail ballot applications in Texas. It seems like she may be involved with a smaller group discussion on this. There was also some talk about improving the ballot tracker as well but I'm not sure if that is going to get wrapped into this conversation. At any rate, wanted to put this on your radar screen at an item of potential interest.

Thank you,

David

Hello,

has accepted the position of Digital Communications Associate for the LWVTX. Whoohoo! She accepted our offer of $46K/year. During the interview, I was impressed with her creativity, her enthusiasm for our mission, that she is self-motivated, and that she takes an analytical approach to her work. Her resume and cover letter are attached. Thank you, Oliver! Oliver arranged for us (me, Grace & Oliver) to interview two candidates. Grace and I both preferred He then checked references and gave both candidates a writing exercise to complete in an hour. As well as promoting the position, Oliver interviewed other candidates that were not considered for interviews with us. Some accepted other positions in the process, or wanted more $$, or were not a good fit for LWVTX. will start next Monday. We'll do a brief orientation in the morning and give her some training tasks - primarily Club Express. I've asked her to join us at the board meeting on Monday also so she can meet the board and see the scope of the work we are doing. Oliver, let's talk about the orientation/training topics you are going to cover. I am open Thurs morning and after 2 on Friday. Look forward to talking with you. Texas' New Voting Law

Assistant Director
REACH of Plano

A little about REV UP Texas

- History of
- Purpose
- Involvement in new Texas voting law

Mail in Ballot Changes

- New Law requires a wet signature (ink on paper) without allowing for a reasonable accommodation – this creates problems for some with disabilities
- Current law allows a witness to signature—for a voter unable to sign because of a disability—but relying on a witness removes a voter's ability to vote independently.

Mail in Ballot Changes

- New law requires a voter to include the last 4 digits of Texas ID or Social Security number on both the application for a maiol ballot and the ballot itself
- Must enter these same numbers to match when voting. If numbers on application and ballot do not match, ballot will not be counted
- Problem some voters do not know they must include these numbers or due to disability (like being in an institution) do not have access to the numbers so cannot provide this CA-APPX-2131

 OCAGH_00000284_004_Native

Online Portal

- Texas will establish an online portal for voters to track where their mail in ballot is.
- New law says that if voter's ballot is rejected due to signature not matching or numbers not matching they can fix the problem.
- If not enough time to fix by mail or email —the county may provide an opportunity to go to elections office and cast.

Receiving assistance at the polls

- Attendant or person supporting a voter must provide their name, address, Relationship to and if they are being compensated.
- Assistor must also take an oath under penalty of perjury and jail time to only provide assistance allowed by State law (reading the ballot, directing the voter to read the ballot, marking the ballot or directing the voter to mark the ballot) even though this limits the type of assistance available under Federal law.

Receiving assistance at the polls

 Amendment to where now attendants and caregivers can assist at polls.

Poll watchers at the polls

- Poll watchers were given authority to observe assistance given
- But, law makes clear that poll watcher cannot observe when the voter casts their ballot

Election Officials at the polls

- A provision in the new law provides that No local official can alter or change the Texas election law even when necessary to grant a voter a reasonable accommodation because of their disability
- An amendment was added that makes clear that qualified voters with a disability are still entitled to reasonable accommodations Native

None of this will take effect until December 6, 2021.

Voting By Mail

Applications: Article 5. Section 5.01. Section 84.001 (b)

- Wet Signature Instead of a photocopied or electronic signature, all applications must now have a 'wet ink' signature. This means that an actual, handwritten signature or signature stamp must be on the application.
- Voter ID Eligibility for vote by mail is the same but additional information is now included on the application. Voters must now include the identification number found on their Texas Driver's License (DL), Texas Identification Card (ID), or Texas Election Identification Card (EIC). If a voter has not been issued a Texas DL, ID, or EIC, then they are allowed to use the last four digits of their social security number (SSN).

- If a voter does not have a Texas DL, ID, EIC, or SSN, the voter can sign a statement to that effect.
- If the information on the vote by mail application has not been filled out properly (i.e., does not match voter's registration information) and has the potential to be rejected by the election clerk, the clerk must provide notice of rejection to the voter. The notice must include information about the ability to correct or add required information through an online tool provided by the election clerk.
- On Line Tool An online tool will be created that will record when each ballot-by-mail application is received by the county clerk/election official and if that application was accepted or rejected.
- If a voter requests a ballot by mail and then chooses to cancel the ballot and vote in person, but fails to return the mail ballot, the individual must vote a provisional ballot.

Ballots: Article 5. Section 86.002

- Number Matching On the exterior side of a sealed carrier envelope, voters must list the Texas driver's license, identification card, election identification card identification number (or the last four digits of their social security number) that was used on their ballot-by-mail application. There should be a designated space for this information to be entered because it will need to be hidden from public view.
- Opportunity to Cure If the Signature Verification Committee (SVC) or the Early Voting Ballot Board (EVBB) discover a defect in the way a mail ballot was completed by the voter (i.e., missing residential address, missing or concerning signature), the SVC or EVBB must return the ballot to the voter by mail if the committee determines there is time to cure the defect before polls close on election day.

If the Committee or Board discover a defect but determine there is not time to return the ballot to the voter by mail before election day, the board may, but is not required to, notify the voter of the defect by phone or email and allow the voter to cancel their mail ballot or come to the clerk's office in person to correct the defect.

O An online tool will be created which records when the ballot/carrier envelope is sent to the voter, received by the voting clerk, and if that ballot was accepted or rejected. Each envelope will have an assigned serial number and bar code or tracking number.

Voter Assistance

In-person voting: Article 6. Section 6. Section 64.009 & Section 64.031

- Limit on type of assistance Voters may now also be eligible for assistance if they need help with reading the ballot due to an inability to read the language provided on the ballot.
- People who assist voters must now provide additional information on the assistant form and oath. People will need to provide their name, address, relationship to the voter, and if the assister received any kind of compensation or other benefit for helping the voter.

The assistant oath now includes swearing under penalty of perjury and limits the type of assistance that can be provided to a voter.

• Curbside I f a person is transporting seven or more non-family members to early vote at the same time*, that person must complete a form giving their name and address and stating whether they provided any help casting ballots. (assisting)

Mail-in ballots:

Article 6. Section 6.05. Section 86.010-86.015

- Assistants must fill in the following information on the carrier envelope: Their signature, printed name, residential address, relationship to the voter, whether or not they received any kind of compensation or other benefit from helping.
- It is now a criminal offence if a person receives or accepts compensation for assisting voters. If the person assisting the voter is also the voter's caregiver or assistant, the prohibition does not apply.

Increase in penalties
Assistor oath or illegal assistance
False statement

Poll watchers:

Observing activity: Article 4. Section 4.07. Section 33.056-33.057

• Poll watchers are now able to sit or stand near enough to see and hear election activity occurring with the voters and/or election officers. However, poll watchers are not allowed to be present at the voting station when a voter is preparing the voter's ballot or is being assisted by a person of the voter's choice.

Reasonable accommodation or modification

Voter request for accommodation: Article 1. Section 1.022

No Changes New provision in law that prohibits election official from altering, changing or suspending any policy practice or procedure in law.

An amendment was added that specifically provides that nothing in election code prohibits or limits Voters with disabilities from making a request for a reasonable accommodation or modification to election laws or procedures.

Access Barriers & Issues Related to Texas' New Voting Law

Chamane Barrow REV Up Texas

A Little About REV UP Texas

Register! Educate! Vote! Use (your) Power!

Our Mission

Significant Barriers to Voting Already Exist

- Physically inaccessible polling sites,
- Election workers refusing to provide accommodations,
- Mail-in ballots that cannot be used by people who are blind,
- And many more.

Texas SB 1 Voting Law

Creates even more unnecessary barriers and silences the voices of Texans with disabilities and others, by placing illegal restrictions on our access to voting.

Mail in Ballot Changes

New Law requires a wet signature (ink on paper) without allowing for a reasonable accommodation – this creates problems for some with disabilities.

Mail in Ballot Changes

- New law requires a voter to include the last 4 digits of Texas ID/DL or Social Security number on both the application for a mail ballot and the ballot itself.
- Must enter these same numbers to match when voting. If numbers on application and ballot do not match, ballot will not be counted and will be rejected.
 - Problem some voters do not know they must include these numbers or due to disability (like being in an institution) do not have access to the numbers so cannot provide this.

Receiving assistance at the polls

- Another access issue is the restricting any assistance by personal attendants or other assistors outside of reading & marking of the ballot.
 - Must also take an oath under penalty of perjury & jail time to only provide assistance allowed by State law.
 - Must now also provide their name, address, relationship to & if they are being compensated.

Receiving assistance at the polls

These restrictions also cause access issues for:

- Deaf individuals using ASL Interpreter to access the voting process at the polls when untrained poll persons thinks that the interpreter is providing too much assistance to Deaf individual.
- There have been other issues in which an untrained poll person does not allow a person with hidden disability such as TBI, to be provided a requested accommodation from their support person because they do not believe the individual is a qualified voter with a disability entitled to a reasonable accommodation.

Other Access Issues

Some of the other access issues that have occurred as a result of SB 1 have included:

- Limitations on early voting hours and a ban on 24-hour voting.
- . The elimination of drive-thru voting centers.
- . The prohibition of mail-in ballot drop-boxes.
- . Limitations on the distribution of mail-in ballot applications.
- . And the needless creation of barriers for individuals with disabilities and others who have limited English proficiency, to exercise their right to vote, which goes against the principle of equitability.

Involvement of REV UP in new Texas voting law

This law violates the Americans with Disabilities Act and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and Section 208 of the Voting Rights Act by imposing voting barriers that discriminate against voters with disabilities and deny people with disabilities full and equal opportunities to participate in our state's voting and elections.

As such, a lawsuit was filed by many organizations including Rev Up Texas focused on overturning the suppression of the DISABILITY VOTE! in SB1.

Texas Voting Rights Advocates:

As we celebrate Martin Luther King Day and advocate for needed federal legislation to protect voting rights let us not forget the saying ALL POLITICS ARE LOCAL.

SB 1 is currently the law. REV UP Texas is part of the litigation focused on overturning the suppression of the DISABILITY VOTE! in SB1.

REV UP Texas and other disability and voting rights organizations told the supporters of SB 1 that they were making the Mail in Ballot process so complicated for eligible disabled and older voters that it would suppress the vote.

This is not a Republican or Democratic Party issue

They ignored our recommendations.

Unfortunately we are being proven correct. Mail in Ballots Applications are being returned at historic rates in counties all over state.

Attached is an information bullentin to assist eligible mail in ballot recipients to navigate the system. It has helpful links from the League of Women Voters and the Secretary of State's office.

We urge you to report any problems you may have in the Mail in Ballot process to the contacts in the Info Bullentin.

The next REV UP Texas Info Bullentin will be on the Mail in Ballot portel to track your Mail in Ballot.

Subject: The missing context in the debate about Halderman's Dominion report

View this email in your browser

Hi y'all.

Conspiracy theories collided in Georgia this week, resulting in additional confusion in a long-standing lawsuit over the state's use of Dominion voting machines. At the center of efforts by entities on both the left and right is a court-sealed report by University of Michigan computer scientist J. Alex Halderman claiming that the Dominion voting system has a vulnerability that could be exploited — but hasn't yet — to manipulate votes in a future election.

Fox News and One America News Network are now seeking a copy of the report, and this week the Atlanta Journal-Constitution suggested Georgia's secretary of state had ignored the report, leaving gaping holes in the state's election system. There's much, much more to the story. The upshot is that this lawsuit continues to be used today by those perpetuating Trump's Big Lie as evidence of their claims.

The lawsuit was initially filed in 2017 by left-leaning groups including the Coalition for Good Governance, to force Georgia to use paper-backed voting machines. At the time, Georgia was using outdated DRE machines. Then the state, on its own initiative, replaced the machines in 2020 with a paper-backed voting system built by Dominion. But the lawsuit didn't stop. It instead shifted to alleging that the new system was so insecure as to be unconstitutional.

The plaintiffs have not succeeded in convincing a judge of their arguments over the past four years, even when supplemented by Halderman's report. While U.S. District Judge Amy Totenberg has expressed public concern over the system, she has not been persuaded enough to, for example, force the state to use hand-marked paper ballots, as the plaintiffs have demanded. So far, Totenberg has not forced the state to make any major changes to its voting system as a result of the litigation, now known as Curling v. Raffensperger.

Experts who have reviewed Halderman's report, such as Juan Gilbert, the University of Florida's computer science department chair, have not found it to be nearly as dire as Halderman has publicly suggested. As part of the suit, Judge Totenberg granted Halderman unfettered access to the Dominion voting system in order to inspect the security of the machines. Because of his access, Totenberg sealed the report, making it available to only the attorneys on the case and the expert witnesses. And even though the state on Thursday asked Totenberg to unseal the document so as to clear public confusion, she seemed unready to do so.

"I'm unhappy about the course of political treatment of the report.... it's out of hand,"

Totenberg said in court. "But I'm not going to release it without seeing what is being proposed with redactions."

Still, the general contents of the report aren't exactly a secret. Halderman has long claimed that ballot-marking devices could be manipulated by malicious actors. In a brief no one asked him to write, Halderman made public a high-level summary of his findings in early August.

Marilyn Marks, the executive director of the Coalition for Good Governance who is among the plaintiffs in the Curling case, then distributed this summary to every county in Georgia by email the day after Halderman filed his report. Votebeat was provided with a copy of the email. She called Halderman's finding an "urgent concern," alarming enough for counties "to reconsider their use of BMDs this fall, and instead use hand marked paper ballots with voluntary robust audits." No county acted on her warning.

Despite Judge Totenberg sealing Halderman's assessment, the publicity campaign the plaintiffs have mounted over the report — which none of them has seen in full — has resulted in two media dustups over its contents, to the obvious discontent of Totenberg. The first was in August, when Halderman first publicized what he claimed were massive security flaws in the system, and then this week, when the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported that the state had done nothing to unseal the report or to act on its findings. This is the exact kind of speculation Totenberg sought to prevent when she sealed the report. While the report has only been read by Halderman, the lawyers in the Curling case, and other expert witnesses, the AJC quoted multiple people who have no knowledge of the report's details but who nonetheless implored the state to act. That's not the responsible way to present these issues.

The report, as far as is publicly known, does little to materially advance what Halderman has been claiming about ballot-marking devices for years. And, it's not a surprise that he found ways to infiltrate the system. Judge Totenberg gave Halderman complete access to the machines along with passwords, and his report indicates that he did his research over 12 weeks. If you gave me access to a bank for 12 weeks, handed me the keys, and told the security guards to stand down, I'm pretty sure I could rob it. This is an unrealistic threat scenario that ignores the existence of physical security measures, machine testing, and risk limiting audits.

"The security of the system isn't dependent only on the system itself, but everything that surrounds it. The seals, the padlocks, the cameras." said Tammy Patrick, a senior advisor at the Democracy Fund and former elections administrator in Maricopa County, Arizona. "If you leave the keys in an unlocked car and you're surprised I can drive away in it, that's not a measure of the car's security."

Dominion and the secretary of state offered similar responses when the debate resurfaced this week. In a statement, Dominion said the best way to review security is holistically—taking into account "procedural and technical safeguards," but that Halderman's review "did not take this approach." The secretary of state's office, in its statement, said the review was written "by an individual who is paid to espouse opinions supporting the elimination of electronic voting systems."

That's punchy — you might expect as much from a defendant in a lawsuit — but neither statement is altogether untrue. Halderman is being paid. His assessment was done with more access to the system than any bad actor would have, and has been reviewed by two state experts, neither of whom was persuaded that the state's system was at imminent risk of harm. Halderman himself has repeatedly and publicly acknowledged there is no evidence that the machines were manipulated in 2020.

Election security has made large strides since 2016, which reporters need to do a more fulsome job explaining. It is increasingly common for counties to conduct extensive post-election audits, which check for unexplainable discrepancies between the machines' vote counts and counts of the actual ballots. Election offices across the country have shored up chain-of-custody procedures for ballots and election equipment, and have phased out paperless voting machines almost entirely. States have also long conducted specific logic and accuracy testing for voting machines, and these tests are routinely performed. Patrick says that focusing on unrealistic cybersecurity threats is "disingenuous" and "diverts the energy that we need to put forth in getting productive policies in place, and further muddies the public's understanding of what good security looks like."

Allowing such unfettered access isn't without value: If Halderman had, for example, been able to affect the ballots in a way that could not be detected and prevented by safeguards like risk limiting audits or standard quality checks, these problems should be addressed. But neither the AJC article nor those who have seen the report assert that he found such vulnerabilities.

Still, folks are clamoring to get access to Halderman's sealed report. The state of Louisiana, Fox News, and One America News Network have all asked Judge Totenberg to see it.

Louisiana — which has already been denied access — says it wants a copy because it's considering buying a Dominion system and would like to see what the vulnerabilities are. Fox and OANN want it because they think it might contradict Halderman's testimony in defamation lawsuits filed by Dominion and by Eric Coomer, a former Dominion employee. In that case, Halderman testified in defense of Coomer and his work at Dominion — Coomer's work was high quality, Halderman says, and there is no evidence that Dominion machines were compromised.

Despite what Fox News's lawyers might hope, Halderman's positions in each lawsuit are not necessarily contradictory. It could well be true that the 2020 election was secure — as he asserts in the Fox defamation suit — and that untapped vulnerabilities still exist in Dominion systems — as he asserts in the Curling suit.

But this is not the only time right-wing spreaders of the Big Lie have embraced the Curling lawsuit to back their false claims. A week ago, Politico reported on the text of a never-seen Trump executive order that would have dispatched the military to seize voting machines. The order, dated Dec. 16, 2020, specifically references the Curling lawsuit in justifying the federal government to "seize, collect, retain and analyze all machines, equipment, electronically stored information, and material records" from the election. The order would have given the defense secretary 60 days to release a report on the machines' security — a move that would have thrown the election into uncertainty well into February 2021.

Unlike Trump's allies, we should resist falling into the logical trap of assuming that potential vulnerabilities in the machines mean they have already been exploited. We should also be clear-eyed about the link between this lawsuit and the raging fire of the Big Lie. David Becker, executive director and founder of the Center for Election Innovation & Research, says it is "simply a fact that then-President Trump used these failed claims to justify his failed coup" and his unsigned executive order.

"Whatever their intentions, it's undeniable that those who have brought recent claims in courts attempting to decertify particular voting machines they didn't like — all of which have failed — have found their claims and testimony used by election deniers who seek to undermine voter confidence and the legitimacy of the 2020 election and future elections," Becker said.

Journalists covering the Curling suit and Halderman report should always — every single time the case is mentioned — make explicit that the suit's arguments have been turned into a primary piece of evidence for Big Lie adherents claiming the 2020 election was stolen through manipulated Dominion machines. These details should not be drowned out by alarmist quotes, alleging vulnerabilities that no one else has confirmed. And they should also explain that Halderman's report was based on unfettered access to the system, which is not analogous to a real-world environment on Election Day.

It might be uncomfortable for many that a left-leaning activist group's accusations against Dominion — none of which have, so far, flown in court — were a basis for Trump's claims to continued power. But it is true. And now Fox and OANN are seeking the same sensitive information to potentially twist to their own advantage. This is a complicated mess, but it's important that journalists untangle this context in every story they write on the subject. Including anything less than this distorts the reality of the problem, and risks introducing unfounded doubts among voters about the security of their voting system.

Back Then

Since direct-recording electronic machines became popular as a response to the disputed 2000 presidential election, there have been folks advocating for paper instead. In 2003, Rep. Rush Holt (D-New Jersey) introduced a bill that would have required a paper trail in all federal elections. It went nowhere, and he introduced it again in 2007, when it, again, went nowhere. It received substantial opposition from others in Congress as well as state election officials. It was rejected by most Republican members of Congress as overtly partisan — sour grapes resulting from George W. Bush's victory. State election officials worried about the tight timeline, unfunded financial demands, and federal overreach. More than a decade later, most states have made this transition on their own.

Correction: Last week's newsletter mistakenly said the Texas Legislature passed its voting bill in the third special session last summer. It passed in the second special session.

In Other Voting News

- President Trump is redoubling his push for dropbox bans across the country, and a number of Republicans are <a href="https://hopping.on.org/hopping.com/hopping.c
- Attorneys for Election Systems & Software have informed the Republican-led election investigation in Wisconsin that they have no intention of complying with a broad subpoena for the company's data and information. In a letter to former Wisconsin Supreme Court Justice Michael Gableman, who is running the investigation, ES&S attorneys called the subpoena a "quintessential fishing expedition."
- Following false coverage of the Electronic Registration Information Center a nonprofit several dozen states use to help maintain their voter rolls by Gateway Pundit, the state of Louisiana has ended its use of the program. Gateway Pundit unleashed a fuselage of false charges against ERIC, including accusations that the program is a leftist plot funded by George Soros. In truth, it is used and overseen by more than 30 member states, including Republican-governed states such as Kentucky, Missouri, Ohio, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.
- Gjergi Luke Juncaj of Las Vegas, was criminally charged this week for making threats against an election administrator in Nevada. The man allegedly made repeated threatening calls, including telling the administrator she was "going to f—ing die" for stealing the election from Trump.
- After wavering due to cost projections, the Indiana Legislature has re-added a 2024 deadline for counties to institute paper backups to their voting machines. While the deadline is back, there continues to be no funding for the measure, and counties will be required to foot the cost on their own.
- The overwhelmingly Democratic Massachusetts House has approved a measure that would make vote by mail and early balloting permanent in the state. The state Senate approved a similar bill several weeks ago, which will now be reconciled with the House bill. The status of same-day registration, which advocates have been loudly asking for in the state, is less certain.
- Counties in Texas continue to report high rejection rates of absentee ballot applications due to the new law's ID requirement. Meanwhile, Travis County Clerk Dana DeBeavoir has retired after 36 years on the job. She's overseen a tremendous amount of change since she took the helm in the mid-80s, and even in retirement she's not leaving elections. "What really kind of tipped me over the edge is I'd really like to do international elections work and do some work nationally on elections, on audits and elections ethics," she told KUT.

- Attention South Carolina teens: Effective now, if you are currently 17 but will be 18 before Election Day, you can go ahead and register to vote!
- A bill by Nebraska Sen. Mike Groene (R-North Platte) would have dramatically shortened early voting in the state but fell flat on its face. Not a single member of the committee voted for it, and no one testified in favor.

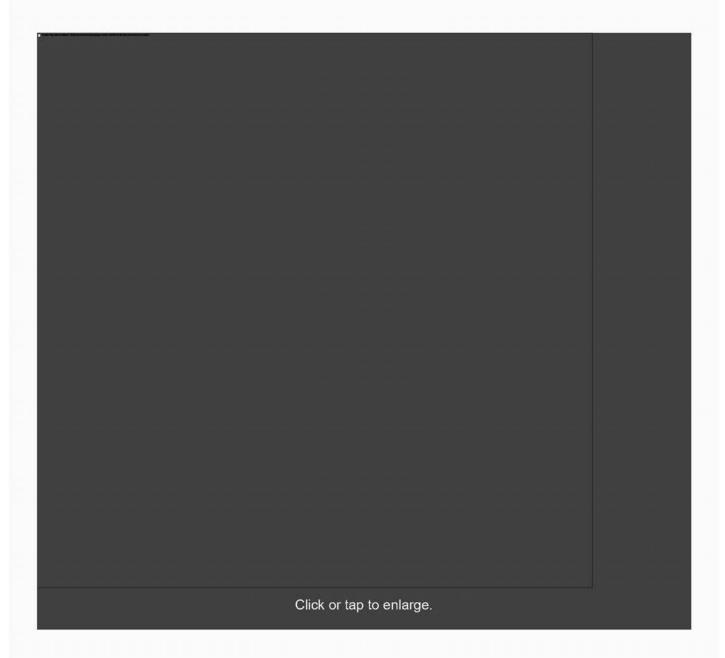

Newest Addition to Votebeat

Y'all, it is new intern day. Please meet Brianna Fisher, a sophomore at the University of Pennsylvania who is majoring in criminology with a minor in survey research and data analytics. She's going to be using all of those skills to help Votebeat journalists effectively use data in our stories and will be doing some reporting of her own. "I want to be able to use data, research, and legal experience to work on criminal justice reform — particularly related to prisons and sentencing," she said.

All of the intricate data in the voting world and its growing relationship to the criminal justice system, Brianna thought our news org would be a good place to grow. "I decided to come work at Votebeat because it is a great opportunity for me to help make election information and data accessible and, most importantly, fun to read!"

To be desired and the best between the second and Brianna is from Broward County, Florida, so she's well aware of the importance of election administration. This also isn't her first journalism gig : She, along with other staffers of the newspaper of Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida, were recognized by the Pulitzer Prize committee for their coverage of the 2018 school shooting.
Brianna will be keeping up our hobby section! Please submit yours . Her hobby? Dancing! "I danced for 15 years growing up," she said. "I took classes in every style you can think of, from ballet to hip hop, and even helped teach younger kids." She tried other sports, but nothing she loved quite as much.

Infographic of the Week

In honor of her hometown, Brianna's infographic of the week is a nifty look at where the good folks of Broward County dropped off their ballots during the Jan. 11 special election. As you can see, a Supervisor of Elections office at Lauderhill Mall and Tamarac Branch Library, were voter favorites. And shout out to all of you procrastinators — we see those final-day drop offs!

Happy New Year!

2022 seems like deja vu all over again.

Early voting Feb 14th (Gotta LOVE TO VOTE) - Feb 25th

Because of Omnicron we right now are promoting Voter Registration (have to be REGISTERED by January 31st). See below!

Monday sending out info bullentin on MAIL IN BALLOTS. You have to request a MAIL IN BALLOT by February 18th. All MAIL IN BALLOTS have to be received by 7pm on March 1st Election Day.

We have developed this general Get Out The Disability Vote (GOTDV) video.

https://vimeo.com/662752792

Right now don't have specific plans to share, but I know we will focus on EARLY VOTING and MAIL IN BALLOTS before and during EARLY VOTING days.

Let me know as your plans firm up.

Appreciate your doing this story.

People with disabilities, people of color and low income Texans have been targeted in this legislation.

REV UP Texans:
Happy New Year
Though the new Texas voting laws passed in 2021 have put new obstacles in our way in exercising our right to vote, REV UP Texas says:
Don't Mourn Organize and REV UP!
To "Show the Power of the Disability Vote" people with disabilities and our allies must REGISTER in record numbers for the March 1st Texas Primaries.
You must be REGISTERED TO VOTE by January 31, 2022 to vote in the March 1st Texas Primaries.
Though Texas does not have online voter registration REV UP Texas is working with Register2Vote for a simple way to register or change your address using an online process.
THIS IS HOW IT WORKS
Go to the REV UP Texas website www.revuptexas.org and click on the Register2Vote icon.
You can also use the link below:

Subject: The missing context in the debate about Halderman's Dominion report

No the projection of money about parties being which consecute support which can be consecuted by the state of

Hi y'all.

Conspiracy theories collided in Georgia this week, resulting in additional confusion in a long-standing lawsuit over the state's use of Dominion voting machines. At the center of efforts by entities on both the left and right is a court-sealed report by University of Michigan computer scientist J. Alex Halderman claiming that the Dominion voting system has a vulnerability that could be exploited — but hasn't yet — to manipulate votes in a future election.

Fox News and One America News Network are now seeking a copy of the report, and this week the Atlanta Journal-Constitution suggested Georgia's secretary of state had ignored the report, leaving gaping holes in the state's election system. There's much, much more to the story. The upshot is that this lawsuit continues to be used today by those perpetuating Trump's Big Lie as evidence of their claims.

The lawsuit was initially filed in 2017 by left-leaning groups including the Coalition for Good Governance, to force Georgia to use paper-backed voting machines. At the time, Georgia was using outdated DRE machines. Then the state, on its own initiative, replaced the machines in 2020 with a paper-backed voting system built by Dominion. But the lawsuit didn't stop. It instead shifted to alleging that the new system was so insecure as to be unconstitutional.

The plaintiffs have not succeeded in convincing a judge of their arguments over the past four years, even when supplemented by Halderman's report. While U.S. District Judge Amy Totenberg has expressed public concern over the system, she has not been persuaded enough to, for example, force the state to use hand-marked paper ballots, as the plaintiffs have demanded. So far, Totenberg has not forced the state to make any major changes to its voting system as a result of the litigation, now known as Curling v. Raffensperger.

Experts who have reviewed Halderman's report, such as Juan Gilbert, the University of Florida's computer science department chair, have not found it to be nearly as dire as Halderman has publicly suggested. As part of the suit, Judge Totenberg granted Halderman unfettered access to the Dominion voting system in order to inspect the security of the machines. Because of his access, Totenberg sealed the report, making it available to only the attorneys on the case and the expert witnesses. And even though the state on Thursday asked Totenberg to unseal the document so as to clear public confusion, she seemed unready to do so.

"I'm unhappy about the course of political treatment of the report.... it's out of hand,"

Totenberg said in court. "But I'm not going to release it without seeing what is being proposed with redactions."

Still, the general contents of the report aren't exactly a secret. Halderman has long claimed that ballot-marking devices could be manipulated by malicious actors. In a brief no one asked him to write, Halderman made public a high-level summary of his findings in early August.

Marilyn Marks, the executive director of the Coalition for Good Governance who is among the plaintiffs in the Curling case, then distributed this summary to every county in Georgia by email the day after Halderman filed his report. Votebeat was provided with a copy of the email. She called Halderman's finding an "urgent concern," alarming enough for counties "to reconsider their use of BMDs this fall, and instead use hand marked paper ballots with voluntary robust audits." No county acted on her warning.

Despite Judge Totenberg sealing Halderman's assessment, the publicity campaign the plaintiffs have mounted over the report — which none of them has seen in full — has resulted in two media dustups over its contents, to the obvious discontent of Totenberg. The first was in August, when Halderman first publicized what he claimed were massive security flaws in the system, and then this week, when the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported that the state had done nothing to unseal the report or to act on its findings. This is the exact kind of speculation Totenberg sought to prevent when she sealed the report. While the report has only been read by Halderman, the lawyers in the Curling case, and other expert witnesses, the AJC quoted multiple people who have no knowledge of the report's details but who nonetheless implored the state to act. That's not the responsible way to present these issues.

The report, as far as is publicly known, does little to materially advance what Halderman has been claiming about ballot-marking devices for years. And, it's not a surprise that he found ways to infiltrate the system. Judge Totenberg gave Halderman complete access to the machines along with passwords, and his report indicates that he did his research over 12 weeks. If you gave me access to a bank for 12 weeks, handed me the keys, and told the security guards to stand down, I'm pretty sure I could rob it. This is an unrealistic threat scenario that ignores the existence of physical security measures, machine testing, and risk limiting audits.

"The security of the system isn't dependent only on the system itself, but everything that surrounds it. The seals, the padlocks, the cameras." said Tammy Patrick, a senior advisor at the Democracy Fund and former elections administrator in Maricopa County, Arizona. "If you leave the keys in an unlocked car and you're surprised I can drive away in it, that's not a measure of the car's security."

Dominion and the secretary of state offered similar responses when the debate resurfaced this week. In a statement, Dominion said the best way to review security is holistically—taking into account "procedural and technical safeguards," but that Halderman's review "did not take this approach." The secretary of state's office, in its statement, said the review was written "by an individual who is paid to espouse opinions supporting the elimination of electronic voting systems."

That's punchy — you might expect as much from a defendant in a lawsuit — but neither statement is altogether untrue. Halderman is being paid. His assessment was done with more access to the system than any bad actor would have, and has been reviewed by two state experts, neither of whom was persuaded that the state's system was at imminent risk of harm. Halderman himself has repeatedly and publicly acknowledged there is no evidence that the machines were manipulated in 2020.

Election security has made large strides since 2016, which reporters need to do a more fulsome job explaining. It is increasingly common for counties to conduct extensive post-election audits, which check for unexplainable discrepancies between the machines' vote counts and counts of the actual ballots. Election offices across the country have shored up chain-of-custody procedures for ballots and election equipment, and have phased out paperless voting machines almost entirely. States have also long conducted specific logic and accuracy testing for voting machines, and these tests are routinely performed. Patrick says that focusing on unrealistic cybersecurity threats is "disingenuous" and "diverts the energy that we need to put forth in getting productive policies in place, and further muddies the public's understanding of what good security looks like."

Allowing such unfettered access isn't without value: If Halderman had, for example, been able to affect the ballots in a way that could not be detected and prevented by safeguards like risk limiting audits or standard quality checks, these problems should be addressed. But neither the AJC article nor those who have seen the report assert that he found such vulnerabilities.

Still, folks are clamoring to get access to Halderman's sealed report. The state of Louisiana, Fox News, and One America News Network have all asked Judge Totenberg to see it.

Louisiana — which has already been denied access — says it wants a copy because it's considering buying a Dominion system and would like to see what the vulnerabilities are. Fox and OANN want it because they think it might contradict Halderman's testimony in defamation lawsuits filed by Dominion and by Eric Coomer, a former Dominion employee. In that case, Halderman testified in defense of Coomer and his work at Dominion — Coomer's work was high quality, Halderman says, and there is no evidence that Dominion machines were compromised.

Despite what Fox News's lawyers might hope, Halderman's positions in each lawsuit are not necessarily contradictory. It could well be true that the 2020 election was secure — as he asserts in the Fox defamation suit — and that untapped vulnerabilities still exist in Dominion systems — as he asserts in the Curling suit.

But this is not the only time right-wing spreaders of the Big Lie have embraced the Curling lawsuit to back their false claims. A week ago, Politico reported on the text of a never-seen Trump executive order that would have dispatched the military to seize voting machines. The order, dated Dec. 16, 2020, specifically references the Curling lawsuit in justifying the federal government to "seize, collect, retain and analyze all machines, equipment, electronically stored information, and material records" from the election. The order would have given the defense secretary 60 days to release a report on the machines' security — a move that would have thrown the election into uncertainty well into February 2021.

Unlike Trump's allies, we should resist falling into the logical trap of assuming that potential vulnerabilities in the machines mean they have already been exploited. We should also be clear-eyed about the link between this lawsuit and the raging fire of the Big Lie. David Becker, executive director and founder of the Center for Election Innovation & Research, says it is "simply a fact that then-President Trump used these failed claims to justify his failed coup" and his unsigned executive order.

"Whatever their intentions, it's undeniable that those who have brought recent claims in courts attempting to decertify particular voting machines they didn't like — all of which have failed — have found their claims and testimony used by election deniers who seek to undermine voter confidence and the legitimacy of the 2020 election and future elections," Becker said.

Journalists covering the Curling suit and Halderman report should always — every single time the case is mentioned — make explicit that the suit's arguments have been turned into a primary piece of evidence for Big Lie adherents claiming the 2020 election was stolen through manipulated Dominion machines. These details should not be drowned out by alarmist quotes, alleging vulnerabilities that no one else has confirmed. And they should also explain that Halderman's report was based on unfettered access to the system, which is not analogous to a real-world environment on Election Day.

It might be uncomfortable for many that a left-leaning activist group's accusations against Dominion — none of which have, so far, flown in court — were a basis for Trump's claims to continued power. But it is true. And now Fox and OANN are seeking the same sensitive information to potentially twist to their own advantage. This is a complicated mess, but it's important that journalists untangle this context in every story they write on the subject. Including anything less than this distorts the reality of the problem, and risks introducing unfounded doubts among voters about the security of their voting system.

Back Then

Since direct-recording electronic machines became popular as a response to the disputed 2000 presidential election, there have been folks advocating for paper instead. In 2003, Rep. Rush Holt (D-New Jersey) introduced a bill that would have required a paper trail in all federal elections. It went nowhere, and he introduced it again in 2007, when it, again, went nowhere. It received substantial opposition from others in Congress as well as state election officials. It was rejected by most Republican members of Congress as overtly partisan — sour grapes resulting from George W. Bush's victory. State election officials worried about the tight timeline, unfunded financial demands, and federal overreach. More than a decade later, most states have made this transition on their own.

Correction: Last week's newsletter mistakenly said the Texas Legislature passed its voting bill in the third special session last summer. It passed in the second special session.

In Other Voting News

- Attorneys for Election Systems & Software have informed the Republican-led election investigation in Wisconsin that they have no intention of complying with a broad subpoena for the company's data and information. In a letter to former Wisconsin Supreme Court Justice Michael Gableman, who is running the investigation, ES&S attorneys called the subpoena a "quintessential fishing expedition."
- Following false coverage of the Electronic Registration Information Center a nonprofit several dozen states use to help maintain their voter rolls by Gateway Pundit, the state of Louisiana has ended its use of the program. Gateway Pundit unleashed a fuselage of false charges against ERIC, including accusations that the program is a leftist plot funded by George Soros. In truth, it is used and overseen by more than 30 member states, including Republican-governed states such as Kentucky, Missouri, Ohio, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.
- Gjergi Luke Juncaj of Las Vegas, was criminally charged this week for making threats against an election administrator in Nevada. The man allegedly made repeated threatening calls, including telling the administrator she was "going to f—ing die" for stealing the election from Trump.
- After wavering due to cost projections, the Indiana Legislature has re-added a 2024 deadline for counties to institute paper backups to their voting machines. While the deadline is back, there continues to be no funding for the measure, and counties will be required to foot the cost on their own.
- The overwhelmingly Democratic Massachusetts House has approved a measure that would make vote by mail and early balloting permanent in the state. The state Senate approved a similar bill several weeks ago, which will now be reconciled with the House bill. The status of same-day registration, which advocates have been loudly asking for in the state, is less certain.
- Counties in Texas continue to report high rejection rates of absentee ballot applications due to the new law's ID requirement. Meanwhile, Travis County Clerk Dana DeBeavoir has retired after 36 years on the job. She's overseen a tremendous amount of change since she took the helm in the mid-80s, and even in retirement she's not leaving elections. "What really kind of tipped me over the edge is I'd really like to do international elections work and do some work nationally on elections, on audits and elections ethics," she told KUT.

- Attention South Carolina teens: Effective now, if you are currently 17 but will be 18 before Election Day, you can go ahead and register to vote!
- A bill by Nebraska Sen. Mike Groene (R-North Platte) would have dramatically shortened early voting in the state but fell flat on its face. Not a single member of the committee voted for it, and no one testified in favor.

As we celebrated Martin Luther King Day and advocate for needed federal legislation to protect voting rights let us not forget the saying ALL POLITICS ARE LOCAL.

SB 1 is currently the law. REV UP Texas is part of the litigation focused on overturning the suppression of the DISABILITY VOTE! in SB1.

REV UP Texas and other disability and voting rights organizations told the supporters of SB 1 that they were making the Mail in Ballot process so complicated for eligible disabled and older voters that it would suppress the vote.

This is not a Republican or Democratic Party issue

They ignored our recommendations.

Unfortunately we are being proven correct. Mail in Ballots Applications are being returned at historic rates in counties all over state.

Subject: ADAPT/PACT and REV UP Texas organizing to GET OUT

THE DISABILITY VOTE during Early Voting.

The disability community has been organizing all year to empower the disability community to turn out the DISABILITY VOTE.

The outcome of the 2022 election will effect the lives of all people with disabilities regardless of age (physical, mental, cognitive, sensory and/or learning).

Life and death issues effecting us are Medicaid Expansion, unnecessary institutionalization, waiting lists for in home services, low wages for Community Attendants, mental health services, lack of inclusive education, discrimination in employment and voting.

Members of ADAPT/PACT and REV UP Texas will be at:

Austin City Hall Plaza, 301 W 2nd St on Mon, Oct 24th at 11:30am

"My vote is important. Our local, state and federal decision makers must make disability issues part of their agenda" said Nancy Crowther, PACT Organizer. "It is a matter of life and death for us".

Here is the press release and an article about the power of the disability vote.

Texas Disability Issues Forum

September 19, 2022 Austin, Texas + virtual TDIF.REVUPTexas.org

PRESS RELEASE

Yes, there is Power in the Disability Vote AND WE ARE HOLDING A FORUM TO SHINE A LIGHT ON THE ISSUES

REV UP Texas and the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, along with more than 50 Texas organizations, have joined forces to host the third Texas Disability Issues Forum, (TDIF). Both Democrat and Republican candidates for the offices of Governor, Lt. Governor, Attorney General, and Agriculture Commissioner are invited, though only the four Democratic candidates have accepted. The Forum will continue to invite participation from all the invitees.

TDIF is a non-partisan, one-day event, where candidates for elected statewide office are asked to specifically address the concerns of Texans with disabilities. This forum is not a debate and will be moderated by independent journalists and streamed live by our media partner, the Texas Tribune. Each candidate will be interviewed individually by an independent journalist from the Tribune. The Texas Tribune will also serve as TDIF's media sponsor and the live stream will be hosted on their website.

Now more than ever, it is critical that the Texas disability community get out the vote. Because the issues like affordable health care that covers pre-existing conditions and protects mental health parity, as well as Medicaid funding for in-home services must be addressed by our politicians and decision makers. It is critical that people with disabilities are supported so they can stay out of nursing homes and other institutions; and, barriers like long waiting lists, ridiculously low wages for Community Attendants, and cutbacks in funding for already chronically underfunded affordable, accessible integrated housing are resolved in Texas.

Even the access to vote itself has been attacked here in Texas. These are just some of the reasons why the Texas disability community is becoming more active in electoral politics. We need to educate candidates about disability issues and disabled people and our allies about the candidates' stand on these issues.

The 2022 Forum will be held on Monday, September 19. Registration begins at 9:00 am, welcome at 10:00 am, candidate interviews begin at 10:15 am and the event ends at 2:00 pm. Major TDIF sponsors include Amerigroup, Superior Healthplan, Molina Healthcare, United Healthcare and Secure Democracy.

TDIF will take place at the AT&T Conference Center on the UT campus, 1900 University Drive in the Zlotnik Ballroom. To schedule an interview, receive a press pass, get parking directions and more, visit:

Yes, There is Power in the Disability Vote AND WE ARE HOLDING A FORUM TO SHINE A LIGHT ON THE ISSUES

With little fanfare from the public and the media, the Texas disability community is quietly growing a movement to become more engaged in electoral politics at the national, state and local levels, especially here in Texas.

One part of this movement is the building of a diverse, statewide disability voting coalition that is a non-partisan partnership laser focused on registering and educating the disability community on important disability rights and services concerns; while engaging candidates and the media on these issues. Our most immediate goal is to get out the Texas disability vote on Election Day, November 8th.

It's been 32 years since the first disability civil rights legislation, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), was signed into law by President George H. W. Bush, a Texan of course. It is unconscionable that the disability community remains confronted with many of the challenges from 32 years ago; not only to the ADA itself, but to the foundation that the ADA was built on: the integration of people with disabilities of all ages into every aspect of community living.

Now more than ever, it is critical that the Texas disability community get out the vote. Issues like affordable health care that covers pre-existing conditions and protects mental health parity; Medicaid funding for in-home services so folks can stay out of nursing homes and other institutions; barriers like long waiting lists and ridiculously low wages for Community Attendants that further strangle the system; and, cutbacks in funding for already chronically underfunded affordable, accessible integrated housing mean growing numbers of the disabled face homelessness. Even access to vote has been attacked here in Texas.

These are just some of the reasons why the Texas disability community is becoming active in electoral politics. We need to educate candidates about disability issues, and disabled people and our allies about the candidates' stand on these issues.

To learn what major party candidates have to say on the most pressing problems from healthcare to elections to education and more, REV UP Texas and the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, along with more than 50 organizations, have joined forces to host the third Texas Disability Issues Forum, (TDIF). This is a non-partisan, one day event, where candidates for elected statewide office are asked to specifically address the concerns of Texans with disabilities. Democrat and Republican candidates for the offices of Governor, Lt. Governor, Attorney General and Agriculture Commissioner are invited. This forum is not a debate and will be moderated by independent journalists and livestreamed through our media sponsor and partner, the Texas Tribune.

Political education is a two-way street. Many politicians are simply unaware or unwilling to recognize this constituency and its issues for what they are. If you do not see or acknowledge something, it is unlikely you will address it. Many people with disabilities are unaware of a candidate's position and record of voting on our issues and so do not give it much weight when they step into the voting booth.

In 2014, the Texas Governor's race was very interesting to the disability community, because then Attorney General, Greg Abbott, who is a person with a disability and who had attacked disability issues as the AG, was running against a former State Senator, Democrat Wendy Davis, who did not have a disability but had supported disability issues. This race received national attention, but no attention on disability policy.

Because of this race, a coalition of Texas advocates led by the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities (CTD) and the newly formed REV UP Texas organized the first ever Texas Disability Issues Forum (TDIF). It attracted over 400 Texans in person and even more via the statewide livestream. The interest in this Forum was the catalyst for organizing an ongoing, non-partisan state voting coalition.

The second TDIF in 2018 followed the same format but added the candidates for the U.S. Senate. This Forum was attended by more than 400 participants and livestreamed across the state to Watch parties in every region, organized by disability advocates. This too was a success.

The 2022 Texas Disability Issues Forum will be held on Monday, September 19, from 9:00am to 2:00pm at the AT&T Hotel and Conference Center on the UT campus. To attend in person, to host a watch party or for more information, visit TDIF.revuptexas.org

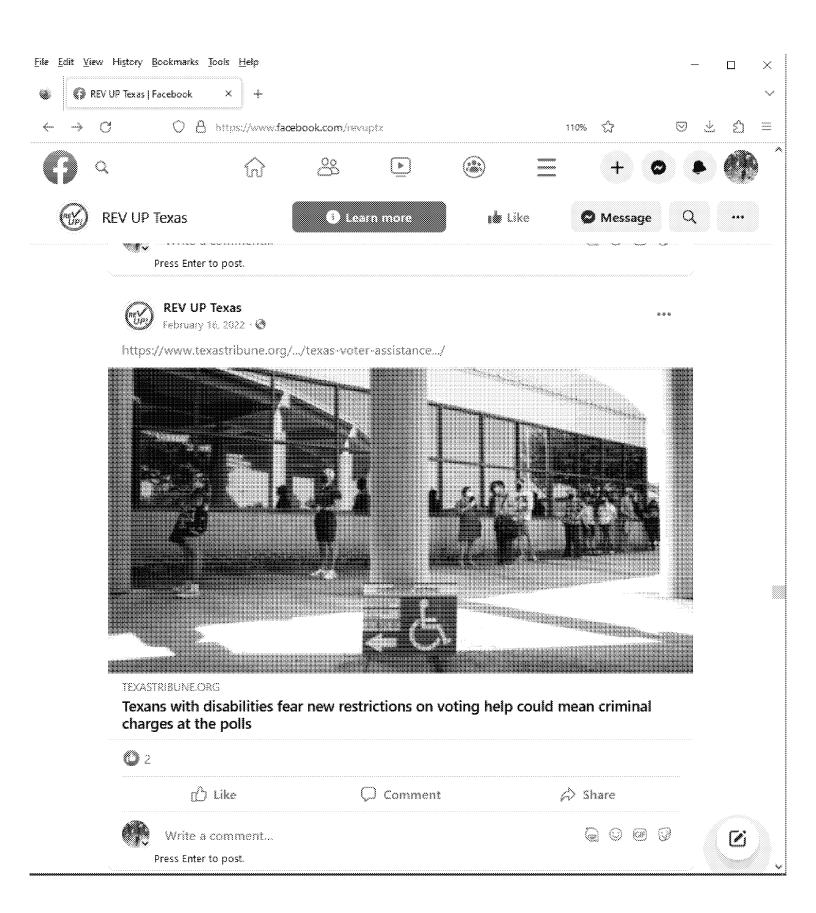

November 8th will be a test to see if our multi-year organizing can increase the number of people with disabilities and our allies who go to the polls and elect candidates that support disability rights and services.

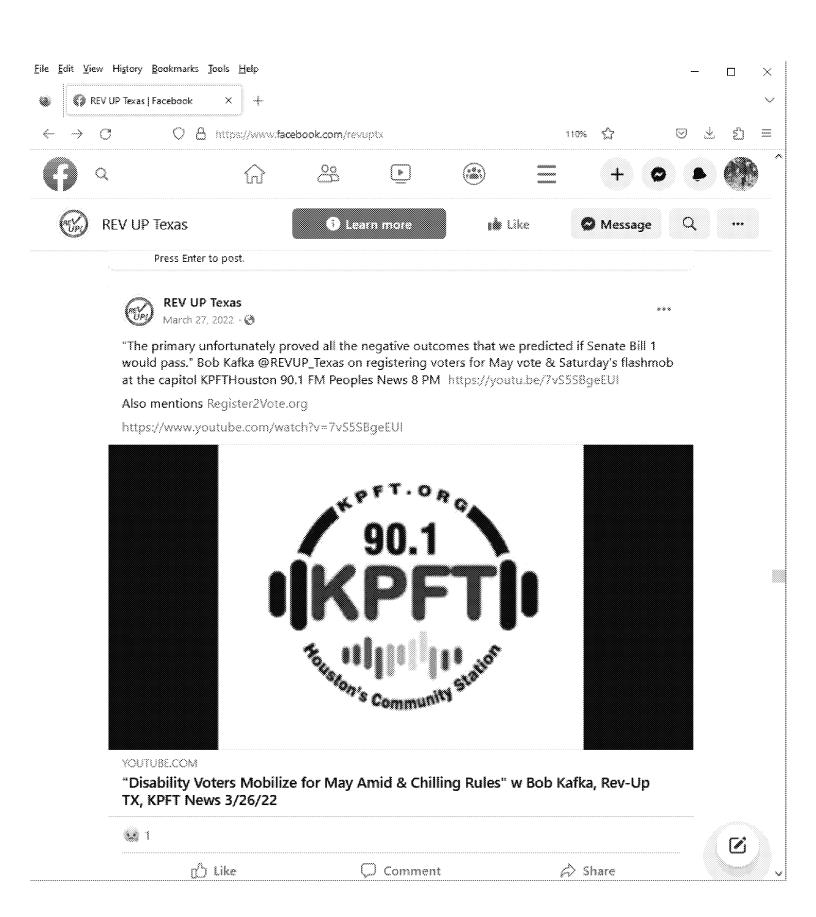

Now, and on September 19 is the time for candidates to speak to the disability community. We'll be listening.

Dennis Borel is the Executive Director of the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, a statewide cross-disability advocacy organization. Since 2000, Dennis is frequently called upon for research, policy analysis, and recommendations to the Texas Legislature and state agencies on issues surrounding disabilities.

A Disability Rights Activist for over forty years, Bob Kafka is Co-Director of the Institute for Disability Access, and an organizer for ADAPT and State Coordinator of REV UP Texas (Register * Educate * Vote - Use your Power). He has been the host and producer of the podcast Barrier Free Futures since October 2018.

Texans with disabilities fear voting bill will add more barriers to the ballot box

Limits on mail-in and curbside voting would be especially onerous to people in wheelchairs or those with sight and hearing impairments, advocates say.

John C. Moritz

Corpus Christi Caller Times

Published 7:30 a.m. CT Aug. 14, 2021

AUSTIN — Chase Bearden and Bob Kafka say they already face too many barriers to the ballot box, and they worry that the sweeping legislation that passed the Texas Senate on Thursday would erect even more.

Bearden and Kafka were among several people with disabilities who testified earlier in the week in opposition to the measure known as Senate Bill 1. They said proposed new standards in the bill for signature verification and restrictions on mail-in and curbside voting would make it harder, and in some cases impossible, for people like them to safely and conveniently cast their ballots.

"We're trying to get them, if they're going to pass a bill, to actually make it to where the disability community is on an equal playing field with being able to vote," Bearden, who broke his neck as teenage gymnast 28 years ago, said in an interview after his formal testimony before the Senate State Affairs Committee.

Texas issues arrest warrants: Texas Supreme Court temporarily blocks order protecting House Democrats from civil arrest

Much of the attention on the elections bill – which sparked Democrats in the House to first break a quorum late in the regular legislative session and then to leave Texas for Washington, D.C., when Gov. Greg Abbott called the first special session – has been on whether it would discourage turnout of minority voters.

That attention was front and center during the floor debate that began Wednesday afternoon and ended the next morning after a 15-hour filibuster by Democratic Sen. Carol Alvarado of Houston. Soon after Alvarado ended her talkathon, the full Senate passed the measure on a party-line vote.

Backers of SB 1, which Abbott, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick and virtually all of the Republican members in both legislative chambers support, have said the measure is need to root out and prevent election fraud and other political mischief.

The bill remains stalled, however, because most of the Democrats in the House have not returned for the second special session and the 150-member chamber so far has been a handful of members short of the two-thirds needed to conduct business.

More: Texas Democrat's filibuster of GOP voting bill ends after 15 hours; SB 1 passes

Kafka, a longtime disabilities rights activist whose neck was broken in a car wreck after he returned from his Army tour in Vietnam, said people in wheelchairs or who are blind or hearing-impaired often must rely on mail-in or curbside-cast ballots or on personal assistants at voting locations. Because the bill would curtail such options in the interest of cracking down on elections fraud, Kafka said, it puts the onus on people with disabilities to prove they are honest citizens.

"What's so outrageous is that without any credible proof of fraud, people with disabilities, veterans who may have disabilities – any person – has to jump through hoops," said Kafka, noting that the disabilities community includes people from every demographic group in the country.

"There are many people with disabilities who are people of color, African American, Latino, other gay, youth – we run the gamut," he told the committee. "So I just want you to keep that in perspective."

People with disabilities are emerging as a political force and will push back at any effort to roll back their growing clout, Kafka said. A study released last month by Rutgers University in New Jersey and the U.S. Election Assistance Commission shows that nearly 18 million Americans with disabilities cast ballots in the 2020 elections. That's up from about 16 million four years earlier, the study showed.

Ugly: One word to describe the partisan-charged special session of the Texas Legislature

The study also found that innovative voting options made necessary by the coronavirus pandemic, which in some parts of Texas included 24-hour early voting, drive-though voting and enhanced curbside and mail-in voting, contributed to the spike in turnout among people with disabilities. Some backers of Senate Bill 1 have said election officials in several counties went to far with such innovations.

"Turnout increases when people with disabilities have more voting options. It's not 'one size fits all," said Rutgers political science professor Lisa Schur, who is a co-director of the university's Program for Disability Research. "Many states made it easier to vote during the pandemic, which particularly helped voters with disabilities."

State Sen. Bryan Hughes, the East Texas Republican who authored Senate Bill 1, said he plans to work with advocates for people with disabilities to alleviate as many of their concerns as possible. During the floor debate, Hughes agreed to several suggestions from witnesses who testified in committee, including one that would establish on online portal to correct errors on mail-in ballot applications rather than simply rejecting applications that might have mistakes.

Bearden, who is the deputy executive director of the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, applauded such changes but said more are needed. One that would be especially helpful, he said, would allow people with disabilities to use a stamp if they have muscle mobility difficulties that prevent a consistent signature. That would preclude the need for an attendant in some cases, which would give those voters another layer of privacy when casting their ballots, he said.

"Most of the people who I do know that use them for their day-to-day life, it's in their backpack on their chair," Bearden said. "It's just like your ATM card, you're not going to just leave it laying around."

He also said that even though he opposes the bill in its present form, he still wants to work with Hughes and others in order to keep a seat at the table.

"We've all come to the conclusion they are eventually going to pass a bill, and we're looking to make sure that in the end it benefits the disability community and hopefully lessens barriers that are there," Bearden said. "I don't know if we'll succeed. We may end up with new barriers but if hopefully we can also then reduce others that have been there for a while."

TEXAS 2022 ELECTIONS

Texans with disabilities fear new restrictions on voting help could mean criminal charges at the polls

Disability rights advocates say the state has not provided enough guidance about the type of help people with disabilities can and cannot receive under new voting laws passed last year.

BY SNEHA DEY FEB. 16, 2022 5 AM CENTRAL

Voters wait in a line outside a polling location in Houston on Oct. 13, 2020, the first day of early voting for that year's election cycle. Annie Mulligan for The Texas Tribune

Sign up for The Brief, our daily newsletter that keeps readers up to speed on the most essential Texas news.

Nancy Crowther needs an aide around the clock to help her with meals and other daily household tasks. Her personal attendant of three years lives with her in Austin.

Crowther, 63, would also like her attendant to help her cast a ballot in the primaries. Crowther has spinal muscular atrophy, a progressive neuromuscular disorder that makes it difficult for her to reach the touch screen at the polling booth. She also uses a wheelchair that limits her mobility around polling places.

But even though Crowther says she trusts her attendant to respect her voter privacy, Texans with disabilities — and attendants who get compensation for assisting a voter — could face criminal penalties under new voting legislation.

The Texas Tribune thanks its sponsors. Become one.

"We don't want to jeopardize our attendants, but we want to be able to vote, but we need our attendants' help, so we're in a Catch-22," Crowther said. "It's a bigger swath of the voting populace that will be scared off and what will happen is that people will not vote. But I'm not going to give in to that."

As polls opened up for early voting this week, disability advocates say they still do not have adequate guidance from the state about new voter assistance rules and worry that the lack of clarity on what constitutes a violation might dissuade people who provide assistance services from helping voters with disabilities.

Republicans enacted restrictions last year on the state's voting process, including rules on how Texans can assist voters when casting ballots. Texans assisting other voters must now fill out paperwork disclosing their relationship, indicate whether compensation was provided and recite an expanded oath, now under the penalty of perjury, stating that they did not "pressure or coerce" the voter into choosing them for assistance.

Texans who offer or accept compensation for providing voter assistance would be in violation of the new rules, creating anxiety among those who assist people with disabilities as part of their job.

"There are voters with disabilities who use their personal aides or personal attendants to assist them in completing daily tasks, and voting is a daily task," said Molly Broadway, a voting rights training specialist at Disability Rights Texas, adding that she has already received calls from assistants afraid of incurring criminal charges for activities that are usually part of their duties. "It's a very present, very real need that exists."

Texans who drive at least seven voters to the polls are also considered assistants and must comply with new rules on compensation. Broadway said she has heard concerns from nursing home employees who provide transportation to polling places.

The new legislation also limits any kind of voter assistance to "reading the ballot to the voter, directing the voter to read the ballot, marking the voter's ballot, or directing the voter to mark the ballot." But voters with intellectual and developmental disabilities might need additional help, such as gestures or reminders about how they had intended to vote, to get through the process, Broadway said.

Broadway has instructed those providing assistance to sign the expanded oath, inform poll workers about the help they're providing to the voter and reach out to county election offices and request additional accommodations when necessary.

The Texas Tribune thanks its sponsors. Become one.

If an assistant appears to be breaching the new rules, poll watchers have been instructed to inform their county's election administration office. Upon reviewing the case, election administrators may reach out to authorities to investigate the case.

If there's evidence that an assistant was paid for their services, Potter County elections administrator Melynn Huntley said she would need to refer the case to the attorney general.

"We gather screenshots or copies of the actual papers that may have been signed or not signed, and then we submit them to the appropriate enforcement authority," Huntley explained.

Brazoria County election director Lisa Mujica said her office has trained clerks around the new regulations for voter assistance. If an assistant appears to be violating the rules, clerks are instructed to step in and educate them about the limitations of their role.

But Chase Bearden, the deputy executive director at the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, said that's part of the problem: Inadequate state guidance has created confusion among voters and leaves the responsibility of determining what may constitute a violation to election workers.

"At the end of the day, we aren't sure how this is going to play out," Bearden said. "We're kind of in the dark and are hoping that most election workers will be fair and want to make sure that people get the assistance they need."

The Coalition of Texans with Disabilities, Disability Rights Texas and other disability rights groups have said they have received little guidance from the secretary of state, which oversees elections, about the steps voters with disabilities should take if they need assistance that conflicts with the regulations established in the new rules.

The secretary of state's office did not immediately respond to The Texas Tribune's request for comment.

Broadway, of Disability Rights Texas, said she has seen more hesitation among Texans to assist voters with disabilities at the polling station than in previous years.

"It's really giving people second thoughts about whether they want to put themselves on the line of being seen as committing voter fraud," Broadway said.

Disability rights advocates also said they have already seen how other new rules have deterred folks from voting — particularly restrictions on voting by mail, which many voters with disabilities use. Already, counties are reporting that hundreds of mail-in ballots are being initially rejected because of new identification requirements under the new voting laws.

Turnout among voters with disabilities has increased in recent years, but disability rights advocates fear the new restrictions could undermine those gains.

Bob Kafka of Rev Up Texas, a grassroots organization focused on increasing participation among voters with disabilities, called the new restrictions chilling.

"In their ignorance of the fact that there is a disability vote, what they did will have a dramatic effect just by the nature of who uses mail-in ballot and who uses assistance," Kafka said.

Quality journalism doesn't come free

Perhaps it goes without saying — but producing quality journalism isn't cheap. At a time when newsroom resources and revenue across the country are declining, The Texas Tribune remains committed to sustaining our mission: creating a more engaged and informed Texas with every story we cover, every event we convene and every newsletter we send. As a nonprofit newsroom, we rely on members to help keep our stories free and our events open to the public. Do you value our journalism? Show us with your support.

Texas Voting Rights Advocates:

As we celebrate Martin Luther King Day and advocate for needed federal legislation to protect voting rights let us not forget the saying ALL POLITICS ARE LOCAL.

SB 1 is currently the law. REV UP Texas is part of the litigation focused on overturning the suppression of the DISABILITY VOTE! in SB1.

REV UP Texas and other disability and voting rights organizations told the supporters of SB 1 that they were making the Mail in Ballot process so complicated for eligible disabled and older voters that it would suppress the vote.

This is not a Republican or Democratic Party issue

They ignored our recommendations.

Unfortunately we are being proven correct. Mail in Ballots Applications are being returned at historic rates in counties all over state.

Attached is an information bullentin to assist eligible mail in ballot recipients to navigate the system. It has helpful links from the League of Women Voters and the Secretary of State's office.

We urge you to report any problems you may have in the Mail in Ballot process to the contacts in the Info Bullentin.

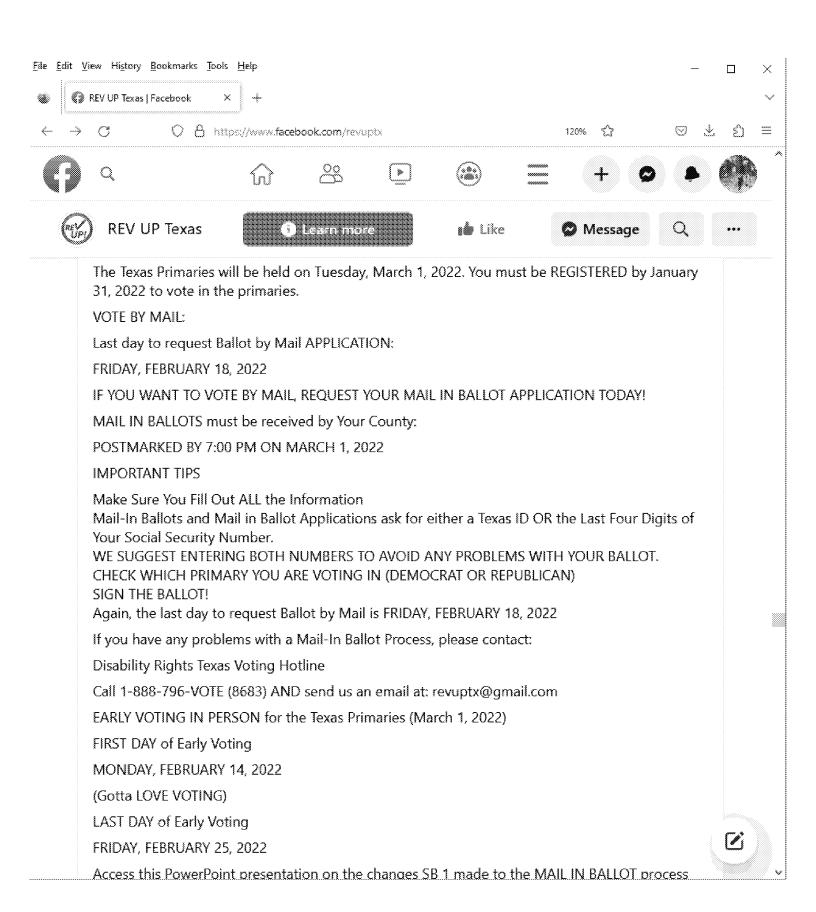

The next REV UP Texas Info Bullentin will be on the Mail in Ballot portel to track your Mail in Ballot.

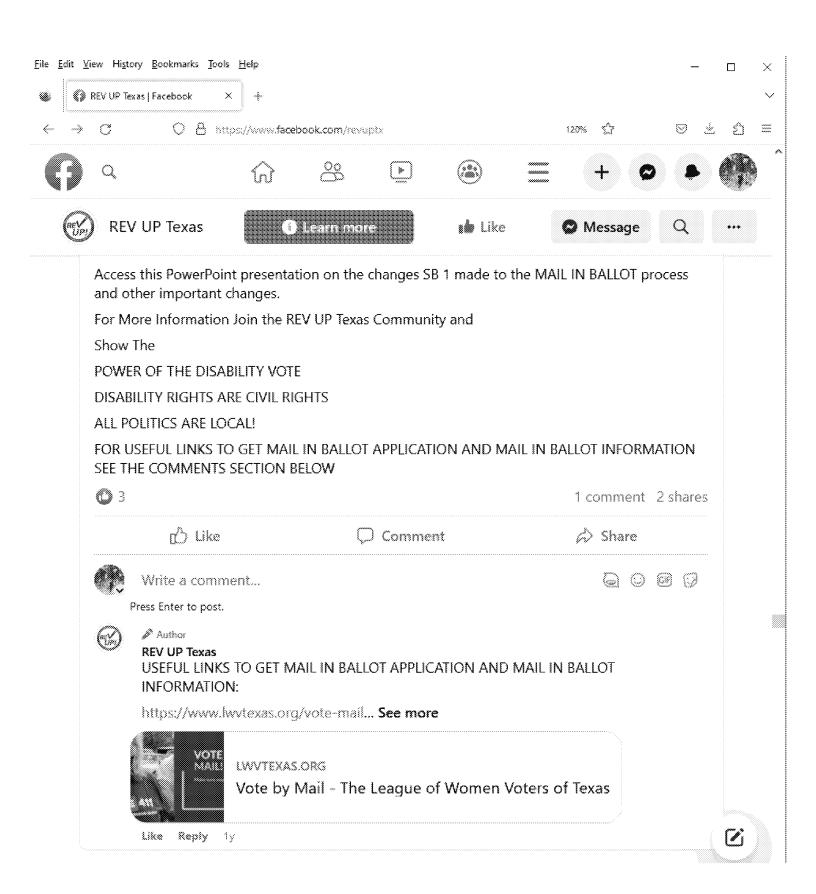

Don't Mourn Organize and REV UP

Mail-In Ballot Information and Important Voting Dates

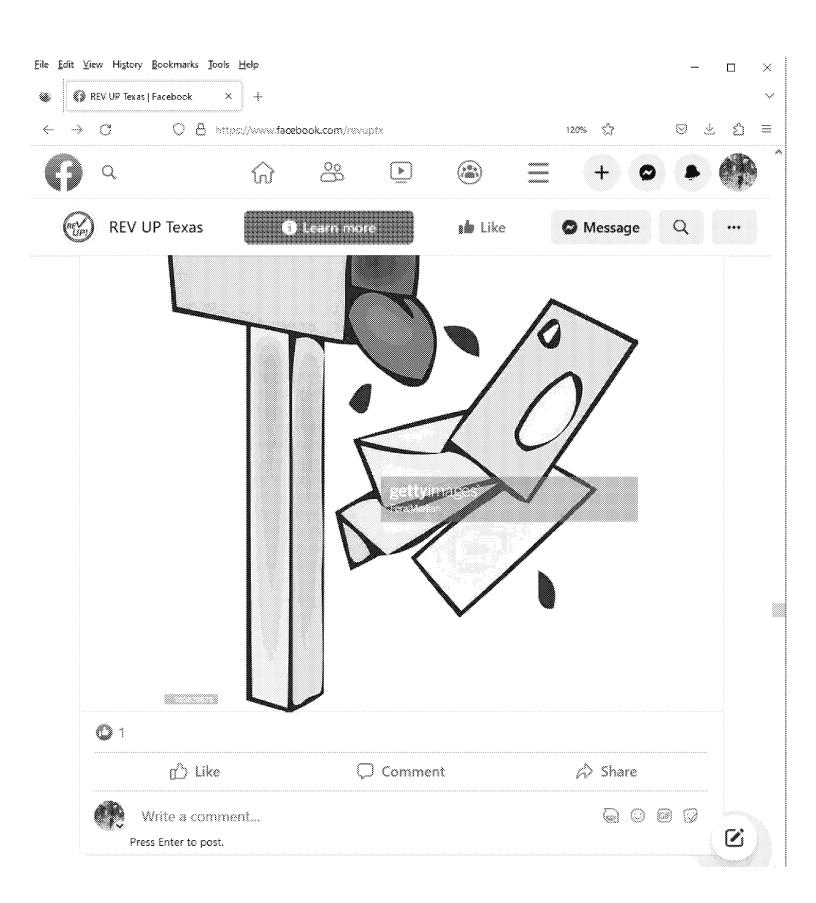

The Texas Primaries will be held on Tuesday, March 1, 2022. You must be REGISTERED by January 31, 2022 to vote in the primaries.

Exhibit 171

Texans with disabilities CAN influence the outcome of national, state, and local elections!

More than any time in memory:

- H Elected leaders and political candidates are recognizing more than 5.4 MILLION Texans with disabilities—from birth to advanced age—as a powerful, important constituency
- H Issues important to people with disabilities must be part of the platform for any candidate running for public office.

Join thousands of Texans with disabilities in this important and historic effort!

To vote, you MUST register! Use Your Power!!

The November 3, 2020, General Election will be one of the most important elections.

The disability community—people with disabilities, family members, attendants, providers, professionals, advocates and supporters—has a major stake in the outcome of this election.

The Disability Vote! can make a difference on issues such as:

- Adequate funding and coverage for Medicaid acute and long-term services and supports.
- Waiting lists for home and community services.
- Consolidation and closure of public institutions.
- Integrated employment at no less than minimum wage.
- Accessible, affordable, integrated housing.
- Adequate funding for quality public and higher education.

- Quality Medicaid managed care with strict accountability measures.
- Recruitment and retention strategies for improved wages and benefits for community attendants.
- Implementation and enforcement of the "most integrated setting" requirements in the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).
- Affordable healthcare for all, including pre-existing conditions.
